ACTED PROMPTLY

House and Senate Pass the Coal Duty Rebate Bill.

MILITIA BILL ALSO PASSED

Tillman Delivers a Characteristic Speech—Senate Amendment Virtually Puts Coal on Free List—Rapid Progress Made With Army Bill.

Washington, Jan. 15.—The senate Wednesday acted promptly on the house bill providing rebates of the duty on coal and passed it unanimously, without debate, a few minutes after it was brought over from the house. The militia bill also was passed with an amendment striking out of the bill the section providing for a reserve force of trained men, thus removing the objections made against it.

For an hour and a half Mr. Tillman occupied the attention of the senate in a characteristic speech, in which he denounced trusts and monopolies and severely criticised the attorney-general. The statehood bill was up for a short time, during which Mr. McCumber spoke in favor of granting statehood to Oklahoma, Arizona and New Mexico.

After a brief executive session the senate adjourned.

The bill reported from the ways and means committee Tuesday to provide for a rebate of the duties on foreign coal for a period of one year was passed in short order by the house yesterday by practically a unanimous vote, 258—5. The only opposition to the measure came from some of the members representing coal states, who expressed the fear that the admission of Chinese-mined coal in Canada would injure the coal industry of their states. The Democrats, though they all supported the bill, took the view that it did not go far enough, saying that coal should go on the free list, and when the bill came back from the senate with a provision which virtually placed anthracite coal on the free list, they applauded vigorously. The senate amendment was adopted without division.

Rapid progress was made with the army appropriation bill after the coal bill had been passed. The most important amendments adopted were to increase the number of officers in the signal corps by twenty-three, namely, one colonel, two lieutenant-colonels, four majors, eight captains and eight first lieutenants, and another to prevent the discontinuance of the army transport service without action by congress.

Death Penalty in Certain Cases.

Ionia, Mich. Jan. 15.—Representative H. E. Powell will introduce a bill this season, providing the death penalty in certain cases—the killing of a president or any member of his cabinet. If President McKinley had been assassinated within the Wolverine state, he says, it would have been only possible to confine his assassin in prison for life, with a chance of pardon. He thinks Michigan should have a law providing electrocution in Jackson prison, and has a bill so drawn.

The New Cup Defender.

Bristol, R. I., Jan. 15.—The raising of the keel frames of the midship section of the new yacht ordered as a prospective cup defender, was accomplished yesterday at the Herrshoff's, and it is now possible to obtain some general idea of the form of the craft. While her lines in many respects conform to those of the Constitution there will be less dead rise, less curve at the garboard, the bilges somewhat harder and a considerably flatter floor. The departure from the Constitution's lines is, however, not at all extreme.

Reinforcements Join Sultan.

Tangier, Morocco, Jan. 15.—The latest news received here from Fez is that large reinforcements have joined the sultan. They are from the tribes which were recently in rebellion and their arrival has delayed the departure of the imperial expedition against the pretender. The sultan and his court are confident of the success of this expedition.

Found His Frozen Body.

St. Louis, Jan. 15.—The temperature in this vicinity has moderated, but the frozen body of C. C. Harrison has been found near Edwardsville, Ill., where, it is believed, he was overcome Saturday or Sunday. Harrison had a painter's union transfer card from Jacksonville, Fla., and is said to have relatives in Kentucky.

American Consul's Wife Assaulted.

London, Jan. 15.—A dispatch to a news agency from Algiers says the wife of Daniel S. Kidder, the American consul there, was assaulted by footpads in the street Tuesday night. She was knocked down and robbed of her purse and jewels. The police are searching for Mrs. Kidder's assailants.

Three Men Were Killed.

Houston, Tex., Jan. 15.—In a freight wreck at Sour Lake station, on the Texas & New Orleans railroad Wednesday morning, three men were killed, another is missing and believed to be dead, and two others were badly injured.

Topeka Gets Fuel.

Topeka, Kan., Jan. 15.—The coal situation here is improved and the famine is partially broken. Fifty carloads of fuel reached the city yesterday and the local dealers are rushing it to their customers as rapidly as possible.

Now Ensign Harry White.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 15.—Adjutant-General Brown has issued a commission to Harry S. White of Benton Harbor, as ensign Fourth division Michigan brigade.

IN FISH HATCHERY

Superintendent of U. S. Commission at Northville Reports.

MILLIONS OF EGGS HANDLED

Large Amount of Whitefish Spawn Taken From the Detroit River—Shipments Made to Foreign Ports—New Substation at Charlevoix.

Northville, Mich., Jan. 14.—The report of Superintendent Frank N. Clark of the Northville United States fish commission station, shows that under his supervision 253,000,000 whitefish eggs were taken this season from Detroit river and handled in the Detroit station on Campau avenue; 78,000,000 of these were sent to other stations and the remainder are to be retained at the Detroit station until "eyed." Then 100,000,000 will go to the substations at Charlevoix, Alpena and Sault Ste. Marie, and the rest hatched at the Detroit station for planting in Lake St. Clair and Detroit river.

One million brook trout and 22,546,000 lake trout eggs have been handled at the Northville station. All the former and over 13,000,000 of the latter will be kept until March, and then 5,000,000 will be sent to the sub-stations for final hatching and the rest hatched at the Northville station for distribution by car. Twice the number will be hatched here that has usually been sent out.

The take of lake trout has been 23,456,000, 1,000,000 more than in previous seasons. Seven millions of these have gone to the Soo hatchery.

Eyed eggs to the number of 6,350,000 have been sent to Pennsylvania, New Hampshire, Vermont, Oregon, Wisconsin and New York. Shipments were made last week to the government hatcheries in Switzerland and Wales.

Superintendent Clark goes to Charlevoix today to make arrangements for the establishment of a new sub-station on the lifesaving station grounds there for handling of lake trout for planting in Lake Huron.

Crusade Provokes Lawlessness.

Calumet, Mich., Jan. 14.—Dennis Conway was set upon and brutally beaten Monday night while on his way home by four men, apparently under the influence of liquor, one of whom said as he passed: "That's the cuss. He's one of those federation men." The efforts on the part of the Civic Federation to suppress the illegal sale of liquor has provoked a great deal of lawlessness. lready one bartender is awaiting trial for assaulting a minister, and this affair has created intense excitement.

Frozen to Death on the Street.

Saginaw, Mich., Jan. 14.—Frozen to death in the streets was the fate which came to Frederick Dengler, an aged resident of this city, Monday evening Dengler evidently wandered off, or lost his way, for yesterday morning he was found lying on Wheeler street. When found the body was still limp, indicating that death had occurred only a short time before. Dengler had lived in Ann Arbor and Ypsilanti.

Delinquent Tax Lands.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 15.—Auditor General Powers has deeded to the state 30,000 acres of delinquent tax lands in Alcona county. These lands will be offered to the public at the next public sale by the land commissioner, and such as are not taken will then be subject to homestead entry.

Boy Sentenced For Stealing Coal.

Battle Creek, Mich., Jan. 15.—Bert Campau, a 16-year-old boy, has been sentenced to sixty days in the house of correction at Detroit for stealing a little coal from the city's yards. The reason given for Justice Wilson's stiff sentence is that the boy sold it to defray his own personal expenses.

AGAIN IN SESSION

Committees of Two Houses of Legislature Appointed.

SENATOR GOODELL ON DECK

Introduces Another Lowry-Ward Bill—Kelly of Muskegon Brings Forward His Old Bill—Ann Arbor Wants Privilege of Issuing Bonds.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 15.—The house and senate got away for a half hour session each at 9 o'clock last night. Senator Goodell, at the first opportunity, introduced another Lowry-Ward bill, with a few minor alterations, last night. The senator wants to tax mortgages on real estate and assess the realty on a valuation obtained by deducting from the full value of the property the amount of the mortgage. He also wants the mortgage assessed in the same township or district in which the property is situated. This is practically the same measure that Governor Bliss vetoed last session and against which he especially warned the legislature in his message last week. Goodell says the governor may change his mind before he is through with the bill this time.

Senator Kelly of Muskegon introduced the first bill in the upper house, an old affair of his, to grant the gas, street car and electric light companies of any city power to consolidate. The senate decided to hold daily sessions at 2 p. m. till further notice.

The senate committee list was also given to the assembly. Following are the most important committees:

Wayne county has come out with eight chairmanships and positions on other committees, though Representative Hunt is the only Wayne man to get a place on the committee on city corporations. Colby, Ashley, Duncan, Ferry, Batchelder, Hunt, Denby of Detroit and Neal of Northville drew the plums. Kent county gets four chairmanships out of five representatives.

Representative Whitaker of Washtenaw gave notice of a bill to authorize the city of Ann Arbor to issue bonds for the payment of old indebtedness. The proposed issue amounts to $40,000, $4,000 a year, to run ten years, interest not to exceed 4 per cent.

DECOYED TO U. S.

Traffic in Alien Women and Girls For Immoral Purposes.

INVESTIGATION TO BE MADE

Women Inspectors Will Board Incoming Ships and Give Advise to Ignorant Ones—Persons Will Be Appointed to Perform the Duties.

Washington, Jan. 15.—The treasury department has information which leads to the conclusion that to a limited extent, at least, alien girls and women are being decoyed to this country for immoral purposes. With a view to ascertaining the exact facts, the department has decided to appoint a number of women inspectors for employment at the port of New York, whose duty it will be to board all incoming steamers and make investigation into suspicious cases in the first and second cabins and to give needful information and advice to those who may be ignorant of the real character of the houses in which they may have been promised honest employment.

As a preliminary step in this direction the department yesterday made inquiry of the civil service commission as to whether there was at present an eligible list from which these appointments could be made, and if not whether the department could appoint such women inspectors without a competitive examination. The compensation to be allowed will be $1,200 a year. The duties performed will be of a difficult and frequently of an unpleasant character, as the inspectors will be required to meet and board all the incoming steamers from revenue cutters at all hours of the day and in all kinds of weather. The department is taking this step realizing that its complete success is somewhat doubtful, but it is felt that the situation seems to warrant the experiment.

Venezuela Orders a Forced Loan.

Willemstad, Island of Curacao, Jan. 15.—It has been learned here that the Venezuelan government has ordered a forced loan of $92,400, being one-quarter of the total loan contemplated. The loan is obligatory on all Venezuelan merchants, traders and bankers. Foreigners are exempt, but they are courteously asked to contribute. The government proposes to repay this loan when the country is at peace by permitting the subscribers to it to retain 10 per cent of imposts levied at the La Guaira custom house upon goods they import until they shall be reimbursed. Owing to the scarcity of money in Venezuela it is not believed here that this loan can be subscribed.

Believes It a Double Murder.

Carbondale, Ill., Jan. 15.—Developments at West End, where the 9-year-old son of Frank Stucker is alleged to have killed his mother and then killed himself, point to a double murder and the exoneration of the boy. Notwithstanding that the mother, in a statement an hour before death, said the son was her slayer, the members of the coroner's jury yesterday after being discharged said unanimously that the child, in their opinion, was not guilty. Opinion is general that an unknown third person is guilty.

Great Storm Wrought Havoc.

Victoria, B. C., Jan. 15.—The steamer Tacoma, which arrived yesterday from the Orient, reports that during a great storm at Hakodate, Japan, on Dec. 23, the steamer Kwanno Maru broke adrift and collided with nine vessels, badly damaging three steamers. The steamer then went ashore herself. Several other collisions were reported and a number of junks were wrecked off shore, with heavy loss of life.

Negroes Murdered in Jail.

Angleton, Tex., Jan. 15.—Late Tuesday night several men entered a cell of the county jail in which Ranson O'Neal and Charles Tunstall were confined, with a number of other negroes, and shot the two men to death. The other prisoners were warned to cover their heads with blankets, which they did. The bed clothing of the cots occupied by the negroes caught fire and O'Neal had an arm and a leg burned off. The negroes were charged with the murder of County Attorney E. C. Smith at Columbia several weeks ago.

Hot Springs, Ark., Jan. 15.—"Young Corbett," the featherweight champion, was given the decision over Austin Rice of New London, Conn., last night in the eighteenth round of what was to have been a twenty-round contest before the Whittington Park Athletic association. The fight was not to a finish, Rice staying full seventeen rounds.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

In Bed Four Weeks with LaGrippe.

We have received the following letter from Mr. Rey Kemp, of Angola, Ind. "I was in bed four weeks with lagrippe and I tried many remedies and spent considerable for treatment with physicians, but I received no relief until I tried Foley's Honey and Tar. Two small bottles of this medicine cured me and I now use it exclusively in my family." Take no substitutes. J. J. Orr.

CHAPTER II.

THE BLACKSMITH AND [illegible]

ON a road leading fro[illegible] [illegible]elty of Perm toward the [illegible] the south there st[illegible] rude cluster of buildin[illegible] of them old and in a poor state of repair. This collection of huts was the home and forge of the Paulpoffs, [illegible] workers.

Here worked old Michael Paulpoff and his son Vladimir, and [illegible] been to this uninviting place th[illegible] Frances Gordon had come to make [illegible] acquaintance of the young [illegible].

The huts and the surrou[illegible] were rapidly growing even less [illegible] for nothing was being done now [illegible] anything in repair.

A collection of household goods, over which old Mamma Paulpoff watched carefully, gave evidence that the family were about to remove themselves and their belongings to another place.

But still the old man and the young one were at work. The blows that Vladimir struck were tremendous. The iron under his hammer bent and flattened as the sparks shot like fireworks to the far corners of the place. There was a gay laugh on his handsome face—a face that was almost childlike in its simplicity and guilelessness.

"Oh, that will be a happy day, Papa Paulpoff!" the young man said gleefully, plunging his tongs into the white fire and withdrawing a bar of iron.

"What will?" asked the old man, looking sidewise at his son, but continuing his work.

"The day I can take you and the little mother to a better home."

"We have been happy here," replied old Papa Paulpoff, looking round at the dingy interior.

"Yes, we have been happy—we shall always be happy, for we are simple and require little. But with greater comfort and more money greater happiness ought to come. It is fine to feel yourself growing to be somebody in the world—to feel yourself expand, broaden. It is study that does it, and work. I think the knowledge gives me more pleasure than the wealth. But we also need the wealth."

The old man sighed.

"Yes, that is good, that knowledge. But you will grow away from us. You will perhaps marry that American girl, and she would not like our simple ways."

The hammer in Vladimir's hand came down with redoubled force.

"What is that you say—our Vladimir talking of marrying?" asked the tremulous voice of Mrs. Paulpoff. "I came to say that the meal is ready, and I find—what do I find?"

"Oh, Papa Paulpoff is dreaming one of his dreams," said Vladimir, with a gay laugh.

"But is it not so, old woman?" asked Papa Paulpoff. "Is it not quite possible that our Vladimir may marry that handsome American girl?"

"I have seen it so," answered the old woman. "It seems that no young woman would take this interest if she did not love"—

"Oh, nonsense!" cried Vladimir. "We are friends. She is good. I admire. Why, I could almost worship her, but I am a peasant. She is"—

There came the sound of cursing outside and the fall of a horse's hoofs. A shout took the old man to the door.

"Curses upon this beast!" came an angry voice as a man about thirty-five, clad in a neat riding suit, entered the room striking his high boottops with his whip. "I have just been thrown. In some mysterious manner my horse, who never stumbles, caught his foot in something, tore loose his shoe and hurled me to the ground. The horse is uninjured, but he has lost the shoe. I heard the sound of a smithy and came to you for assistance. I must reach Graslov tonight, and the delay is serious."

"It is long since we were mere horseshoers," said the old man. "The railroad"—

"But surely you can make a shoe and put it on. I must go forward, and I do not wish to lame this valuable horse."

"Certainly, we will shoe the horse," put in Vladimir, whose kind heart could never refuse any request that was reasonable and proper. "I will attend to it at once."

"But the meal is waiting," said the old woman.

"The meal is but a short distance, and Graslov is far," said Vladimir. "I will shoe the horse and permit the prince to proceed."

"How did you know that I was a prince?" asked the stranger, looking about him with a keen eye that was full of inquiry.

"The horse is of the herd at Graslov, the seat of the Neslerovs," was the answer. "I know the herd and think I have shod this very horse before."

"Good! That is better than putting him into the hands of a stranger," said the rider. "Is your name Paulpoff?"

"It is. I am Vladimir Paulpoff. The little father here is Michael."

"Ah, I have heard of you. You have guessed correctly. I am a prince. My steward, who has charge of my estate while I am away in Siberia, has told me of the giant who is growing rich working for the railroad. It is said that you can bend an iron bar with your hands."

Vladimir in response picked up an iron bar about four feet long and an inch thick and bent it double with no apparent effort.

"Good God!" exclaimed the prince. "Are you that powerful?"

"We acquire muscle in this work," Vladimir answered, "and I was born powerful."

A look of wonder had spread over the face of the prince. He sat upon a rude stool while the other two began to prepare for shoeing the horse. The fine animal was brought inside, and he, like his noble master, seemed surprised at his surroundings.

The old woman, patient now under the rebuke of Vladimir, stood waiting.

"This is not much of a place for successful men," said Neslerov, looking around him.

"Ho!" chuckled the old man. "You have come too soon. See, nothing is being done. We are about to leave this place for a spot nearer the railway."

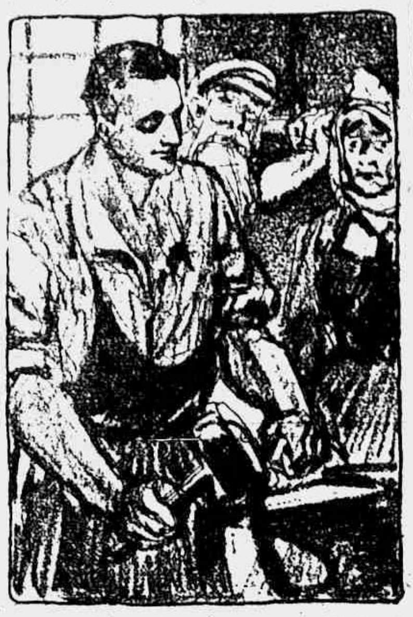
"Business is not good, then?"

"Oh, is it not?" said Vladimir. "When one has a powerful friend to send the ironwork to him, it is easy to get along. We shall have a fine shop and ten men [illegible] and my father shall [illegible] I shall make money for [illegible]"

"Ah! Then I suppose you will be getting married?"

"That is something I have not thought of. I do not know."

"Somebody else knows," chuckled the doting Papa Paulpoff. "There is an American girl who thinks well of our"—



"What is it that you say—our Vladimir talking of marrying?"

"Hush!" exclaimed Vladimir impatiently. "You are speaking of some one whose name must be sacred."

His face was flushed, and Neslerov looked at it searchingly.

"You are very fortunate," said Neslerov jestingly. "I can get no one to marry me."

"You but jest. Any one would be pleased to marry one of Russia's wealthiest princes."

"But such a one!" continued the indiscreet old man. "She is beautiful, she is rich, and she sends him books."

"Good! She is educating you. She must love you," said Neslerov.

"Oh, as to love, that is different. Her acts are kind, and I feel grateful. But for marrying—it will require a fine man to make her happy."

"He will make any one happy," put in the old woman, with a glance of pride at the young giant. "Any girl, even though she might be a princess, would get no better for a husband. Look at those arms! Can they not protect?"

"They could fell a bull!" said Neslerov. "How do you pass the time here? Do you go to the nearest village or to Perm and play?"

"Not he!" said the old man, pausing long enough in his work to add his tribute to this son they loved so well. "That young man spending his time at a village! I think not, your excellency. With his books he spends his nights. He studies or he paints."

"What's that? Paints!"

"Aye, indeed yes. He is a born painter."

"And shoeing horses?"

"One gets a kopeck or two for shoeing horses. One must paint for the pleasure of it, unless one is well known. It will come in time," said Vladimir.

"See, he is not so simple as he looks," said Papa Paulpoff, nodding his head toward the big boy.

"Very far from simple, I should say," answered Neslerov.

"Old woman!" shouted Papa Paulpoff suddenly, so suddenly that she jumped in alarm. "Go get the picture. Let the prince see the face of her who is so kind to Vladimir."

The old woman obeyed and ran out.

"Yes, I, and the good part of it is that she knows nothing of it. I shall give it to her when she comes again to see us," said Vladimir.

"But I do not understand. How could you draw a face without having it before you?" asked the prince.

"Ha! It is never from my sight. The most beautiful face! A face that one could not forget. I drew it—I painted it—two—three and four times from memory, and always alike."

At this juncture the old woman returned with a picture in a frame. Silently she handed it to Neslerov. He sat with it in his hands, gazing down hungrily upon the features he knew so well. It showed two things—first, that there was, undeveloped in the young man, a talent that would make him famous if it ever got a chance; second, that he must have the picture of the girl indelibly in his mind to paint so true a picture from memory. And, knowing Frances Gordon, Neslerov knew that this man was a most dangerous rival for her hand.

"But that is not all he has done," said the old woman exultingly.

"Pshaw!" exclaimed Papa Paulpoff. "He has done nothing else worth mentioning."

Vladimir looked up in surprise and caught a swift look of warning flashed from Michael's eyes to those of his wife. The warning flash was also seen by Neslerov, and his curiosity was whetted.

"Surely this cannot be all," he said. "Such a talent must have an outlet. There must be something else. Come! I will look at all you have and buy what I want."

"But not that," replied Vladimir. "I could not sell that."

"But another of the same face?"

"No, I could not sell that face."

"Then let me see something else—something as good as this—and I will buy it."

"There is another woman's face"—began Mamma Paulpoff.

"Yes, and as beautiful a face as this, but a Russian," added Vladimir. "It was a picture. Papa Paulpoff had it, I found it one day and painted one from it."

"Show it to me," said Neslerov.

His eyes were fixed on the face of Vladimir with something like fear in them now. He glanced from one to another of the group.

Papa Paulpoff showed evidences of nervousness, but Vladimir was eager to satisfy the prince. He sent the old woman for the other portrait.

She brought it and placed it in the hands of the prince. At the first glance his face went white to the very lips.

Proverbs

"When the butter won't come put a penny in the churn," is an old time dairy proverb. It often seems to work though no one has ever told why.

When mothers are worried because the children do not gain strength and flesh we say give them Scott's Emulsion.

It is like the penny in the milk because it works and because there is something astonishing about it.

Scott's Emulsion is simply a milk of pure cod liver oil with some hypophosphites especially prepared for delicate stomachs.

Children take to it naturally because they like the taste and the remedy takes just as naturally to the children because it is so perfectly adapted to their wants.

For all weak and pale and thin children Scott's Emulsion is the most satisfactory treatment.

We will send you the penny, i. e., a sample free.

Be sure that this picture in the form of a label is on the wrapper of every bottle of Emulsion you buy.

His hands shook. His frame trembled. "Good heavens!" was breathed under his mustache. The words were not heard, but the manner of the man did not escape Papa Paulpoff.

"Who is this—it is a beautiful woman—but her name?" asked Neslerov, and his voice had turned suddenly hoarse in spite of the effort to control himself.

"I found a small picture one day after a party of nobles passed by," answered Papa Paulpoff.

A swift glance of suspicion shot from the eyes of Neslerov to the face of Papa Paulpoff. But the old man's face was perfectly impassive.

"I will buy this. Name your price," said the prince. "And I will buy the other, the one you found."

"Alas, it is lost!" exclaimed Papa Paulpoff. "It was in a small house we had years ago, and it burned down."

"And the picture destroyed?"

"Alas, yes. It was so pretty, a noble woman, perhaps even a princess," said Papa Paulpoff. "I wept like a child when it was lost."

Tears came into his eyes now at the remembrance of it.

"I will buy this. How much do you ask for it?" he asked of Vladimir.

"On second thoughts, it is not for sale," Vladimir answered.

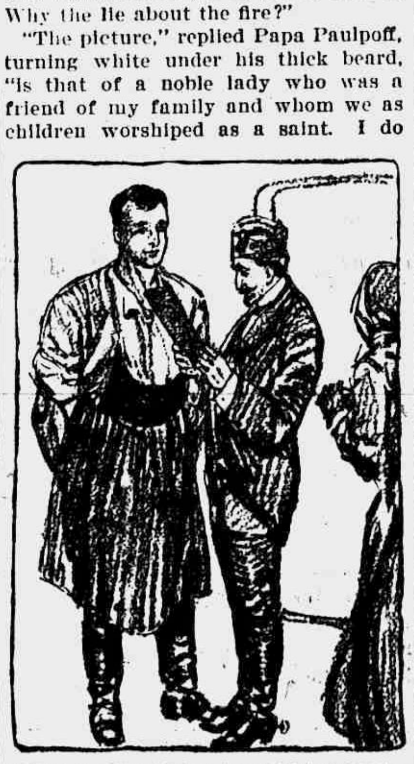
"I do not wonder," he said. "It is a beautiful face. We do not have them in this part of Russia. In St. Petersburg, perhaps."

He shot a glance at Papa Paulpoff as he spoke, but the old man was bending down putting the hot shoe on the horse's hoof.

The job finished, there remained nothing but to pay the Paulpoffs and depart. The prince did this, bade them a pleasant farewell, mounted his steed and rode away.

"Explain the mystery!" cried Vladimir. "You have not lost the picture! You commanded me never to lose it! Why the lie about the fire?"

"The picture," replied Papa Paulpoff, turning white under his thick beard, "is that of a noble lady who was a friend of my family and whom we as children worshiped as a saint. I do not want to lose it. That prince seemed to know who she was, and I did not want him to get the picture, so I lied. Old woman, what about that dinner?"



"Who is this—it is a beautiful woman—but her name?"

"It awaits," said Mamma Paulpoff.

"Then come. I am famished. If one speaks to me to disturb me eating, I will use my foot."

Once at the table, Papa Paulpoff attacked the meal with the rude manners of the uneducated Russian, and the old woman sat with downcast eyes eating her own meal.

Vladimir, though devoured by curiosity, knew the peculiarities of the old man and ate in silence.

THE FAMOUS OPTICIAN of Detroit,

The eye, when properly cared for affords the keenest delight because of the pleasures we are able to enjoy through its medium. When not cared for and its warnings are unheeded, it becomes an instrument of torture. Headaches, eye pains, burning, itching Sensation, strained vision, nervous troubles and many bodily ills are the results accruing from over worked eyes, eyes that need help. My examination reveals all hidden troubles, and it is my province to fit the right glasses to any and all defects of vision.

LILLEY HOUSE, TECUMSEH,
MONDAY and TUESDAY,

January 19th and 20th, 1903.

A Strange Dream.

As I rode along in one of the suburban tram cars I passed a cottage wherein a strange thing happened awhile ago. Near by lived an old man who had received many kindnesses from the true hearted mistress of the cottage, who took compassion upon his necessity. Early one morning this lady woke in great affright. She had dreamed that the old man was calling her in frantic haste to come and help him. She looked at the clock and noted the time. It was 4:30. Later on the lifeless body of the old man was found in a well. The medical opinion was that it must have got into the water at about 4:30 that morning. That was their independent testimony before they had been told of the curious experience of the woman. The distance of the well from the house made it impossible that she could have heard the old man cry, if he really did cry. How, then, can one explain the incident? I might relate other facts similar in their nature, all showing that there is in the world more mystery than we have yet comprehended.—London Standard.

Cheerful Prospect.

Patient—Tell me candidly, doctor, do you think I'll pull through?

Doctor—Oh, you are bound to get well. You can't help yourself. The Medical Record shows that out of a hundred cases like yours one recovers invariably.

"That's a cheerful prospect."

"What more do you want? I've treated ninety-nine cases, and every one of them died. Why, man alive, you can't die if you try! There's no humbug about statistics!"

Sagacious Bird.

Mexico has a clever bird, called the melanarpes, which has discovered a use for the telegraph pole. At the foot of the post this bird makes a large hole, in which it rears its family. Somewhat higher up the post it makes an observatory, from which bored holes permit it to observe the horizon in every direction. Still higher this sagacious bird makes its storehouse, and thus the pole serves as its home, fortress and warehouse.

Instinct of the Mudfish.

The remarkable instinct of the mudfish to roll himself in a ball of mud when the dry season approaches is a wonderful provision of nature intended solely, it would seem, to prevent the extinction of the species. The most interesting fact about this fish is that it breathes my means of its gills when in its native element and by means of lungs during its voluntary imprisonment in the mud cocoon.

Changed View.

"He's dreadfully disagreeable and boorish."

"Tut, tut, my dear. He used to be, but he is no longer."

"How is that?"

"Why, since he has become famous we have decided to consider him only delightfully eccentric and original."—Chicago Post.

Relative Importance.

"And you really think that the political boss of your party is a greater man than Henry Clay?"

"Well," answered the candidate, "I won't exactly say he's greater, but he has a great deal more influence with the people with whom I am doing business at present."—Washington Star.

Hedgehogs.

Hedgehogs are very strong in the water, swimming with ease against a rapid stream, and with their muscular claws they turn up the nests of trout or salmon and make a goodly haul therefrom. They will breast a very rapid stream, and cold water, as near the freezing point as may be, seems to have no terror for them. The eggs of the salmonidæ are a welcome prey to nearly every animal that will face water. Aquatic birds, rats (both house and water), hedgehogs, beetles and their larvæ, the so called fresh water shrimp, are deadly foes.

A Coincidence.

"So that young man wants to marry you?" said Mabel's father.

"Yes," was the reply.

"Do you know how much his salary is?"

"No; but it's an awfully strange coincidence."

"What do you mean?"

"Herbert asked the very same question about you."

The Baby and the Pastor.

Father of the Pastor (after the sermon)—How Horace has changed since he was a baby!

The Mother—What an idea! Of course he has changed.

Father—What I mean is that when he was a baby he used to keep me awake.—Boston Transcript.

LITERARY NOTES.

THE OUTLOOK.

In the current magazine number of The Outlook particularly good portraits with brief sketches are given of Mr. Cannon, who is to be almost certainly the Speaker of the next House of Representatives, M. Jusserand, the new French ambassador, who is distinguished for his literary as well as his political achievements, and Mr. John St. Loe Strachey, the editor and proprietor of the London "Spectator," which has no superior as a critical weekly paper. Mr. Strachey is now visiting this country.

THE CRITIC.

Among the exclusively literary contributions to The Critic for January the place of honor is devoted to Mr. J. P. Mowbray's "Mr. Howells's Rechauffe." In delicate and persuasive vein "J. P. M." discusses the esteemed incumbent of "The Easy Chair," and draws an accurate but not too severe portrait of Mr. Howells's literary physiognomy. In a short but trenchant paper, Mr. Benjamin Swift inquires into "The Decay of the Novel." There is much close thinking and clear statement in his arraignment of modern conditions both favorable and unfavorable to novel writing, and the paper will doubtless attract wide notice and may elicit replies from writers who hold different opinions.

THE DESIGNER.

The Designer for February provides for its many readers a store of good things in which are cleverly combined practicability and attractiveness. The latest fashionable features in millinery and dress are given prominent place, but not to the exclusion of other matters, especially those in which womankind are particularly interested. The closing chapters of "The Apology of Ayliffe," Ellen Olney Kirk's charming love story, are given in this number; so too are two delightful short stories, "Cupid's Aids," by Gulielma Zollinger, and "Genella," by Virginia Rodder Grundy, "Women in the New Business Life," by Waldon Fawcett, and the highly entertaining and instructive department "What Women Are Doing" show exclusively that the feminine sex are usurping some of the laurels heretofore awarded to their fathers, brothers and husbands.

A Dispatch from Kalamazoo says that Cuyler S. North, of Tecumseh, Mich., was re-elected captain of the baseball team for 1903. He has played on the team for the past two years at second and short. As captain last year he made an excellent record, and by his re-election the men have shown that they have confidence in his ability as a leader, and they look forward to a more successful season this year. At the close of the football season he was elected captain of that team, but refused to accept the honor, and his successor was chosen yesterday.—Adrian Telegram.

"Weary Willie Walker."

Unusual interest is being taken in the forthcoming engagement of the comedy-drama, "Weary Willie Walker," which makes its appearance at the New Bradley Wednesday, Jan. 21. It is claimed for the piece that it differs entirely from the usual run of comedy-dramas, inasmuch as the story is humorous and plausable and constitutes an excellent medium for the introduction of this popular brand of fun-making.

The cast includes Miss Zoe Mathews, Mr. Lloyd Inghram, Geo. Mortimer, C. H. Farnham and many other favorites. The musical numbers are of the "catchy" sort, the specialties of a high order and the entire production clean, wholesome and without offence. Especial stress is laid upon the beauty of the female members of the company, and some gorgeous gowns are said to be worn by them.

Lake Shore Ry. and Tecumseh Council Hard at Work.

SIDE TRACK

Connecting the D. T. & M. and Lake Shore Roads the Subject of Discussion.

While the Tecumseh council is hard at work over the advisability of granting a right of way to the Lake Shore Ry. to run a side track across Evans street, two gangs of railway employees with pick-axe and shovel are at work laying ties as far as the drive-road on Evans street.

The side-track in question will leave the Lake Shore track in front of the residence of Lawrence Bauer, corner Evans and Patterson streets, crossing Evans street, it will cut through the northeast corner of the property formerly owned by T. R. Kyle, but lately purchased by the D. T. & M. people.

After crossing this property it cuts diagonally across the old Silvers property, Mrs. Ed McKinney's lot by about two feet and meets the D. T. & M. directly south of the freight house.

The village served an injunction against the Ry. Co. withholding them from crossing Evans street. The Railroad company can now do but one of two things, either ignore the injunction and place themselves liable to a damage suit, or submit to the propositions of the village.

A meeting between the village council and the railway officials was held at Tecumseh State Savings Bank yesterday. A proposition was submitted to the railroad company but as yet has not been accepted by them.

Mrs. John Murphy.

Mary Semple was born in Carnlea, Antrim county, Ireland, in June, 1820, being the second daughter of James and Mary Semple, who were descendants of the old Scotch Presbyterians. She was married to John Murphy in June, 1839. Nine children were born to them, three of whom are dead. She leaves a husband, four sons, Thomas, John, Andrew and William, and two daughters, Mrs. James Johnston and Mrs. J. V. Goheen, to mourn.

She and her husband came to America in June, 1881, and lived on the farm of their son, Thomas, until this fall when the family built a house for them on their son's, William's, farm, so that they could be nearer their children.

They had been in their new quarters but a few weeks. On New Years day their children and grandchildren spent the day with them, never thinking that one of their number would be called away so soon. She died at 3 o'clock the next morning, having been sick but three days.

The funeral was held Sunday, Jan. 4, at 1 o'clock, Rev. Jones officiating.

Crop Report.

January 13, 1903.

The temperature during December has been about two degrees below the normal. The departures for the various sections of the State are nearly alike, thus making conditions similar. The precipitation for the month has been practically normal. There has been some freezing and thawing, but correspondents generally agree that but little damage has been done to wheat. The ground was fairly well covered with snow during the month and thus protected the crop in most counties.

The number of bushels of wheat reported marketed by farmers in December at the flouring mills is 341,248, and at the elevators, 101,714, or a total of 442,962 bushels.

Itching Skin

Distress by day and night—

That's the complaint of those who are so unfortunate as to be afflicted with Eczema or Salt Rheum—and outward applications do not cure. They can't.

The source of the trouble is in the blood—make that pure and this scaling, burning, itching skin disease will disappear.

"I was taken with an itching on my arms which proved very disagreeable. I concluded it was salt rheum and bought a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla. In two days after I began taking it I felt better and it was not long before I was cured. Have never had any skin disease since." MRS. IDA E. WARD, Cove Point, Md.

Schippy at the Bat.

(By Miss Eolah Brown.)

There was ease in Schippy's manner as he stepped into his place,
There was pride in Schippy's bearing and a smile on Schippy's face.
And when, responding to the cheers, he lightly doffed his hat,
No stranger in the crowd could doubt that 'twas Schippy at the bat.
Ten thousand eyes were on him as he rubbed his hands with dirt.
Five thousand tongues applauded as he wiped them on his shirt.
Then while the Detroit pitcher ground the ball into his hip,
Defiance gleamed in Schippy's eye, a sneer curled Schippy's lip.

And now the leather covered sphere came hurling through the air,
And Schippy stood awatching it in haughty grandeur there.
Close by the sturdy batsman the ball unheeded sped.
"That aint my style," said Schippy. "Strike one," the umpire said.

From the benches, black with people, there went up a muffled roar,
Like the beating of storm waves on a stern and distant shore.
"Kill him! Kill the umpire!" shouted some on the stand,
And it's likely they'd have killed him had not Schippy raised a hand.

With a smile of Christian charity great Schippy's visage shone;
He stilled the rising tumult, he bade the game go on:
He signalled to J. H. Smith once, once more the spheroid flew;
But Schippy still ignored it, and the umpire said, "Strike two."

"Fraud!" cried the maddened thousands and echo answered "Fraud!"
But one scornful look from Schippy and the audience was awed.
They saw his face grow stern and cold, they saw his muscles strain,
And they knew that Schippy wouldn't let the ball go by again.

The sneer is gone from Schippy's lip, his teeth are clinched in hate;
He pounds with cruel violence his bat upon the plate.
And now the pitcher holds the ball, and now he let's it go,
And now the air is shattered by the force of Schippy's blow.

Oh, somewhere in this favored land the sun is shining bright.
The band is playing somewhere and somewhere hearts are light,
And somewhere men are laughing, and somewhere children shout;
But there's no joy in Tecumseh—mighty Schippy has struck out!

No More Wood.

Shelbina (Mo) Torch wood: The Paris appeal announces that next year it will receive no wood on subscription after September the first. "The trouble with the average wood subscriber," says the appeal, "is that he never brings the wood as long as he can do anything else, and when he does show up it is with about a shirt tail full of poles green and disreputable enough to extinguish the fires in the furnace of hades."

At the present writing the HERALD would be glad to get even that much wood.

LITERARY NOTES

COSMOPOLITAN.

Pierpont Morgan is undoubtedly the most fascinating figure before the world to-day. "Mr. Morgan, His Advisers and His Organization" are discussed at length in the January Cosmopolitan by John Brisben Walker, who spent ten days between Mr. Morgan's and Mr. John Mitchell's offices, in September, in the attempt to settle the coal-strike.

CENTURY.

To the old native democratic stock has been added a vast army of recruits from the Old World. There are in the Middle West alone four million persons of German parentage out of a total of seven million in the country. Over a million persons of Scandinavian parentage live in the same region. This immigration culminated in the early eighties, and although there have been fluctuations since, it has remained the same.

REVIEW OF REVIEWS.

Two important articles bearing on the question of the American meat supply are contributed to the Review of Reviews for January. Under the title "The American Ox and His Pasture" Dr. E. Benjamin Andrews writes on the measures proposed, in and out of Congress, for the reclamation and improvement of the grazing lands in the West, where practically all our beef cattle are grown and fattened. This article is supplemented by a careful study of the recent advance in beef prices by Mr. Fred C. Croxton, an expert in the United States department of labor.

ATLANTIC MONTHLY

President Woodrow Wilson of Princeton University contributes the Atlantic Monthly for December a stimulating paper on Ideals in America. All that Mr. Wilson writes is marked by a noteworthy combination of lucid argument and earnestness which makes conviction persuasive. In these days, when America is confronted by new and great tasks beyond her old time borders and involved in unprecedented problems within, Mr. Wilson's calm and serious discussion of the perennial ideals which guide our national life is of special timeliness.

A WORD TO FARM TOILERS.

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND

The Home Friend of the Farmer and His Family.

After the labors and toils of the summer time, and harvesting of crops in the early autumn, many of our farmers, their wives, daughters, and sons, find themselves in a condition of health demanding careful attention if suffering is to be avoided later on. Many experience kidney trouble in some form; with some the liver is torpid; there is biliousness, nausea, and vomiting, with loss of appetite and depression of spirits. Thousands who have been exposed to cold, damp winds and rains while toiling in the harvest fields, now feel the twinges of terrible rheumatism; others run down by worry, overwork, and irregular dieting, are tormented with the pangs of dyspepsia.

To the thousands of run down, sickly, and half dead men and women in farm homes we recommend with all honesty and confidence the worker's friend, Paine's Celery Compound, the only medicine that can quickly and fully restore strength to the weak body and vigor to the muscles. Paine's Celery Compound tones the stomach; it removes poisonous acids from the blood which cause rheumatism; it feeds the weak and diseased nerves and banishes neuralgic tortures; it purifies the blood and gives true vitality and life. The use of Paine's Celery Compound in autumn means the establishing of a perfect physical vigor to withstand the rigors of a severe winter.

ANSWER IT HONESTLY.

Are the Statements of Tecumseh Citizens Not More Reliable Than Those of Utter Strangers?

This is a vital question.
It is fraught with interest to Tecumseh.
It permits of only one answer.
It cannot be evaded or ignored.
A Tecumseh citizen speaks here.
Speaks for the welfare of Tecumseh.
A citizen's statement is reliable,
An utter stranger's doubtful,
Home proof is the best proof.

Mr. S. Erskine, Prop. of the well-known barber shop, says "For ten years off and on I had a dull pain in my back, imperfect action of the kidneys, and often I could hardly stoop or get up again. I think it was caused by standing so much at my work. Be that as it may I was in bad shape. I used a great many medicines but without receiving much benefit until Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to my notice and I got a box at C. A. Wright's drug store. I must confess that I was agreeably surprised for after using one box I was much relieved. After the use of two boxes my back is stronger and better than it has been for a long time. Doan's Kidney Pills are the best medicine I have ever used and I have such faith in them, I believe I will be conferring a kindness on those suffering from kidney trouble in making known their merits."

For sale by all dealers: Price 50 cents per box, Foster-Milburn company, Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

Office Calendars.

A very serviceable calendar has been issued by the Chicago & North-Western R'y for the year 1903. The figures are large and easily distinguished, the days of the month and the consecutive day of the year are both shown; and the publication is of that solid and creditable sort which makes it desirable for business men and manufacturers. Send four cents in postage to W. B. Kniskern, passenger traffic manager, 22 Fifth avenue, Chicago.

Martin, for eleven years teacher of mathematics in Hillsdale college, has left for the west to undertake the promotion and management of one of the most gigantic irrigation enterprises in the United States—the reclaiming of 50,000 acres of fine river bottom purchased from he Santa Fe railroad in Arizona and California, on the Colorado river. The professor is supported by some of the most reliable business men and farmers of Hillsdale county.

Transvaal's Sum Aggregates $150,000,000—Britain Guarantees a Loan.

Johannesburg, Jan. 14.—Colonial Secretary Chamberlain and the leaders of the mining community here have arrived at an agreement in the matter of a financial settlement. Under this agreement, the Transvaal war contribution will amount to $150,000,000. A guarantee also will be given for an imperial loan of $150,000,000 which is to be expended in reproductive public works in the Transvaal and in the Orange River colony.

An understanding was also reached regarding the labor question. It is believed the imperial government will consent to the importation of Chinese laborers for the mines.

SPREADING RAILS

Wrecked Train on Burlington Road—Engineer Killed; Trainmen Hurt.

St. Louis, Jan. 14.—The St. Paul passenger train on the Burlington road, due in St. Louis at 5:55 p. m. and running fifty miles an hour to make up lost time, was wrecked last evening by spreading rails five miles northeast of Alton, Ill., killing the engineer, Frank Horn, of Beardstown, Ill., and injuring four trainmen. The locomotive was overturned, the baggage, mail and express cars and one coach were thrown on their sides and the Pullman sleeper and remaining coach left the rails but remained upright. No passengers were injured beyond minor bruises.

Advocates Monroe Doctrine.

New York, Jan. 14.—Vice Admiral Lord Charles Beresford, who was a passenger on the Kaiserin Maria Theresia, which arrived yesterday, said regarding the Venezuelan affair: "It will teach Great Britain a lesson of the extreme danger of perhaps international complications by allowing unlimited trade credit to a bankrupt and unscrupulous republic like Venezuela and then trying to collect bad debts by coercion. I personally am a strong advocate of the Monroe doctrine. These South American republics, however, will be a menace to the world's peace as long as they persist in the unscrupulous commercial dealings with foreign countries, and it must be left to the United States to life them from their present corrupt state or annex them entirely."

Live Stock Association Convenes.

Kansas City, Mo., Jan. 14.—President John W. Springer's attack upon the beef trust, co-called, and the passage of memorials to congress urging that laws for the betterment of live stock conditions be enacted were the features of the first day's session yesterday of the sixth annual convention of the National Live Stock association. President Springer, after declaring "that the American stockman proposes to take care of himself," served notice that those interests "must receive protection from the congress of the United States just as long as the finished products made from our raw materials are heavily protected." The sentiments were received with applause.

Peary May Go North Again.

St. Johns, N. F., Jan. 14.—It is believed here that Lieutenant R. E. Peary has decided to make another attempt to reach the north pole. Captain Samuel Bartlett of Brigus, N. F., Lieutenant Peary's ice navigator, is in St. Johns arranging to charter one of the largest stealing steamers for a voyage north next summer. Lieutenant Peary's steamer Windward is said to be inadequate for the large outfit to be taken on the proposed trip.

Washington, Jan. 14.—Lieutenant Peary last night said that he had no connection with Captain Bartlett's effort to charter a steamer for a northern voyage.

Shooting Affray at a Dance.

Cairo, Ill., Jan. 14.—At a dance at Moorehouse, Mo., Monday night James and Dolpheus Hill of Johnson county, Ill., became drunk and created a disturbance, and Marshal Lan Lance and Deputy Marshall John Taylor were called to restore peace. Dolpheus Hill shot and instantly killed Marshal Lance and James Hill fatally cut Taylor. The Hill boys started to leave the house, when Taylor shot and wounded one of them, but they succeeeded in making their escape. Searching parties have been organized, but the Hills are still at liberty.

As she approached the boy he drew the gun to his shoulder and killed his mother instantly. He then deliberately shot himself.

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 14.—United States Senator Mason formally announced Tuesday his withdrawal from the contest to be his own successor, admitting the impossibility of his reelection. Congressman A. J. Hopkins of Aurora probably will be chosen without opposition.

A Heavy Sentence.

St. Louis, Jan. 14.—Judge Adams, in the United States district court, yesterday sentenced John Fickler, postoffice annex robber, to ten years' imprisonment for robbing a mail pouch, a life sentence for assaulting the carrier and ten years on a third count for stealing unclassified mail.

Origin of the Jinrikisha.

Most travelers in Japan would suppose that so general a Japanese institution as the jinrikisha was of native origin, but not so. An old resident of Yokohama writes to the Kobe Chronicle: "For several years after the institution of the jinrikisha it was generally understood among foreigners in Yokohama that Mr. Goble, 'half cobbler, half missionary,' was its inventor. Mr. Goble, though a rough looking sort of man, was regarded by the foreign residents of the port as an honest, consistent missionary. I believe it was he who built the first missionary chapel in Yokohama, and as long as it lasted it was known as 'Goble's church.' He was in the habit of taking long rambles in the country and doing a little peddling business, and, if my memory serves me rightly, he gave a commission to a blacksmith either in Kawasaki (on the Tokaido, between Yokohama and Tokyo) or in Fujisawa to construct the first jinrikisha. The vehicle took at once with the Japanese, but not so among the foreigners, with whom it was some time before it became a popular means of locomotion. Mr. Goble was an American citizen."

Coughing

"I was given up to die with quick consumption. I then began to use Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I improved at once and am now in perfect health."—Chas. E. Hartman, Gibbstown, N. Y.

It's too risky, playing with your cough. The first thing you know it will be down deep in your lungs and the play will be over. Begin early with Ayer's Cherry Pectoral and stop the cough.

requires physical and mental ability of a high degree to withstand its hard labors. The high tension to which the nervous system is constantly subjected, has a depressing effect, and soon headache, backache, neuralgia, rheumatism, sciatica, etc., develop in severe form. Such was the case of Mail Carrier S. F. Sweinhart, of Huntsville, Ala., he says:

"An attack of pneumonia left me with muscular rheumatism, headache, and pains that seemed to be all over me. I was scarcely able to move for about a month when I decided to give Dr. Miles' Pain Pills and Nerve Plasters a trial. In three days I was again on my route and in two weeks I was free from pain and gaining in flesh and strength."

REMARKABLE CURE OF CROUP.

A Little Boy's Life Saved.

I have a few words to say regarding Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It saved my little boy's life and I feel that I cannot praise it enough. I bought a bottle of it from A. E. Steere, of Goodwin, S. D., and when I got home with it the the poor baby could hardly breathe. I gave the medicine as directed every ten minutes until he "threw up" and then I thought sure he was going to choke to death. We had to pull the phlegm out of his mouth in great long strings. I am positive that if I had not got that bottle of cough medicine, my boy would not be on earth today.—Joel Demont, Inwood, Iowa. DETROIT'S OPPORTUNITY.

Offered a Coal Mine That Will Quickly Pay For Itself.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 15.—It may be authoritatively stated that Mayor Maybury has been offered, by a man whose responsibility is as undoubted as the Bank of England, a coal mine now in operation on the Pere Marquette railroad at a price which, placing coal at $4 25 per ton, would in three months pay for the mine. In other words, the coal can be laid down in Detroit, all royalties and expenses paid, for a price not exceeding $2 25 per ton. The owner of the mine, which is now producing 200 tons of screened lump per day, has a place for the money he asks for the mine, and that is why he makes so favorable a proposition. The lowest the city has been offered coal is $4 85 per ton, and at that figure the mine in question would pay for itself in about three months.

Those who understand the situation think the mayor will either have to shoot now or give up the gun, as this proposition puts the city in possession of its own mine and entirely free from any action of the operators.

Fifty Years in Court.

Hillsdale, Mich., Jan. 15.—The supreme court has just rendered a decision in a Hillsdale county case which practically settles litigation that has occupied the local courts much of the time for the past fifty years, and for the past ten years has been a constant bone of contention. F. W. Stock, owner of the Hillsdale City mills, claimed that he was damaged by the digging of a ditch and the draining of a swamp in Jefferson township. He sued and the ditch was filled up. Then he sued the drain commissioner because the filling would not stay there and got $50 damages. The case was appealed, but in the supreme court the decision was against him.

Easy to Polish a Stove.

Easily Applied—No Odor—No Dirt.

To polish a stove like peppering a beefsteak may seem odd to those who have never used Sifter Stove Polish, but nevertheless, it is the newest, easiest and most convenient method known. Sifter Stove Polish is put up in a large, round box with a perforated top similar to a pepper box. The polish never dries out and does not require soaking in water before using. There is never any waste. It is good to the last pinch. It is gently sifted on the stove, brushed with a damp cloth and lightly rubbed with a dry cloth. A brilliant, jet black lustre is obtained. There is no odor, no dirty saucers or pans, no rusty boxes to cover. The Sifter box is always clean. Sifter Stove Polish is cheap. It costs 5 cents a box, will polish more stoves than three times its cost in any other polish. All dealers.

Both wit and understanding are trifles without integrity.

When about to commit a base deed

Jackson's city council is up against a tough proposition in the matter of furnishing coal to the consumers in that city. The coal carrying railroads were told by the retail coal dealers in Jackson that they must get "too busy" to deliver any more coal to the municipality of that city, and the railroads did become so busy at once that no more hard coal is being delivered to Jackson on the city's account to be sold to the people at cost prices. As the matter now stands the retail coal dealers of the "Central City" have things pretty nearly their own way, and will be allowed to compel the people to pay robbery prices for their fuel or freeze.—Hudson Gazette.

South American lovers have a pretty custom. It is well known that when the petals of the great laurel magnolia are touched, however lightly, the result is a brown spot which develops in a few hours. The fact is taken advantage of by the lover, who pulls a magnolia flower and on one of its pure white petals writes a motto or message with a hard, sharp pointed pencil. Then he sends the flower, the young lady puts it in a vase of water, and in three or four hours the message written on the leaf becomes visible.

TO VON KETTELER

Memorial Arch to His Memory Erected by China

WAS DEDICATED SUNDAY

Stands as Warning to Boxers, Who Murdered Germany's Minister During the Outbreak—Many Diplomats Were Present.

Pekin, Jan. 19.—The dedication of the Von Ketteler memorial arch, which occurred Sunday, was an impressive ceremony. The arch was erected by China. Baron von Ketteler was the German minister who was killed by boxers at the outbreak of the boxer trouble. The dedication took place in the presence of a brilliant assemblage of diplomats, many Chinese officials, all the military officers in Pekin, the entire foreign community of the city, as well as German officers and civilians from Tientsin and other cities. The streets and roofs from which a view of the function was to be had were crowded with Chinese.

Baron von Der Goltz, first secretary of the German legation, officiated in behalf of Germany, and Prince Chun, brother of the emperor, who was sent to Germany to apologize for the murder of the minister, represented China at the altar, while imperial sacrifical vessels were erected before the arch. When Prince Chun arrived he was escorted to the arch by Baron von Der Goltz and he poured out a libation in honor of the dead man. He then spoke as follows:

"This monument is to be a warning to the people, a sign of the friendly relations between our two countries, and a symbol of peace."

To these words Baron von Der Goltz replied:

"This monument has been consecrated to the emperor of Germany by the emperor of China as a permanent proof of the anger of the emperor at this crime. In erecting this monument in China, he fulfills an obligation he took up with the events of 1900. The monument shall stand as a sermon to posterity and as a lasting symbol of the desire of the Chinese government to promote and perpetuate friendly relations with foreign governments."

These two speeches were read in German and in Chinese. After the dedication the German troops marched under the arch, while the bands played national airs.

Gonzales Holding His Own.

Columbia, S. C., Jan. 19.—There have been more encouraging symptoms in the condition of Editor Gonzales Sunday than have appeared at any time since his wounding by Lieutenant-Governor Tillman last Thursday, yet it is impossible to give any promise as to the ultimate result of his case. The physicians say simply that he is holding his own and that he probably has passed the period of danger from peritonitis.

Later—At 3:15 o'clock this morning hope of Mr. Gonzales' recovery has practically abandoned.

Robbed by Masked Bandits.

THE PINE BARRENS

State Administration Anxious to Try the Forestry Plan.

BILLS TO BE INTRODUCED

Settlers of the Districts Are Much Opposed to the Idea—Petition Their Representative to Fight Such Legislation.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 19.—The state administration is still after the so-called "pine barrens" and has struck a plan which it will endeavor to have indorsed at the present session of the legislature. Representative Alvah G. Stone of Medina, Lenawee county, will introduce two of the bills at the instigation of the forestry commission and the land commissioner embodying this plan. Representative Earl B. Bolton of Gaylord, representing the counties of Crawford, Montgomery, Oscoda, Otsego and Presque Isle, is entrusted with the work of defending his constituents against state aggression. Bolton comes to the legislature armed with a petition signed by 357 residents of Crawford, asking him to do his utmost to prevent the forestry plan from being sanctioned by the legislature.

"All through that section of the country," says Representative Bolton, "there are strips of clear territory that would make fairly good agricultural land, and it is mainly on these that the inhabitants build their hope and belief that more settlers will come and that the place will boom. They have every confidence in the future of their country. It is the place they have chosen for a home."

The settlers contend that if the plan of the forestry commission is followed they will practically be isolated from civilization. It is the purpose of the two bills to give the state land office the power to reject isolated descriptions in certain parts of the "barrens" and to take up other descriptions within the parts of towns 26 and 27 of Crawford county, and other sections, to be set apart for reforestration. In nearly every case the land now in the hands of the land commissioner has reverted to the state through tax delinquency, the owners having abandoned them as soon as the timber gave out.

"I have heard several of these men swear," said Representative Bolton, "that if the state sends in any police force to shut up those lands, they will drive them out if it takes the gun to do it; and they said it as men who mean it."

He Longed For Death.

Battle Creek, Mich., Jan. 19.—Frank Bridges, said to be a contractor from Detroit, after being mixed up in a shooting scrape in this city, made three attempts to end his life. Early Sunday morning he became involved in an altercation with Frank Bingman at the Hotel Bismarck, and the latter received a revolver wound in the leg. Both men are said to have been under the influence of liquor. Bridges then went to his room and took a dose of carbolic acid. He was pumped out and placed in jail. Twice he attempted to hang himself in his cell, but each time was discovered and his life spared.

This murder, it will be remembered, was committed in Brunke's father's saloon in this city Dec. 4. During the coroner's investigations it was brought out that the boys had been on unfriendly terms since childhood and were always watching for a chance "to get even."

Has Seen One.

Dan Leno, the English comedian, told of appearing before a swell London audience at the house of a lord. The languor of his listeners made him feel not too happy, and he was glad to retire to the dressing room allotted him. While he was removing the grease paint a very young peer, who had strolled after him, stood watching the process. He told Leno in the most approved drawl that some of his sayings had really been rather funny, "especially that one, you know, where your wife made a pancake on a gridiron and the pancake slipped through and put the fire out. That made me laugh awfully, because I know what a gridiron is. I have seen one."

TRUTH NOT KNOWN

Lieut-Governor Tillman Makes a Statement.

BELIEVES HE WAS JUSTIFIED

In Shooting Editor Gonzales—Says Published Reports Are Not True—Will Claim He Thought Gonzales Would Defend Himself.

Columbia, S. C., Jan. 17.—Editor N. G. Gonzales, who was shot and seriously wounded by Lieutenant-Governor James Tillman Thursday on the most traveled street in the capital of South Carolina, was holding his own o'clock last night. There has been no change for either the better or the worse since the shooting. The crisis is yet to come. His condition and the details of the tragedy are almost the only topics of conversation in South Carolina.

Lieutenant-Governor James H. Tillman, who did the shooting, took things quietly and calmly during the day in the county jail. Most of the day he spent in consultation with his lawyers, Congressman George W. Croft, former Judge O. W. Buchanan and Mr. Coleman L. Blease.

Two of his counsel gave to the Associated Press, with a request that it be published, the following statement prepared by Mr. Tillman himself in response to a telegram from a New York newspaper:

"I can only say that when the truth of the unfortunate affair is known, my friends, as well as the people, will know how thoroughly I was justified in acting as I did.

"The statements already published in the papers are untrue, and at the proper time this I will be prepared to show. Beyond this I do not care to make any further statement.

"JAMES H. TILLMAN."

It is understood here that Colonel Tillman's line of defense will be that he thought Mr. Gonzales was armed and that he had a weapon in his coat pocket and that he had his hands in his coat pocket. He is said to contend that he had every reason to believe that Mr. Gonzales was armed. Mr. Gonzales' friends state that he was not armed. Mr. Tillman also will claim that when he aimed his pistol the second time at Mr. Gonzales that he did so expecting Mr. Gonzales to defend himself and that he lowered his weapon because there was no response and not because of anything Mr. Gonzales said.

At half-past 2 o'clock this morning the general condition of Mr. Gonzales was about the same. Physicians expressed opinion he would survive the day.

Money Offered Juror on Famous Goebel Murder Case.

A STRANGER ACCOSTED HIM

Said If There Was Enough Evidence For Conviction W. S. Taylor Would Be Kidnaped—Juror Remained Mum—Taylor Pleads Ignorance.

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 17.—A sensation was caused in the Franklin circuit court yesterday when Circuit Judge Cantrell summoned into open court the grand jury which had under investigation the Goebel murder case, hearing the testimony of Henry E. Youtsey. Judge Cantrell said to the jury:

"Gentlemen, I understand that certain person or persons have approached some member of the jury and made inquiry as to the matters which have been before this jury. If this is a fact I want you to report it to the court, or if there have been any overtures or intimations to you."

James Riddell, who lives at Benson, arose and stated that on his return home Thursday night a man of medium height, with black hair, well dressed, was at his home. Mr. Riddell said:

"The man gave his name as McDowell and said his home was at Indianapolis, Ind.; that he knew W. S. Taylor; that he knew I was a member of the jury which had the examination of Henry E. Youtsey; that since the investigation of this case and the testimony of Youtsey, Taylor was much worried, had grown thin and emaciated.

"He called me outside of the house and stated that if there was enough evidence against Taylor to convict him (Taylor) he with others would kidnap Taylor and bring him here and divide the reward with me. He then offered me money which he had in his hand, and I refused it; then he shoved some money in my vest pocket and told me to buy me a hat with it; that he saw there was no opportunity to get the information. He said he was stopping at the Capitol hotel and had driven out to my house."

The grand jury was instructed to investigate the matter.

Indianapolis, Jan. 17.—Former Governor W. S. Taylor of Kentucky, who is practicing law in this city, said he had no idea who the detective that is said to have approached Juror Riddell at Frankfort could be. He has no detective friends and he was not interested in Youtsey's testimony.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

THE MYSTERY OF GRASLOV

By Ashley Towne

Copyright, 1901, by Charles B. Etherington

CHAPTER III.

VLADIMIR SENT TO SIBERIA.

ATTACHED to the police of the government of Perm was an inspector named Ignatz Jansky. He was ambitious to rise and was of that mental and physical caliber that makes a man successful when he bends all his energies, regardless of all scruples, to the attainment of his goal.

Inspector Jansky, having received a message from Prince Neslerov, hastened to obey, for he knew the power of Neslerov, and if there should chance to be promotion in his path at any time Neslerov, as a wealthy noble of Graslov, could further his possibilities.

Inspector Jansky entered the palace of the prince with a humility that would have charmed the poor devils whom his eagerness had sent to Siberia.

"Sit down," said the prince, and the inspector sat down with a suddenness that proved his desire to please his sponsor. "I sent for you."

"You did, your excellency. I received your message and made all haste to obey."

"I trust it did not inconvenience you to a great extent," said the prince, who was quite familiar with the peculiarities of the inspector's nature.

"Not at all, your excellency—that is, not so much but what it gave me pleasure to obey. I am always busy, as you know."

"Yes, you are assiduous. Well, I have news for you. But first I should be pleased to receive from you an answer to a question. What do you wish for the most?"

Jansky hesitated. His servile mind saw far into the future, as a rule, but it could not fathom the meaning of this strange question. What did it matter to the prince what he wanted most unless the prince was disposed to grant it?

"I should like promotion, your excellency. Of course, I make no claim. You have befriended me. You have made me what I am. I have in my humble way endeavored to so acquit myself that you would not be displeased. I would not ask you for more. But, since you ask my dearest wish, it is promotion."

"It is a possibility," the prince replied.

Having said this, he deliberately lighted a cigar, leaving the inspector on nettles, wondering if the possibility were to materialize into a fact.

"As I said before, it is a possibility," said Neslerov and relapsed into silence.

"I suppose it is always a possibility to one so powerful as your excellency," said Jansky, who had a fine talent for flattery.

"At this particular moment it is more easily accomplished than at any other time."

"If your excellency will explain—if anything is expected of me, I would"—

"Duty, only duty," broke in the prince. "But I will explain. You are already aware that when you were made inspector of police in Perm the field of police activity extended but little farther east. The Cossack guards and the Tartar cavalry composed the police over the border. But this new railway is revolutionizing all that. In each government through which this line of travel passes or is to pass a department of police is to be established. There will be new cities develop. There will be railway stations. The population of Siberia will increase and, though complex enough at all times, will now present a far greater variety than ever before. The entrance of foreigners, of conspirators, will have to be made less difficult. The escape of a convict will now be almost a mere act of stepping upon a train and saying farewell to his guards.

"It will be, therefore, quite necessary to establish a system of police with officers of more ability and shrewdness than the Cossacks who now command the rude guards who stand sentinels over the czar's great dominion in Asia.

"Such a department of police has already been established in Tobolsk, through which the railway is now completed. It is time now for us to think of such a department in Tomsk."

As the prince and governor paused the inspector's breath came short and fast.

"And, your excellency, in the goodness of your heart you have thought of me?"

"I have been thinking—of several. I have befriended you. I desire to do so again. But there are difficulties which we must consider. Your present position, while not a low one, still is so low that the leap from it to the position of superintendent of police of the government of Tomsk would excite the imaginations of certain people at St. Petersburg."

"Superintendent of police of Tomsk!" Jansky cried.

"Certainly. That is the position for which I intend you. I have watched your career. You are eager, ambitious and resourceful. What better man could I have in such a position? It is upon you whom I must rely to prevent the encroachments of our enemies. It will be the superintendent of my police who will be my closest confidant. Who could be more acceptable to me than you?"

"I thank you, your excellency. I thank"—

"Wait. Thank me with deeds when we succeed. As I said before, there are difficulties. One cannot leap too great a distance at once without a cause. We must find a cause."

"A cause, your excellency?"

"What I mean is some potent reason for this great promotion. The chief of the Tomsk police will have a palace, a large income and will be second only to myself in power. To obtain that one must do something worthy."

"Oh, if I could but win that distinction!"

"I think it even now within your power."

"You have discovered something?"

"Yes—a very nesting place for nihilists."

"Good! Give me an idea where this place is, your excellency. There will be no more nesting."

"Do you know a forge on the forest road leading out of Perm to the south?"

"A forge? A horseshoeing place?"

"Well, that and all ironworking. It is kept by a man named Paulpoff."

"Paulpoff, the giant who breaks horse- [illegible] the simple-minded son of old Michael? What has he to do with nihilists?"

"He is their leader," Neslerov said quietly.

Jansky turned white, whether from surprise or horror at the devilish plot he scented we do not know. But he sat there waiting. The police of Tomsk needed a chief. The chief would have a palace and a large salary.

"Yes," continued Neslerov, "this Paulpoff, as I accidentally discovered, is the leader of a band of nihilists who meet there in the shops. I chanced to pass there yesterday and overheard a bit of conversation between the son and the old man. It seems there is to be a meeting in a few nights."

"A meeting of nihilists in the shops of Paulpoff?"

"Yes. Now, it has long been suspected that there were many nihilists at Perm, but the police have not been able to uncover them. Let me advise you. Keep this to yourself—a secret between you and me. We will go to the forge and arrest these Paulpoffs. If we find proof that they are nihilists, they will go across the border and you will be mentioned for promotion. Then the opportunity will come to me to speak to the minister of justice for you, and undoubtedly you will be given to me as the chief of the Tomsk police."

Jansky nodded. It was not for him to ask questions now.

"I am ready," he said.

"Then tomorrow. I will make still further investigations in my own way, and we shall be ready to act. We must both go to Perm from here."

Jansky, not being asked to remain longer, took his departure. And then suddenly from his repose the prince became a man of quick action. He called from his estate four men in whom he knew he could place the most implicit confidence. He spent some time at his desk writing. To each of the four he gave a letter, unsealed, unstamped, but addressed to each and apparently having been delivered by the hand of a private messenger.

"Go with me, do what I bid you, and you will have gold rubles for a year's pleasure," he said.

Inspector Jansky, happy and yet agitated at the result of the conference with the prince, sat in his office in Perm on the following afternoon. It was growing late, and he had looked hours for Prince Neslerov.

"He was mistaken or he has failed," he said. "He would have come if there was a possibility of success."

As he spoke the prince's horse galloped to the door.

"Good! Then success is possible!" said Jansky, grasping the hand of his noble benefactor.

"Possible! It is certain. Come with me."

Jansky's horse was soon by the side of the steed ridden by the prince.

"I made it my business to ride past the shops of Paulpoff," said the prince. "I met there, just leaving, a man who was, to say the least, discreditable in appearance. I spoke to him, and he was frightened. I saw him crumple a paper in his hand. I snatched it from him. It was a message addressed to 'Number Five' of some mysterious circle, calling upon the person bearing that name to come to the shops at a certain hour tonight. We shall be in time. Let us ride."

It had so chanced that a number of accidents to horses had taken place that day on the forest road. When the inspector of police and Neslerov arrived, four men were within the shop, their horses standing outside, and all were apparently in the greatest eagerness to have their horses shod. Papa Paulpoff was visibly disturbed by this sudden influx of the horseshoeing business, but the giant Vladimir, who never refused a request if he could help a human being, was beginning to make the shoes. The men did not apparently know one another, and each growled continually at the others for being there.

Neslerov, upon arriving at the shop, whispered to the inspector, and both leaped from their horses.

"Seize the old man and the son!" said Neslerov. "I will search these fellows."

Poor old Papa Paulpoff turned white and sank in horror to the ground, suspecting what was coming, but Vladimir, in whose innocent mind there was no suspicion, stood gaping at the newcomers.

"It is the prince!" he exclaimed. "What have these poor men done, your excellency?"

Neslerov did not answer him. He turned to the nearest of the four, wrestled with him a short time, while the others showed evidences of terror, and then pulled from his pocket a letter.

"See!" he cried, waving it in the air and then showing it to the inspector. "It is a message to 'Number Three!' We have here the five constituting the circle."

"Let me read," said the inspector, while Vladimir still looked on unconscious of the tragedy that was being played with himself as its center.

The letter simply commanded "Number Three" to attend a meeting of the circle at the shops at that hour.

The name of Vladimir Paulpoff was signed.

"It is enough!" cried Jansky. "Paulpoff, I make you my prisoner in the name of the czar!"

The young ironworker could, had he exerted his strength, have thrust the entire shameless crew from the place and crashed their skulls together. But even now he did not realize the enormity of the thing with which he was charged.

"Attend, Paulpoffs!" commanded Jansky, while the prince went through the pockets of the other three of the circle.

"Oh, have mercy!" cried Papa Paulpoff, falling upon his knees and clasping the legs of the prince. "We are innocent, I swear it! Some enemy has done this thing! The name is not in the writing of my son, I am certain! Oh, let me see the letters!"

Neslerov made a movement as if to hand the letters to the old man when one of the wretches who had brought them there sprang forward, seized them and rushed unhindered from the place.

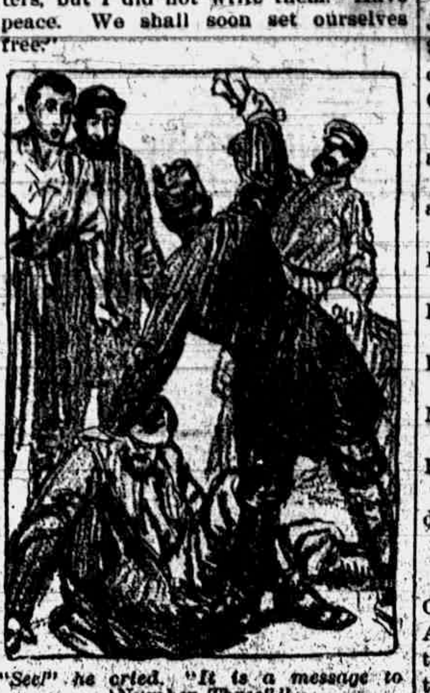
"The letters! The proof is gone!" howled Jansky.

"We have seen them. It is enough," said Neslerov calmly.

At this point Mamma Paulpoff came in. In consternation and helpless horror she saw her husband in the grasp of an inspector of police.

"What is this?" she cried.

"It is nothing, mother," said Vladimir. "These men have found some letters, but I did not write them. Have peace. We shall soon set ourselves free."



"See!" he cried. "It is a message to 'Number Three!'"

The three Paulpoffs were thrust into a dungeon. The prince and the inspector told their stories—clear, lucid, convincing—to the governor of Perm. The word of a prince and governor and of an inspector of police was not to be doubted. There was no trial, no hearing—nothing but a report to the minister of justice at St. Petersburg.

In three days the Paulpoffs—old man, old woman and the unresisting giant—were on the way to Siberia on the railway which Gordon had helped to build.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

The Earth's Other Motion.

The earth, in addition to its diurnal and annual revolutions, has a slow wabbling of its axis, a motion seldom mentioned even in the textbooks of astronomy. This curious motion may be properly likened to that imparted to a top by a touch of the finger on its rim when it is in rapid movement, the touch causing the upper end of the top's stem to describe a small circle. So, too, the mighty sun lays hold of the rim of the great terrestrial top, and it begins to oscillate in the long period of 21,000 years—that is to say, on Dec. 21, 1248, the earth made its nearest approach to the sun, and it will approach equally near in 10,500 years from that time, or on the 21st day of June in the year 11,748. This has all to do with climate both north and south of the equatorial line.

In the period comprising the first our northern winters are short and mild and our summers are long and sunny. But during the period of which the year [illegible] will be the middle our winters will be awful in their severity and our summers short and cool. Even now the northern hemisphere is slowly but surely losing its long, sunny summers, and if you should live until the winter of the year 11,748-49 you could tell a story of cold and snows that would pale to insignificance the stories of the cold winter of 1833-34, for the whole northern hemisphere will then be in the midst of its great and terrible winter.

The Kingfisher.

Koskomenos, the kingfisher, still burrows in the earth like his reptile ancestors. Therefore the other birds call him outcast and will have nothing to do with him. But he cares little for that, being a clattering, rattle headed, self satisfied fellow, who seems to do nothing all day long but fish and eat. As you follow him, however, you note with amazement that he does some things marvelously well—better, indeed, than any other of the wood folk. To locate a fish accurately in still water is difficult enough when one thinks of light refraction, but when the fish is moving and the sun glares down into the pool and the wind wrinkles its face into a thousand flashing, changing furrows and ridges, then the bird that can point a bill straight to his fish and hit him fair just behind the gills must have more in his head than the usual chattering gossip that one hears from him on the trout streams.—Country Life In America.

Two Queer Diseases.

Astasia is a nervous affection the peculiar feature of which is the fact that a person suffering from it cannot stand upright. If he tries, he will be obliged to hop and jump whenever his feet touch the ground. In a word, his actions are precisely those of a person who might be required to stand upright on a floor composed of redhot coals. Fortunately there are not many cases of this malady on record. Akathisia is the exact opposite of astasia, since a person suffering from it cannot remain seated. The moment he seats himself in a chair he is obliged to start up again. A person afflicted with akathisia can walk easily, but cannot sit, whereas a person suffering from astasia cannot stand upright and cannot walk in the ordinary manner owing to the contraction of his lower limbs.

Considerate.

Sandy—Yer say dat lady was considerate dat threw de boilin' water on yer?

Cinders—Cert! In dese days of germs and microbes she was considerate to boil it before she threw it.—Philadelphia Record.

The first fourteen Roman emperors all shaved their faces clean. There is a portrait bust representing Nero with a beard, but it is not believed to be authentic.

Taking Him at His Word.

Joseph Jefferson in his biography relates what was probably the last jest of Artemus Ward. When the famous wit lay dying in Southampton, he was attended by his devoted friend Tom Robertson, the author of "Caste," who was also a friend of Jefferson.

"Just before Ward's death," writes Mr. Jefferson, "Robertson poured out some medicine in a glass and offered it to his friend.

"Ward said:

"'My dear Tom, I can't take that dreadful stuff.'

"'Come, come,' said Robertson, urging him to swallow the nauseous drug. 'There's a good fellow. Do, now, for my sake. You know I would do anything for you.'

"'Would you?' said Ward, feebly stretching out his hand to grasp his friend's, perhaps for the last time.

"'I would indeed,' said Robertson.

"'Then you take it,' said Ward.

"The humorist passed away a few hours later."

THE MIDWINTER PICNIC

Of the Wit & Wisdom club was held at Albert Waring's last evening. A distinguishing feature of this meeting was the picnic supper served at 6:30 in the attractive dining rooms of this pleasant country home. The program which followed the refreshments was supposed to be after the manner of an old fashioned school exhibition.

The opening number was an original song by the whole company, followed by a quartet composed of Mesdames Maddox and Kellogg and Messrs. Frost and Maddox.

Original poem—Prof. Kellogg.
Kindergarten exercise conducted by Miss Lamb.
Original Essay written by C. A. Slayton and read by Fred Rosacrans.
Solo—Mrs. Kellogg.
Reading, "Scissorisms"—Miss Kyle.
Recitation, "Shadows"—Mrs. Kemp.
Song by all, "Auld Lang Syne."

Other funny and attractive features were added which made the evening an exhibition of "Wit" certainly, and the "Wisdom" lay in adopting for the evening's motto the apt quotation—

"But let me laugh awhile,
I've mickle time to grieve."

ROUND ABOUT US.

Last week Wednesday Will Daniels was attacked by a savage boar in Kester Mcrey's barn yard and severely injured. The enraged animal succeeded in getting Daniels down and cut him badly with his tushes. The flesh on one leg was terribly lacerated. A few seconds more and Will would have been killed had he not reached a near-by fence.—Onsted News.

While making up our forms this week preparatory to going to press we noticed a fly creeping over them, says an exchange, and the thought struck us that Mr. Fly was wanting a nice quiet place to go into winter quarters and was looking over our forms to see who advertised and who didn't in order that he might thereby select a suitable place to turn in. "You can't fool a fly."

The fiftieth anniversary of the laying of the corner stone of Hillsdale college will be celebrated July 4th, and Will Carleton, who is an alumnus, has been invited to read a poem for the occasion. President Edmund B. Fairchild, who was orator of the day fifty years ago, will take part in the commencement exercises in June, if his health permits, and will be the guest of the college until after the semi-centennial.—Hudson Gazette.

Thursday the county superintendent of the poor received innumerable applications for assistance. This he thought to be slightly strange, as very fewwere received during the cold snap. A number were pronounced to be "fakes" while others undoubtedly are from honest people. Fuel seems to be the chief want and the secretary is taking steps to see that all of the deserving applicants are furnished with combustibles of some sort.—Jackson Patriot.

They Call Us Liars!

Geo. Stacy, of THE TECUMSEH HERALD, announces to his readers that he has a ton or two of hard coal in one corner of his cellar, and that it is safely locked, and the key to the lock is locked in the safe. We have nothing to say except to refer him to the following from the Newark News:

Three men of Newark met by appointment in the smoking room of the Wessex club to determine which could tell the biggest lie.

"I made $1,793,994 last year," said the first.

"Nothing improbable in that," scoffed the judges. "In this day and age a man that can't make that much every year is a loafer."

"I haven't had to stand in a trolly car once since 1897," said the second man, offering his lie.

"That's a hard one to beat," the judges admitted. "Yet in view of the prevalent toadying to wealth it isn't at all remarkable that other people give up their seats to you."

It was the third man's turn.

"I have a carload of hard coal down in the yards," he said.

"Liar!" shrieked the judges, in their excitement, quite forgetting the spirit of the occasion.—Adrian Press.

A Successful Burier of the Dead.

An Addison correspondent writes to a county paper that the local funeral director having bought a new hearse "is now fully equipped for the undertaking business" and adds with breezy satisfaction: "He has been very successful since he went into the business about a year ago." They do say over there that those who have tried his coffins have since used no other.—Detroit Tribune.

They Want R. F. D.

Some 300 rural throats around Sand Lake and Pentecost are contracting bronchitis in a combined yell, designed to be heard in Washington. They are endeavoring to reach the ear of Congressman H. C. Smith and fill it with an appeal for rural free delivery. If they get it they declare they will bless him with a Pentecostal outpouring. The region adjoins the province of Devil's Lake, which they say has a "free delivery," and are willing to prove by Scripture that it is the oldest in the world.—Detroit Tribune.

Red and Inflamed Eyelids.

Red and inflamed lids, lids which look as though the person had been keeping very late hours, says a recent periodical, and lids which have little crusts formed during the night at the root of the eyelashes, are usually an indication of a low degree of astigmatism. In some cases no relief is had for this condition till proper glasses are procured. A large proportion of the cases, however, will be cured by the following ointment: Yellow oxide of mercury, three grains; yellow vaseline, one-half ounce; mix thoroughly and apply a very little to the edge of the eyelids each night.—Jewelers' Circular-Weekly.

The Limit.

"Don't you think," said the soulful young thing, "that a ruined old church with the ivy clinging to its crumbling walls comes nearer than anything else to realizing one's ideal of patient resignation?"

"That's what it does," replied the young man with the camera. "I don't know anything that will stand for being photographed half as often."—Exchange.

No Cause For Woe.

Stokes—Speaking of mourning, if your rich uncle were to die, should you put on black?

Bickers—Certainly not. If he left me something handsome, why should I be such a hypocrite as to don the garb of woe? On the other hand, if he left me out of his will, how could I consistently put on mourning for such a curmudgeon?—Boston Transcript.

Last Sunday evening at the Tecumseh Baptist church the pastor discoursed about the "coal mines of the bible." Notwithstanding our very thorough and frequent perusal of the good book, we are forced to confess that the chapters relating to coal mines did not come under our notice, except it might be inferred "from deduction." We knew that there was a hot place reserved for some of the Tecumseh merchants, the lawyers there, and a few others whom we do not care to designate, on account of their families, but supposed the fuel was to be brimstone. We think the minister must have given a liberal translation of the Greek, in making "coal mines" out of the original text.—Adrian Press.

THE TECUMSEH HERALD man brags that he has half a ton of hard coal, and adds that "For the next few days there will be a hard coal fire in the HERALD office." and notifies patrons that the office will be open Saturday evenings to accommodate all who desire to pay their subscriptions. It would seem that a man that is able to have half a ton of hard coal is pretty cheeky to ask for other people's money. Now, the enterprise hasn't a pound of coal on hand and no fire in the front room stove, so we advise those who call to pay their subscriptions, to get their dollar ready to plank down before they get a chill.—Manchester Enterprise.

The following from a Kalamazoo paper in regard to Adams:

The principal feature of Mr. Adams' entertainment lies in the fact that he uses no apparatus. In the first part he mystified his audience by causing many small objects such as handkerchiefs, cigars, coins and matches to vanish and return. He borrowed a hat from a gentleman in the audience into which he placed nearly a dozen of eggs that he caused to fall from the air and returned them with the hat. He also caused finger rings to pass from one little box into another, shooting them into the pockets of gentlemen in the audience, laughing the greater part of the time as they tried to watch him find money, cards and other articles on the persons of people in the audience.

Special Announcement.

On Saturday, Jan. 24, a notable revival of T. W. Robertson's sparkling comedy "Caste," will be given at the New Bradley opera house by a distinguished company headed by Mary Scott, the beautiful Californian star; America's foremost character comedian, Robert V. Ferguson; Countess de Casteluechio, the famous grand niece of Napoleon Bonaparte, who won her dramatic spurs in Sir Henry Irving's company; and William Hazeltine, who occupied a leading position in the late Augustin Dalye company.

This promises to be the most important theatrical event of the season. Sale of seats will commence on Thursday, Jan. 22, punctually at eight o'clock. Prices 25 cents to $1.00. On account of the interest already manifested in this engagement, and the large number of inquiries made at the book office, it has been decided that the application for seats sent in before the opening of the sale will be filled, in order of their receipt. Free list positively and entirely suspended.

Great Hit.

The "School for Scandal," presented at the New Bradley Friday evening, was indeed the most elaborate and magnificent production yet presented upon the Tecumseh stage. All of the furniture, candelabras, bric-a-brac and draperies used in the production were carried by the company. The costumes were designed by Brugiere, of Paris, and were historically correct and very gorgeous.

The play itself deals with the scandalous times in London in 1777 and in completeness of detail was the best Tecumseh theatre-goers have yet had the pleasure of attending. Mr. William Owen and a strong cast, including J. W. McConnell, interpreted the play in its best details. A good sized house greeted Mr. Owen and showed marked applause throughout.

Weary Willie Walker.

Mr. O. H. Andrews, who is here arranging for the appearance of "Weary Willie Walker," which comes to the Bradley opera house January 21, says his attraction has met with great success this season, both financially and artistically. It has met the approval of large audiences wherever they have appeared and return dates have been asked for in nearly every town visited. Miss Zoe Mathews, in the role of Vikie Travers, has won the hearts of her audiences completely, while the rest of the cast has proved themselves very clever artists. Master Eddie Burns, the boy singer, has made a mark for himself in the larger vaudeville theatres, but was secured for this company at a large expense.

Pains in the Back

Are symptoms of a weak, torpid or stagnant condition of the kidneys or liver, and are a warning it is extremely hazardous to neglect, so important is a healthy action of these organs.

They are commonly attended by loss of energy, lack of courage, and sometimes by gloomy foreboding and despondency.

"I had pains in my back, could not sleep and when I got up in the morning felt worse than the night before. I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and now I can sleep and get up feeling rested and able to do my work. I attribute my cure entirely to Hood's Sarsaparilla." MRS. J. N. PERRY, care H. S. The Lake Shore Ry. Co. Paid the Village of Tecumseh $300 and

THE TOWNSHIP $100

For the Right of Way across Evans and Cummins Streets.

Saturday the Lake Shore railroad, through their attorney, C. M. Weaver, of Adrian, paid the village $300.00 and the township $100.00 for the right of way taken up on Evans and Cummins streets, by the new "Y" which will connect the D. T. & M. with the Jackson branch. The deal was quickly and satisfactorily made. How quickly trains will go over the "Y" no one knows.

Jerome F. N. Bowen.

Jerome F. N. Bowen was born upon the farm which has ever been his home, on February 8th, 1847, being at the time of his death nearly 56 years of age. He attended the Tecumseh high school for a time after leaving district school and then began his career as a farmer.

For a number of years after their father's death, the two sons, J. F. N. and R. J. W., operated the old farm under the firm name of Bowen Bros., and became far famed as producers of thorough bred Merino sheep. In 1881 this partnership was discontinued, since which time the active management of the place has been in the hands of the deceased.

Honored by innumerable trusts, public and private, he was known as a man whose word was as good as his bond and whose daily life could be pointed to as an example of the highest type of manhood, making hordes of friends and no known enemies. At the time of his death he was treasurer of the township board and master of the local Grange, of which organization he had for a number of years been an ardent member, spending much time in the holding of Farmers' Institutes in various parts of the state.

On December 28th, 1870, Mr. Bowen was united in marriage with Miss Ellen M. Brewster and to them were born five children—one daughter, Miss Ora, and four sons, Don H. C., Paul R., Ralph G. and Percy B., all of whom with the wife and mother, survive him.

On January 3rd, after returning from a pleasant social gathering at which he was of the merriest, he was suddenly stricken with pneumonia and in spite of all human efforts, the onslaught of the grim Reaper could not be stayed and on Saturday morning, January 10th, surrounded by his family, Jerome F. N. Bowen passed away, as he had lived, quietly and peacefully.

The funeral was held from the old home Tuesday afternoon, January 13th, the services being in charge of Rev. L. Bower and the officers of the Grange.

"Caste," a Classical Comedy.

T. W. Robertson's famous old comedy, "Caste," which is rightly regarded as a classic, will be presented at the New Bradley opera house on Saturday, Jan. 24, by a cast of unusual excellence. The revival of this delightful comedy is one of the events of the present dramatic season. Mr. George H. Brennan, under whose direction the production will be made, has spared neither pains nor expense in the selection of the company, and the scenic and mechanical effects are said to be veritable triumphs of stage realism. Robert V. Ferguson, who will enact the role of that shameless old reprobate and drunkard Eccles, is no stranger to local theatre patrons. His work as Sir Pitt Crawley in support of Mrs. Fiske had more to do with the success of "Becky Sharp" than any other individual part. Great as this piece of character acting was, those who have seen Mr. Ferguson as Eccles in "Caste" say that this portrayal is the greatest he has ever essayed. Others in the company are: Mary Scott, Countess de Castelvecchio, Sadie Handy, William Hazeltine, Lawrence Griffith and William A. Evans.

A SIMPLE QUESTION.

Tecumseh People are Requested to Honestly Answer This.

Is not the word of a representative citizen of Tecumseh more convincing than the doubtful utterances of people living everywhere else in the Union? Read this:

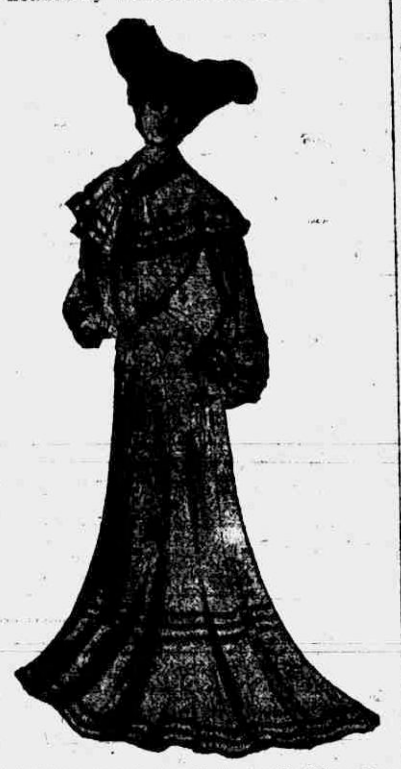
Mr. Charles Bartholomew, who runs the bicycle repair shop in the south eastern section of Tecumseh, says: "Some eighteen years ago the doctors said I had diabetes and that I could not live. I got better but I have been troubled ever since with the kidney secretions, particularly retention of the kidney secretions which caused me considerable anxiety. I tried all kinds of medicines said to be good for kidney trouble but the annoyance still remained. Finally my attention was called to Doan's Kidney Pills and I got them at C. A. Wright's drug store. They are splendid. They gave me more relief and acted quicker than any remedy I ever used. From my experience I can say they are a reliable remedy and I consistently recommend them."

For sale by all dealers: Price 50 cents per box. Foster-Milburn company, Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

LATEST FASHION NOTES.

Costume of English Suiting.

The costume here illustrated is of blue and green English suiting in mixed effect with a vest of soft white silk and velvet and ornaments for decorations. A drop-shoulder collar is a pleasing feature and the sleeves droop over plain cuffs. The flounce in the gored skirt is headed by velvet ribbon and trimmed at the lower edge, all the stitching being done with Corticelli spool silk. A flat velvet collar finishes the neck.



Especially smart are the rather severely designed dresses of checked silk showing green and blue instead of the black and white and blue and white which have been so much used during the past season. Little, if any trimming is employed. The foundation skirt should match either color in the check or else be made of shot taffeta showing the two colors blended.

People who use religion as a cloak in this world will doubtless manage to keep warm in the next without a cloak.

Office Calendars.

A very serviceable calendar has been issued by the Chicago & North-Western R'y for the year 1903. The figures are large and easily distinguished, the days of the month and the consecutive day of the year are both shown; and the publication is of that solid and creditable sort which makes it desirable for business men and manufacturers. Plants and Gravitation.

The sense of gravitation in plants is that sense, for example, that makes a pine tree grow straight upward. A plant that curves assumes that position because its sense of gravitation makes it take the one best suited to its needs. Some flower stalks are very curiously guided by the gravitation sense. The narcissus is an example. At first there is a straight shaft piercing the ground with its compact pointed flower bud, but as the flower opens the stalk bends close to the top and brings the flower tube into a roughly horizontal position, where it shows off its bright colored crown to attract the insects, on the visits of which it depends for fertilization. The flowers are guided to the right position by the gravitation sense, and they increase or diminish the angular bend in their stalk until the right position is attained.

Hugo and the Poets.

"One day," said Turgeneff in his "Reminiscences," "we were discussing German poetry. Victor Hugo, who did not like others to monopolize the talk when he was by, interrupted me with a disquisition upon Goethe. 'His best work,' he remarked in an Olympian tone, 'is "Wallenstein."'

"'Pardon me, cher maitre, "Wallenstein" is not Goethe's, but Schiller's.'

"'No matter; I have read neither of these authors, but I understand their spirit better than those who know them by heart.'

"What could I reply?"

Old Owosso Drayman Figures In an Interesting Story.

Owosso, Mich., Jan. 19.—The old gray horse which has hauled Patrick Hamberry's dray for thirty years died Sunday afternoon, and it is believed the owner, who was deeply attached to the faithful animal, will not long survive. Hamberry, who is 70 years of age, sat for an hour holding his comrade's head. He could not believe the animal was dead.

Man and horse have figured in an interesting story. Twenty-seven years ago Hamberry limped rheumatically into a local saloon. The proprietor and three friends, a cigar man, a rich horseman and a real estate dealer, began poking fun at the old man, telling him he was soon to die. Finally they agreed to insure his life for their own benefit, which was done. Hamberry remarked when the policy was received:

"I'll follow every one of you to your graves," and he made the prophecy come true.

The cigar manufacturer was the first to die, about ten years ago. When the funeral procession started for Oak Hill cemetery Hamberry, his dray and his old gray horse, swung into line.

Two years later the saloonist joined the great majority, and the drayman and his horse were again in line.

About six years ago the horseman succumbed. A local military company was a guard of honor in front and the old drayman brought up the rear.

A few months ago the real estate dealer took leave of earth, but Hamberry, out of deference to his own family's wishes, did not turn out, although he was on the streets with his dray when the procession passed.

GUILTY OF MANSLAUGHTER.

Jury Bring This Verdict Sunday Against Calvin Linerd.

Owosso, Mich., Jan. 19.—Calvin Linerd stands convicted of manslaughter. The jury brought in the verdict at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon, after being out twenty-four hours. Judge Smith, who received the verdict, complimented the jurymen upon their behavior the past week. The jury had a set of resolutions praising the judge and attorneys.

The verdict is a victory for the defense, as Linerd offered to plead guilty to manslaughter before the trial and prosecution refused to accept it. The verdict is generally satisfactory except to some residents of Shaftsburg, who think Linerd should have a vote of thanks for killing Stevens.

Peat Deposits In Michigan.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 19.—The annual report of State Geologist Lane, which is now in the hands of the printer, has the following to say on the subject of peat in Michigan:

"There has been a great wealth of peat in the state, but it has in places been destroyed by fire and by drainage. Many of the peat deposits occupy the beds of filled or practically filled lakes. If one takes a map of the state and notices where lakes are abundant, one will also outline the areas most rich in peat. Areas of peat to be worth considering for factory purposes should, according to circulars, be equivalent to not less than 200 acres, six feet thick. This would mean 200 tons per acre per foot, only 2,400,000 tons, which at only 10 tons a day output would mean a seven-year life for the plant. One ton of peat is said to be equal to one cord of four-foot dry maple wood. The price at which it is retailed at the factory varies from $3 50 to $4 50 a ton. Peat factories have been planned for location near Capac and at Chelsea. The former is, I believe, nearly finished."

Domestic Row May End Fatally.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 19.—Late Saturday night the sheriff's force was called to the corner of William and First streets by a domestic disagreement that may end in the death of the husband. A man named Loerke and his wife got into a scrap at their home at the above place. He pulled a knife and slashed her over the eye and then jabbed the weapon into his abdomen. He is in a very dangerous condition, but the woman will survive.

Murderer Confesses.

Gladstone, Mich., Jan. 19.—The mystery surrounding the disappearance on Dec. 2 of Andrew Peterson of Martins Bay has been cleared up by the confession of George Hardwick of Sand Bay, a few miles south of this place. According to Hardwick's story, Peterson owed him $80 and he deliberately murdered Peterson to secure a horse in payment of the debt.

Mrs. Henry Downs entertained friends with a five o'clock tea Saturday.

Miss Jennie Watson came from Flint Saturday to work in the woolen mill.

Mrs. Mary Rood and Mrs. Charles Woodward returned to Detroit Monday.

Everett Loring, of Coldwater, was a guest at the home of Mrs. Sara Wastell, over Sunday.

Mrs. J. L. Tuttle Jr. and Mrs. George Waterhouse entertained friends Tuesday evening at Mrs. Tuttle's.

Miss Kittie Van Tuyle has organized a dancing class to be held at the Clintonian hotel Saturday afternoons from four to six o'clock.

Robert Woodard died at the home of his father, Benjamin Woodard, Tuesday noon, January 13, after an illness of a few months of consumption. Robert was a young man of excellent character and his friends were grief stricken to hear the announcement of his failing health on his arrival home from the east only six weeks ago where he had been for several years employed in a woolen mill as boss finisher. All in the power of kind friends and a loving wife and relatives was done to relieve the sufferer, but his life was not spared. The funeral was held Saturday at the home of his father. The pall bearers were six of his Clinton friends: James Riley, Ed Winder, George Sturm, Chas. Carroll, Dr. J. L. Tuttle Jr. and George Lancaster.

THE OLD SAUCER WAY

IN CASE OF RABIES

Professor Novy Tells the Health Conference What to Do.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 17.—Last evening the conference of Michigan health officials ended. Health Officer Guy L. Kiefer of Detroit was named chairman of a committee appointed to urge the passage of laws by the state legislature embodying recommendations advocated by the conference. These recommendations include more thorough inspection of foods, milk tests, more rigid vital statistics, a state sanitarium for consumptives, etc.

Yesterday's papers and discussions were largely attended. Professor F. G. Novy, the eminent bacteriologist of the university, spoke on "Rabies, its restriction and prevention." The procedure in case of persons bitten by dogs suspected of rabies was detailed. "If possible, spare the dog's life, and if he develops rabies later send the patient to a Pasteur institute. But if the dog should have been killed, let all speed be made in getting his brain and spinal cord to a laboratory. The surest way is for the local health officer to catch the first train with the dead animal. The longer the delay the weaker the poison and the slower the development of the disease in guinea pigs. The time in which rabies develops in people is never under thirteen days, usually five weeks, and sometimes not for a year."

Professor Novy concluded the conference with a paper on "The white plague in California, and what to do if that disease should appear in Michigan."

A Little Boy's Life Saved.

I have a few words to say regarding Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It saved my little boy's life and I feel that I cannot praise it enough. I bought a bottle of it from A. E. Steere, of Goodwin, S. D., and when I got home with it the the poor baby could hardly breathe. I gave the medicine as directed every ten minutes until he "threw up" and then I thought sure he was going to choke to death. We had to pull the phlegm out of his mouth in great long strings. I am positive that if I had not got that bottle of cough medicine, my boy would not be on earth today.—Joel Demont, Inwood, Iowa. The late Professor Herrmann, the magician, was possessed not only of great strength in his hands, but of such skill as would enable him to perform apparent feats of strength which would be impossible to a far stronger man.

His greatest feat along this line was to place two packs of cards together and tear them across.

A friend of his, going into a cafe with Herrmann, met another friend who was accompanied by a quiet looking man with a big mustache.

The four sat down together, and Herrmann was at length induced to tear two packs of cards in half.

"That," said his admiring friend, "is something no other man alive can do."

The quiet man with the mustache coolly picked up the torn packs and tore the halved sections into quarter sections.

Then, as the rest glared amazedly at him, he remarked:

"I forgot to mention my name is Kellar."

It was Herrmann's foremost rival in the sleight of hand business.

Both Come In Bottles.

The father was testing his little boy's knowledge of the story of Noah, which he had carefully rehearsed. The boy had been thinking hard, and his answer to the first question showed that he had at least the virtue of originality.

"Now," said papa, "can you tell me how Noah knew that the waters had gone down?"

The boy hesitated a minute, as if seeking for proper words to express himself; then he said:

"Noah knew the waters had gone down because the dove came back bringing him a pickle."

Olives and pickles were synonymous terms in the small boy's mind for things which come in bottles and ....

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure:

"I suffered agonizing pain in the left breast and between my shoulders from heart trouble. My heart would palpitate, flutter, then skip beats, until I could no longer lie in bed. Night after night I walked the floor, for to lie down would have meant sudden death. My condition seemed almost hopeless when I began taking Dr. Miles' Heart Cure, but it helped me from the first. Later I took Dr. Miles' Nervine with the Heart Cure and the effect was astonishing. I earnestly implore similar sufferers to give these remedies a trial."

Hard on the Parson.

Just after the battle of Perryville, in October, 1862, says a Georgia exchange, Dr. Savage, a strong Union man, was at one of his appointments to baptize some children. There was a large crowd, and a sturdy southern matron brought her four children to the altar. "Name this child," said the Union preacher, laying his hand on the boy's head. "Simon Bolivar Buckner," was the reply, which caused a smile to come over the congregation, but the brave preacher went on with his duty.

"Name this child," taking the next in order. "Pierre Gustave Toutant Beauregard." And the smile grew into a snicker, while Dr. Savage became red in the face. He baptized the young namesake of the soldier and went on with the ceremony. "Name this one," he gasped, reaching for the third. "Albert Sidney Johnson," came the answer. The smile became audible and the preacher apoplectic. Heaving a sigh of relief, he took the fourth child, a little girl, whose gender he fondly supposed would preclude a continuation of heroic reproduction and said, "Name this child." "Mary Stonewall Jackson Lee," came the response that set the congregation in a roar, while the Union parson thought he had held in his arms the whole Southern Confederacy.

JUBILEE AT ALBION.

College Celebrated Raising of the Debt—Many Notables Present.

Albion, Mich., Jan. 17.—Friday was a gala day for Albion college. All of the enthusiasm the students and friends of the college have been generating since New Year's day, when the debt was raised, was let loose with full force, and the result was the most successful epoch-marking jubilee the institution has ever known. There was no cut and dried program, but the exercises were conducted just as informally as possible.

Exercises began at the college chapel at 10 o'clock. Dr. Berry, editor of the Epworth Herald, was the first speaker, and he was followed by President Gurney of Hillsdale and President Snyder of the M. A. C. Speaking was interspersed with music. At noon 400 people banqueted at the Methodist church, and at 2:30 the afternoon program was continued in the parlors of that edifice. President Sperry of Olivet was the first speaker. President Jones of Ypsilanti Normal; President Jones of Kalamazoo, and Dr Dawe of Detroit, field secretary of the college, made short speeches.

Just before leaving for his train Governor Bliss Made a short speech. As the governor left the church the students gave him a rousing yell and the great celebration soon ended.

Strangled Himself to Death.

Birmingham, Mich., Jan. 17.—George W. Beekman, a veterinary surgeon 68 years old, committed suicide by hanging himself in his room in the National hotel. About 5 o'clock Friday morning one of the women connected with the hotel discovered blood on the floor of the bathroom, and later Beekman's dead body was found in his room. He had fastened a strap around his neck attached the loose end to the bedstead and then throwing himself into a crouching position had slowly strangled to death. There is little doubt that despondency drove Beekman to his death. His wife, with whom he had not lived for about ten years, is in Alleghany, Pa.; and there are two daughters.

To Camp With Regulars.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 17.—The state military board is here and before adjourning expects to take action on a resolution asking the governor to request the war department that the Michigan national guard camp this year with the regulars, in accordance with the provisions of the Dick bill which passed congress and became a law this week. In all probability this resolution will be adopted. The beneficial results of this association with the regulars under the supervision of regular army officers are obvious.

Washington, Jan. 17.—Michigan pensions were granted Friday as follows: Increase—George I. Huntley, Allegan, $12; Cyrus Beedy, Smyrna, $24; John Saulsbury, Morenci, $10; Charles L. Widows—Mary Ann Abbey, Hemlock, $12; Lovena Hoffmaster, Allegan, $8.

He Dined With Sutton.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Jan. 17.—United States Marshal Wheeler returned from Mexico Friday morning. Wheeler had dined with Eli Sutton there, but beyond asking for friends the colonel had little to say. He is working for the street railway company, doing resort booming and is writing a book descriptive of Mexican attractions for circulation in the States. He said he was feeling well, but looked thin. His family is with him.

Saw High In Mexico.

Ovid, Mich., Jan. 17.—J. M. Brysor of Owosso, who has been on a trip to Mexico, says he saw Senator Hiram High in the City of Mexico and declares that High is far from enjoying his forced exile. He says he is doing well, however, and expects to pay back the greater part of his stealings. High left here under a cloud some months ago being short about $40,000.

That Number 13.

So prevalent is the prejudice against the number 13 that car companies in many cities have been obliged to omit it, as the car bearing it did not "earn its living." In St. Joseph, Mo., No. 13 happened to be the car oftenest run over a certain line in a locality chiefly inhabited by negroes. It was discovered after a time that these would walk blocks out of their way to take the cars of a rival line, but as soon as No. 14 was sent down in their district the company's receipts resumed their previous figure. Thirteen as a house number also is looked upon with suspicion, and the expedient of 11, 11½ and then 15 is often employed.—New York Tribune.

One of the Great Dinners of Venice.

Perhaps the most expensive banquet ever given in Venice was that to Henry III. of France. He was feasted in the great hall of the doges' palace, and there were silver plates for 3,000 guests. At another time the same monarch was entertained at a sugar banquet—the napkins, plates, knives, forks and even the bread (so called) were all of sugar. The Venetians were mightily pleased when Henry took his napkin in his hands and to his surprise found that it broke to pieces. At this feast 1,260 different dishes were served, and 300 sugar effigies were distributed among the ladies.

Aguinaldo Petitions That U. S. Grant Philippines a Loan.

WANTS $20,000,000 IN GOLD

And Credit For $80,000,000—Start an Agricultural Bank and Sublet the Money—He Figures on Returning Loan in Twenty Years.

Washington, Jan. 21.—Secretary Root Tuesday transmitted to the senate and house copies of a petition received by him, through Governor Taft, from Aguinaldo, the late insurgent leader in the Philippines. The petition is a remarkable presentation of the conditions now existing in the Philippines, and Secretary Root hastened to send it to congress because it went a long way toward supporting the statements he had made to the committees of that body and also demonstrating the necessity for prompt and exhaustive action on the part of congress to prevent disaster and distress in the archipelago.

Aguinaldo says in part:

"Profoundly impressed by the sorrows and calamities which afflict my people, and bearing in mind the good intentions which have inspired the acts of the civil commission, I have taken heart to present a project of a purely economic character which, in my opinion, would remedy, if not completely, at least in great part, the precarious situation in which we all find ourselves.

"I propose to the honorable civil commission to obtain from congress a United States treasury loan of twenty million dollars, gold, in cash, and also a credit of eighty million dollars, gold, which will guarantee the issue of paper to serve as money in the islands. This sum shall be used for the development and improvement of Philippine agriculture and shall be paid within twenty years, the payments being made in three installments at the end of ten, fifteen and twenty years respectively, and at the rate of twenty-five million at the end of the first period, which would cancel so much of the credit, and twenty-five and fifty million at the end of the two remaining periods. The amount of the credit would not be taken out of the United States treasury like the loan, and both would be without interest and could never be transferred to any other foreign nation.

"When the loan and credit were approved and the above mentioned sum here in the Philippines, a bank would be opened. The bank would begin to operate, making available for the agriculturists such sums as they should ask for, in compliance with the necessary formalities, at an annual maximum of 4 per cent, payable semi-annually.

"Subtracting from the annual income of $3,920,000 the annual expense for salaries and other necessary expenses of the bank, which may be reckoned at about $700,000, there would remain a net annual income of $3,220,000 which, added to the capital at compound interest, under the same conditions during the following years, at the end of sixteen years would free both the actual capital and the supplementary credit; that is, the bank would have liquidated its debt to the United States treasury, and there would remain a balance of at least $40,000,000 for the continuance of its work. Allowing four years more for ample time makes the twenty years mentioned.

"It may be that when this project is known I shall be called an enthusiast and a dreamer, but the contemplation of the bitter misfortunes which oppress this suffering people, exhausted by evils and calamities without number, obliges me to leave my retirement to fulfill what I believe to be my duty. Respectfully,

"EMILIO AGUINALDO FAMY."

ENGINE EXPLODED.

Locomotive Hurled Sixty Feet—Four Men Killed.

Coshocton, O., Jan. 21.—Four men were killed by an explosion of the boiler on an eastbound Pan Handle freight train four miles west of Bowerstown yesterday. The locomotive was hurled sixty feet in the air and crashed down upon a passing westbound freight train, smashing the second car behind the engine.

Twenty-six cars were hurled down an embankment. Fireman McCurdy and Brakeman Clemens, who were on the engine that blew up, were instantly killed, as well as Engineer J. D. Ward and Brakeman Petrie of the passing freight train. Engineer Dan O'Donnell was fatally injured.

Seizing Coal Is a Crime.

Columbus, O., Jan. 21.—Governor Nash has sent a communication to the sheriff and citizens of Green county and the mayor of Xenia, regarding the recent seizure of coal trains there. He says that such conduct amounts to riot under the state law and calls upon the officials to suppress disorder, and the citizens to assist them.

ASSAULT THE FORT

Three German Warships Attack Fort San Carlos.

TERRIFIC ROAR FROM GUNS

Venezuelans Returned the Fire With Great Rapidity—Fleeing Indian Fishermen Report Village of San Carlos Shelled and Burning.

Maracaibo, Vez., Jan. 22.—Three German war vessels, supposed to be the Panther, Vineta and Falke, began shelling the fort of San Carlos at half past 10 o'clock Wednesday morning. The fort returned the fire. The engagement was in progress at 1 o'clock in the afternoon.

The correspondent of the Associated Press, in a rowboat, approached to within three miles of the fort at noon. The roar of guns was terrific. The Panther appeared to be not more than 500 yards from the fort. Her guns were being fired every minute. The fort could not be seen for the clouds of smoke, but it was plain that the Venezuelan gunners were answering the German fire splendidly and with great rapidity.

At 1 o'clock in the afternoon an explosion occurred, apparently in the fort, and a cloud of smoke covered part of the ramparts. A numbe rof Indian fishermen were intercepted fleeing from the direction of the fort in their dugout canoes. They reported that the smoke seen was from the burning village of San Carlos, which had been shelled by the German ships and was in flames.

The shelling of San Carlos has created much excitement among the German residents of this port, who have protested against the action of the warships.

Peace In Baseball.

Cincinnati, Jan. 22.—At 2 o'clock this morning the national baseball meeting adjourned, when it was announced that after both the majority and the minority reports had been disposed of and copies of the same placed on file, the first by Mr. Robison and the second by Mr. Merrmann, was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That the agreement heretofore entered into between the committee of this league and a committee of the American league, which is commonly known as the peace agreement and which agreement is herewith attached, be and the same is hereby ratified and adopted, and ordered spread upon the minutes of this meeting."

Hatch Declared a Sane Man.

New York, Jan. 22.—In July, 1902, Rufus Hatch of the city, son of the widely known banker of the same name, was incarcerated in Bloomingdale insane asylum. A jury has just declared him sane and ordered his release, restoring to him management of a large fortune left him by his deceased father. Hatch lived in Detroit and during the Spanish-American war enlisted in a Michigan regiment and fought with them in Cuba.

Five Sailors Met Death.

Atlantic City, N. J., Jan. 22.—The bark Abiel Abbott, salt laden, from Turk's island, for New York, went aground near Ship Bottom light Tuesday night and is fast going to pieces. Five of her crew of nine were picked up yesterday by the lifesavers, but it is believed the other four were killed by falling wreckage. One of the men later died of exposure.

Renounce Rights of Church Lands.

Washington, Jan. 22.—Senator Foraker yesterday introduced a bill renouncing, on the part of the United States, all right to the church lands in Porto Rico. The bill grants the right of naturalization to the Porto Ricans and to the people inhabiting other possessions of the United States similarly situated.

"Winnie" Mercer Buried.

East Liverpool, O., Jan. 22.—Loving hands tenderly laid away yesterday afternoon all that was mortal of "Winnie" Mercer, manager of the All-American baseball team, who took his life in a San Francisco hotel. The funeral was from the First Presbyterian church and was the largest ever held in the city.

Nellie Cropsey's Murder Avenged.

Hartford, N. C., Jan. 22.—The jury in the Wilcox case yesterday afternoon brought in a verdict of murder in the second degree and fixing his punishment at thirty years in the penitentiary at hard labor. Wilcox was charged with the murder of Nellie Cropsey and had been tried once before, but the jury disagreed.

Train Crew Was Helpless.

New York, Jan. 22.—A crowd of men, women and children yesterday attacked and captured a train of seven cars loaded with more than 200 tons of anthracite coal on the Long Island railroad in Brooklyn. The train crew tried to fight them off, but the crowd was too big.

Earthquake In Massachusetts.

Whitman, Mass., Jan. 22.—Two fissures in the earth, about three feet deep and a few inches wide, running for a distance of a quarter of a mile, are the only evidences of a mysterious explosion which shook this town just before daybreak yesterday. Houses were shaken violently.

New York to Banquet Marconi.

New York, Jan. 22.—Mr. Marconi, the inventor of wireless telegraphy, will arrive in New York tomorrow. On Saturday evening he will be tendered a banquet at the Metropolitan club by the American board of directors, at which there will be present about twenty or thirty invited guests.

Settled the Wing Question.

Two little Philadelphia girls the other day strayed into the realms of theology and anthropology, though of course they didn't know it.

"Say," said the first, "we's Dod's 'ittle angels, isn't we?"

"Yeth," lisped the second, "but we hasn't dot any feathers on uth, like the 'ittle angels my mamma showed me in a picture book."

"Well, we had once, don't oo know," returned the first, "but Dod pulled 'em all out before him sent us down here."

"What for did him do that?"

"So that we couldn't fly up in the trees when our mammas want us to come in and be washed!"

FAST LEGISLATION

Representator Colby, of Detroit, Proposes to Stop It.

COMMITTEES MUST SEE BILLS

According to a Resolution Introduced by Him—War to Be Waged Against Chattel Mortgage Sharks—Alger Vote Stood 113 to 10.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 22.—Acting Governor Fuller performed the ceremony at high noon Wednesday of declaring General Russell A. Alger elected United States senator by a vote of 113 to 10 of both houses. The joint session was a perfunctory affair of about ten minutes' duration. Senator Simons, in behalf of the Detroit delegation, wired General Alger apprising him of the declaration of the joint convention.

Mr. Colby in the morning introduced the Detroit Municipal league bill, which has already been laid before the senate by Senator Simons.

The committee on elections yesterday afternoon recommended that the Wayne and Kent counties primary election bills be referred back to the senate and printed for the use of the committees.

The chattel mortgage sharks are in for a bumping before many moons. Senator Simons and Representative Denby have already agreed on a bill which they have laid before their respective houses. Senator Scripps yesterday noticed a bill for the incorporation and regulation of small loaning companies, while still another measure was presented to the house by Representative Shea of Detroit, by which all mortgages, notes, contracts of debt, loans, etc., on which more than the legal rate of interest of 7 per cent is charged, shall be declared null and void.

Representatives are beginning to get leary of lightning express legislation, and a Berrien county school district bill, which passed the senate Tuesday, was held up and referred to committee. A resolution offered by Representative Colby of Detroit, expressing it as the sense of the house that hereafter no local measures shall be passed without previous reference to committee, unless the introducer can satisfactorily explain the necessity of immediate action, was adopted.

The taxation of all classes of water craft by 3 cents per net ton, all collections to be turned into the state treasury, and exemption from all other county or state taxation, is the object of a bill offered by Representative J. H. Read of Copemish.

Mr. Denby will shortly present another bill amending the general acts to allow business corporations to be formed "for any lawful purpose," instead of being restricted as at present. He will also ask that the minimum requirement of capital be lowered from $5,000 to $1,000.

Miss May Page Caston addressed the house on the evils of the cigarette habit for ten minutes in the morning.

The St. Louis fair commission project is taken care of in Representative Seeley's bill, though he specifies no amount in his appropriation clause providing for Michigan's exhibit. Friends of the measure, however, want to have about $75,000 paid out.

The senate and Governor Bliss may not be so far apart on the appointment of game warden than would at first appear from a bill introduced into the upper house Wednesday by Senator Doherty, the Bliss leader. The bill makes it necessary for the governor to submit to the senate for confirmation the name of his appointee for fish and game warden. If the governor felt disposed to veto the measure it would take a two-thirds vote of the senate to pass it.

Senator Lockerby's bill to provide for the reception and retirement of crippled children between 12 and 14 years at the Coldwater state school, carries with it an appropriation of $25,000 for the erection and maintenance of two children's buildings.

Senator Brown didn't filch any honor from Senator Westover by introducing an anti-cigarette measure. Brown's bill does not interfere with original packages of cigarette trade in that form is a part of interstate commerce. Westover has another measure to establish a license system in the cigarette business. Miss Gaston prefers Brown's bill, as it goes farther.

Senator Doherty is preparing a bill appropriating $175,000 for a home for epileptics, which he hopes to locate near Saginaw.

Prisoner and Guard Missing.

Fort Wayne, Mich., Jan. 22.—Two familiar faces are missing at Fort Wayne. Sentry Driscol of Company F had the guarding of Prisoner George Davenport. Davenport was assigned as helper to the garrison plumber and Driscoll's stunt was to follow them both about with a loaded gun. Some time during yesterday afternoon the prisoner escaped, and stranger still, it is alleged the sentry deserted his post. The question now baffling the authorities at the fort is whether or not the two men agreed to skip together.

Memorial to Professor Lodeman.

Ypsilanti, Mich., Jan. 22.—Memorial exercises in honor of the late Professor August Lodeman, head of the department of modern languages, were held in Normal hall Wednesday, the hall being crowded with students and citizens. The principal address was by Daniel Putnam, the venerable professor of psychology and pedagogy.

Farmers Worked the People.

Albion, Mich., Jan. 22.—It is reported from reliable sources that farmers living between this city and Marshall have been buying coal in this city, taking it to Marshall and selling it at a nice advance in price.

Insane Over a Line Fence Row.

Monroe, Mich., Jan. 22.—J. Shank, a wealthy farmer of 65 years, living at Yeagerville, twelve miles from here, cut his throat with a butcher knife, but may live. He got into a line fence row and it is thought to have preyed on his mind.

NOTED EDUCATOR DEAD.

Austin George of Ypsilanti Succumbs to Heart Disease.

Ypsilanti, Mich., Jan. 21.—Professor Austin George, superintendent of public schools, died Tuesday of heart trouble, aged 61 years. The public schools were at once dismissed.

The shock to the people of Ypsilanti was very great. Professor George had always been intensely active in educational affairs throughout the state. He was born at Litchfield, Mich., in 1841. He attended the union school at Jonesville, graduated from the Detroit commercial college in 1858, and entered the normal school, graduating in 1863. In 1862 he helped greatly to organize Company E, Seventeenth Michigan infantry, went to the front as company clerk and participated in the battle of South Mountain. He was very prominent in Grand Army circles, and last year was regimental president of the Seventeenth Michigan infantry.

In 1863 Professor George became principal of the Kalamazoo high school, in 1864 he studied history and law at the University of Michigan. In 1872 he held the chair of rhetoric and literature in Kalamazoo college, next year becoming superintendent of the Kalamazoo public schools, holding that position till he became professor of rhetoric and literature in the State Normal school at Ypsilanti in 1879. In 1882 he became director of the normal training school.

He was progressive and a pioneer in educational lines. Probably no man was in closer touch with all the schools in Michigan.

At the time of his death he was superintendent of the schools of Ypsilanti.

In 1868 he was united in marriage to Mrs. Sarah Wadhams of Kalamazoo. She and six children survive him.

GRAND CHAPTER, R. A. M.

In Session at Detroit—Over 400 Visitors Registered.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 21.—The largest attendance in its history was recorded at the fifty-fifth annual convocation of the grand chapter of the Royal Arch Masons when the session opened in the Masonic temple on Lafayette avenue yesterday afternoon at 1 o'clock. Over 400 delegates and visitors registered from the 135 chapters located all over Michigan.

Charles L. Stevens, Ypsilanti, grand high priest, read his annual address, in which he commented upon the very prosperous condition of the order in Michigan, and of the large increase in the membership. He recommended that 10 cents per capita of the annual dues be devoted to the maintenance of the Masonic home at Grand Rapids, and later the recommendation was adopted.

Grand Treasurer Emerson M. Newell of Fenton reported receipts for the year amounting to $10,237 68. A balance of about $3,000, added to $4,000 on hand, swelled the surplus to $7,000.

Among the measures adopted at the session was a law relative to dimits, the existing one being changed to correspond with all the provisions of the blue lodge.

Will Be Tried by Jury.

Port Huron, Mich., Jan. 21.—In the suit brought by the supreme tent, K. O. T. M., against the Port Huron Savings bank, in which plaintiff seeks to recover $50,000 alleged to have been converted by its treasurer, Charles D. Thompson, who was also assistant cashier of the bank, to cover up his shortages, the attorneys for the plaintiff moved to have the case decided by the appointment of three referees under an old statute. Judge Law has denied the motion for the reason that it would practically bar the defense of the right of trial by jury.

Guilty of Blackmail.

Flint, Mich., Jan. 21.—As had all along been expected, the jury in the case of Joseph W. Stockwell, charged with obtaining the signature of Jacob Raquet of Saginaw to a note for $3,000 by false pretenses, brought in a verdict of guilty. The maximum penalty is ten years. Stockwell never denied getting the money from Raquet, but claimed that he and the others acted as attorneys for Rose Taylor, who alleged Raquet had gotten her into trouble. They asked Raquet first for $3,500, but compromised on $3,000.

Brunke Murder Trial Begins.

St. Joseph, Mich., Jan. 21.—After consuming a day and a half in selecting a jury, the case of Harry Brunke, charged with the murder of Lee Shearer, was taken up Tuesday afternoon. The case was taken up by the prosecution, and two witnesses, Clarence Evans and John Lein, who were with Shearer on the afternoon of the murder, were examined, but gave little information. An effort was made by the defense to impeach the testimony of Lein.

Michigan Postmasters.

Washington, Jan. 21.—Michigan postmasters were appointed Tuesday as follows: Rollins, Lenawee county, C. D. Wood, vice Bernard L. Peebles, removed; Waucedah, Dickinson county, Vital Rochon, vice Louis N. Lauthier, resigned; Wingleton, Lake county, Mrs. Ella Bates, vice Charles H. Bates, dead.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

CHAPTER IV.

THE MEETING AT THE FORGE

It was characteristic of Frances Gordon that, no matter how great the stress of social or other duties, her mind never lost room for such favorite schemes as were closest to her heart.

It was by reason of this characteristic that, while her busy father was deep in the mysteries and intricacies of the Moscow conference, the subtleties of which increased as the time for separation and departure drew nearer, Frances bethought her of a fitting opportunity to make good a promise she had made to Vladimir Paulpoff, the blacksmith.

During a conversation held several weeks before Vladimir had expressed a desire to study certain books which were apparently beyond his reach. Frances promised to obtain the books, and she did so. These made quite a respectable package, and a drosky was called to convey her to the railway station.

It was nothing new for Frances to travel alone as far as from Moscow to Perm, but on this occasion her father, with some sort of premonition, begged her to send the books by messenger.

"Oh, no," she said in her quiet manner of insistence. "We are about to return to the east, and I shall not see poor Vladimir for a long time."

"Hang Vladimir!" exclaimed Gordon as he saw his self willed young lady step into the drosky.

Having alighted at Perm, she hired another drosky to take her and the precious books to the forge.

The driver was a huge, surly individual, whose face was covered with a thick mass of beard and whose voice, when speaking to one not established as his superior, was heavy and insolent.

Responding to the call of Frances, he swung his heavy drosky in toward the door of her hotel. A police inspector stood near, and the driver saluted in humility.

"I hate women!" he said to himself. "They pay nothing and have things happen to them. I shall get into trouble before I lose her."

Frances stepped toward the vehicle, and the driver's mouth opened.

"Such a woman!" muttered the drosky driver. "She must be English or an American. If she was a Russian, she would be a princess."

Frances had had ample experience with his class in all parts of Russia. She calmly stepped into the drosky and handed him a silver coin.

"I want to go to the iron shops of the Paulpoffs, on the South road," she said. "Paulpoff—Michael Paulpoff and his son Vladimir. Do you know them?"

"Yes, I know them. But do you—know—what has happened?"

"No. Has any one been ill?"

"No; but"—

The police inspector came up.

"Any trouble here?" he asked sharply.

"Trouble? Oh, no!" replied Frances. "I was just asking the driver some questions."

"Where is it you wish to go?"

"To the ironworkers'—Paulpoff."

A warning look that meant volumes to the initiated shot from the inspector to the driver.

The horses were whipped up, and the vehicle rolled clumsily over the road.

"You said something had happened," said Frances. "Is any one sick at the Paulpoffs?"

"No; it wasn't that," answered the driver. "But the rain yesterday broke up the road. I did not think you would wish to come."

"Nonsense! There must be a safe way to get there."

In truth the way was as safe and comfortable as it had ever been, but the warning look of the inspector had prevented the driver from imparting the knowledge he had of the Paulpoffs.

"Let the police tell their own tales—they are always true then—according to police standards," muttered the driver.

It was a long drive to the forge, and when the drosky drew near, having passed through the wild and almost unsettled region between it and Perm, Frances was struck with an air of mystery that seemed to have suddenly enveloped the place.

There was no sound of the tremendous blows of Vladimir that sent the ring of steel far into the forest. No smoke came from the chimneys. Old Mamma Paulpoff had been wont to run to her door to see every arrival, but she was not to be seen.

The wolfhound that had been Vladimir's pet sat whining upon the porch and was evidently weak with hunger.

"Old Boris!" cried Frances, leaping from the drosky. "Where is your handsome master?"

The hound, who remembered her, placed his cold nose in her hand lovingly. He seemed to feel that he had found a friend.

Frances stepped to the door and pushed it open.

"Oh!" she cried.

She had opened the door on Prince Nicholas Neslerov, who stood there, about to depart, evidently, with a painting under his arm.

"Mlle. Gordon," he said, with a bow and smile.

"Where are the Paulpoffs?" she asked.

"Why, you have not, then, been informed of their misfortune?"

"Misfortune! I knew nothing of any misfortune. What has happened?"

"They are dead."

"Dead! All the Paulpoffs dead! Impossible! Papa Paulpoff and Mamma Paulpoff might die, they were so old, but Vladimir! Impossible! So young and powerful! Nothing but the weapon of an enemy could kill him in this healthy place."

"I spoke as we speak, mademoiselle. The Paulpoffs are not really dead. We speak of a man who is caught in crime and sent off—exiled—as dead. He is dead to his friends and to the world. You understand?"

Frances stood rigid and white, the package of books forgotten in the hands of the drosky driver. Her nails bit into the tender flesh of her clinched hands. Her eyes studied the face of the governor of Tomsk.

"Vladimir has not been caught in any crime," she said, with a sort of gasp. "Impossible! He was so simple and honest! What crime?"

"Conspiracy against his imperial majesty the czar."

"And where is he now?"

"On the way to Siberia."

"Siberia! Vladimir Paulpoff sent to Siberia! And where are his parents?"

"One in a family taken red handed condemns all. The old people are also on their way to Siberia."

Frances swayed a little. She had studied Russian customs and Russian justice and shuddered as she realised the horrible torture in store for these simple work people who had never, she felt convinced, harbored an evil thought against any man. To her they had always spoken in terms of loyalty and praise of the czar.

The face of Neslerov was inscrutable. He held the picture loosely and carelessly, and the girl caught a glimpse of the face.

"That is Vladimir's picture!" she cried. "What are you doing with it?"

"I am sending it to him," was the reply of Neslerov. "It so happened that I had occasion to visit my chateau near Graslov and rode by here at the time the inspector of police was making the arrest. I remembered what you said to me at Moscow and tried to do what I could for the poor fellow, at first doubting his guilt. But the inspector was certain, and so all that was left to me was to ask Vladimir what favor I could perform for him. He asked me to send him this picture, and I have arranged with the governor of Perm to permit it to be passed along to him."

"It is a beautiful face," said Frances. "Vladimir has the soul of a great artist in him. But in Siberia he"—

She shuddered and ended her sentence abruptly.

"I have done more for him, for you," continued Neslerov. "There is another picture—he painted from memory. I have arranged to purchase it for a good price, and he shall not lose the money I promised him. It was a beginning to certain steps I had thought of to assist him."

"My own face!" cried Frances in astonishment as Neslerov showed the second picture.

"Yes, and the remarkable part of it is it took him but a short time. I described you, and he remembered you, and between the two he managed a very creditable work. I shall cherish this picture while I live."

"My picture!" murmured the girl again, looking at the sweet yet strong young face the blacksmith artist had placed upon the canvas. "And all from memory!"

"Yes, from memory and my description," said Neslerov. "Your face is so indelibly imprinted upon my memory that I could describe each line, each feature, with the utmost accuracy."

She looked at him in astonishment.

He had made frequent attempts to make love to her, but she had always skillfully repulsed him. That this could be true—that this man whose life was one round of pleasure should have her face so impressed upon his mind seemed to her incredible.

"But you will befriend him," she said, without answering his remark. "You are powerful in Russia. A large part of Siberia is under your control. You can make the life of the Paulpoffs pleasant there if you wish."

He bowed, and his eyes were hidden from her.

"Believe me, I have already taken steps to befriend them. In Tomsk there is great need of such ironworkers now that the railroad has gone beyond the Obi, and I have sent my petition to the minister of justice to have them sent to Tomsk. They will not be treated as convicts, but as honorable workers."

"What was the crime?" asked Frances. She was very pale, but quite calm.

"Why, it became known to Inspector Jansky of the police that a certain number of men congregated here and seemed to hold secret meetings. He investigated and discovered that this was the headquarters of a circle of nihilists. He arrested them all, but many escaped."

"And the proof?"

"Letters from Vladimir found on them."

Frances sighed and turned sadly away.

"You are an American," continued Neslerov, "and cannot understand how a man who appeared to you to be simple and contented with his lot should prove to be an assassin. This same spirit permeates our best society. It comes to the surface even among the relatives of our highest nobles. My own cousin was sent to Siberia. I had no pity for him, because he was rich, educated and had no reason to complain. But the Paulpoffs—now that I know you are interested in them—I will protect them from further harm."

"I thank you," said Frances sadly.

Neslerov slipped a coin into the hand of the drosky driver, and he immediately had cause to go to his horses, which were standing peacefully enough where he left them.

"I wish to speak one word before we leave here," said the prince, taking the hand of Frances, which she, in her surprise, permitted him to hold a moment. "I love you. I have loved you ever since the day I saw you first. We have beautiful women in Russia, but none like you. I am rich, powerful and am not offering you an empty name. Will you be my wife, my princess?"

"Prince Neslerov," said Frances gently, but still in a tone of reproof, "you cannot mean, I am sure, to take advantage of my situation, alone and at your mercy. You are a gentleman. Please leave such words for a more fitting occasion."

"All occasions are the same to a man who loves as I do," answered Neslerov. "I asked your father. He treated the matter as of no concern. To me it is my life. Make me happy, the world is yours. Refuse me, you plunge me into deep despair. I do not care to live without you."

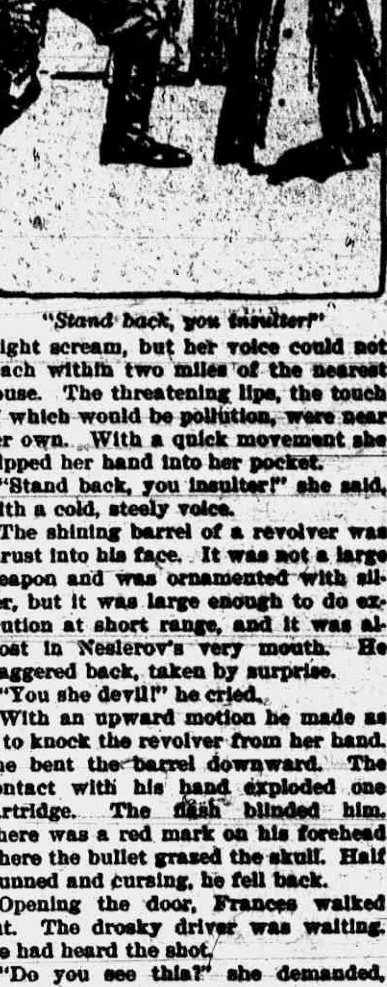
"What nonsense!" said Frances. "Everybody has sooner or later to live without a loved one. My father—I—my mother died many years ago. He loved her. He has been true to her memory, but he has lived."

"Ah, but that is not the same thing at all. Had I possessed you for a time and lost you at the command of death, then I could live, happy in the blessed memory. But to love you and lose you to another! Ah, I would kill him!"

"You are mad. Such words do not inspire love in the heart of an American girl. Fools kill their rivals, but it is a poor revenge. I do not love you, prince, and so cannot marry you. Let that end the matter. I must now return to Moscow."

"You shall not go till you are mine!" cried Neslerov, driven to madness by her coldness. He sprang forward and slammed the door, shutting them alone in the unoccupied house. He stepped toward her. His breath came hot upon her cheeks. His arms were outstretched to seize her. There was a look of mad passion in his eyes.

She knew no help was near or possible. The drosky driver was a Russian and would not fight the prince. She might scream, but her voice could not reach within two miles of the nearest house. The threatening lips, the touch of which would be pollution, were near her own. With a quick movement she slipped her hand into her pocket.



"Stand back, you insulter!"

"Stand back, you insulter!" she said, with a cold, steely voice.

The shining barrel of a revolver was thrust into his face. It was not a large weapon and was ornamented with silver, but it was large enough to do execution at short range, and it was almost in Neslerov's very mouth. He staggered back, taken by surprise.

"You she devil!" he cried.

With an upward motion he made as if to knock the revolver from her hand. She bent the barrel downward. The contact with his hand exploded one cartridge. The flash blinded him. There was a red mark on his forehead where the bullet grazed the skull. Half stunned and cursing, he fell back.

Opening the door, Frances walked out. The drosky driver was waiting. He had heard the shot.

"Do you see this?" she demanded, pointing the revolver at his head.

"Yes," he stammered.

"I have just shot Prince Neslerov. If you do not take me to the railway station at Perm and get me there before he overtakes us, I will empty the other four bullets into your head."

"Get in," he mumbled. Then to himself he said: "These American women are devils! They are better fighters than the Cossacks!"

The Cannibal.

"And what," asked the cannibal chieftain in his kindest tones—"what was your business before you were captured by my men?"

"I was a newspaper man," answered the captive.

"An editor?"

"No; merely a subeditor."

"Cheer up, young man! Shortly after my chef has finished his perusal of the cookbook you will be editor in chief."

Laughing heartily at his bonmot, the cannibal chief wanted to know if the captive had a funny bone.—Judge.

Napoleon and His Mother.

Soon after Napoleon's assumption of the imperial purple he chanced to meet his mother in the gardens of St. Cloud. He was surrounded by courtiers and half playfully held out his hand for her to kiss. "Not so, my son," she gravely replied, at the same time presenting her hand in return; "it is your duty to kiss the hand of her who gave you life."—Chambers' Journal.

Theories.

"I suppose you have thoroughly investigated the conditions of which you are treating in your book," remarked the friend.

"No," replied the literary woman who had undertaken a great work. "You see, I'm afraid an investigation might interfere with some of the beautiful theories I have evolved."—Chicago Post.

What Money Can Do.

Struckoyle (showing his art collection)—Ain't that bullfight picture a beaut? I paid an artist $2,000 to paint that for me to order.

Jackson's Self Control.

On the morning of the first battle of Winchester Dr. Hunter McGuire, Stonewall Jackson's medical director, said to him: "General, I have some very fine brandy. Will you take a drink?"

Jackson replied, "No; I thank you."

McGuire answered, "Don't you like it?"

"Yes," replied Jackson; "I like it too well. That is the reason I do not drink it."

An impressive exhibition of his self control that was Puritan in its self abnegation.

Vaccinated Before Wedded.

In Brazil parents and guardians before consenting to the marriage of their charges require a medical certificate from the bride or bridegroom certifying that he or she has been vaccinated.

In Norway and Sweden before any couple can be legally married certificates must be produced showing that both bride and bridegroom have been duly vaccinated.

Ancient Skyscrapers.

Numerous conflicting estimates have been made of the height of the tower of Babel, but one fact never has been denied and that is that it was a skyscraper. St. Jerome in his commentary on Isaiah says that the tower was already 4,000 paces high when God came down to stop the work. A pace is about two and one-half feet; therefore 4,000 paces must be 10,000 feet; consequently Babel was twenty times as high as the pyramids (which are only about 500 feet). Father Calmet says the tower was 81,000 feet high and that the languages were confounded because the architects were confounded, as they did not know how to bring the building to a head. Moreover, it is understood that the Chinese language of today was originally the same language as the high German.

Hudson, Jan. 15.—Henry C. Hall, while looking through an old valise that used to belong to his father, came across some very rare and interesting relics. Among other things were two marriage licenses and a tax receipt. One of the licenses was issued to William M. Steel and Elizabeth Beal, dated Rollin, October 26, 1837, the other to Charles G. Merchant and Melissa Aldrich, August 8, 1837. At that time William Beal was township clerk of Rollin, and Orson Green's name appeared on one of the marriage licenses as deputy clerk of the same township. The tax receipt was quite a bit different from those we have now, as it is all drawn in the hand writing of the treasurer, whose name was Wm. Mills. The receipt was issued to Dr. G. L. Hall by Mr. Mills and bears the date of December 10, 1843. Another very interesting relic found was a copy of one of the first catalogues and premium lists issued by the county Agricultural society, and is dated 1853. The book was printed by R. W. Ingalls, who had a job printing establishment in Adrian at that time. The officers of the society were as follows: President, Peter R. Adams, of Tecumseh; vice presidents, F. C. Beeman, Adrian; P. Wilson, Medina; W. TenBrook, Fairfield; J. D. Thompson, Madison; H. W. Dayton, Clinton; A. R. Tiffany, Palmyra, and J. W. Keeney, Franklin; secretary, Thomas M. Cooley, Adrian; treasurer, Langford G. Berry, Adrian.—Telegram.

The Spirit of Winter.

The Spirit of Winter is with us, making its presence known in many different ways—sometimes by cheery sunshine and glistening snows, and sometimes by driving winds and blinding storms. To many people it seems to take a delight in making bad things worse, for rheumatism twists harder, twinges sharper, catarrh becomes more annoying, and the many symptoms of scrofula are developed and aggravated. There is not much poetry in this, but there is truth, and it is a wonder that more people don't get rid of these ailments. The medicine that cures them—Hood's Sarsaparilla—is easily obtained and there is abundant proof that its cures are radical and permanent.

"Miss Tarbell's work is of unequalled importance as a 'document' of the day. Her story has live men in it; they suffer and work and win and lose their battles with the verisimilitude that removes the tale from the dry statement and clothes it with the color of human interest and the vivid rainbow garment of human sympathy. * * * The results of her work are likely to be far reaching; she is writing unfinished history." A Benton Harbor paper publishes the following opinion of Adams' performance: "E. Clinton Adams, 'Mystery's Master,' proved to the satisfaction of the audience at the Bell last evening that he was entitled to the name bestowed upon him by the American public. While Herman and Kellar are considered by many as the foremost exponents of legerdemain upon the stage today, there is no doubt that in certain feats both were excelled by Adams last evening. For more than two hours the marvel of the twentieth century held the audience in mystery and amazement with so many feats that it would be quite impossible even to suggest or mention them here.

WORK ON THE "Y"

Connecting the D., T. & M. With the

JACKSON BRANCH

Is About Done.

The HERALD found out yesterday that trains will be running on the new "Y" connecting the D., T. & M. with the Jackson Branch, about February 1, at least the mail contract over the old line expires on that date and it is probable trains will commence running over the new route about that time.

Trains at present will run the same as usual only going from Tecumseh to Lenawee Junction and thence to Toledo over the Lake Shore. Whether these trains will run to Adrian or not will be determined later.

Special Announcement.

On Saturday, Jan. 24, a notable revival of T. W. Robertson's sparkling comedy "Caste," will be given at the New Bradley opera house by a distinguished company headed by Mary Scott, the beautiful Californian star; America's foremost character comedian, Robert V. Ferguson; Countess de Castelvecchio, the famous grand niece of Napoleon Bonaparte, who won her dramatic spurs in Sir Henry Irving's company; and William Hazeltine, who occupied a leading position in the late Augustin Dalye company.

This promises to be the most important theatrical event of the season. Sale of seats will commence on Thursday, Jan. 22, punctually at eight o'clock. Prices 25 cents to $1.00. On account of the interest already manifested in this engagement, and the large number of inquiries made at the book office, it has been decided that the application for seats sent in before the opening of the sale will be filled, in order of their receipt. Free list positively and entirely suspended.

An Ancient Foe

To health and happiness is Scrofula—as ugly as ever since time immemorial.

It causes bunches in the neck, disfigures the skin, inflames the mucous membrane, wastes the muscles, weakens the bones, reduces the power of resistance to disease and the capacity for recovery, and develops into consumption.

"A bunch appeared on the left side of my neck. It caused great pain, was lanced, and became a running sore. I went into a general decline. I was persuaded to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and when I had taken six bottles my neck was healed, and I have never had any trouble of the kind since."

An All Star Company.

One star is sufficient for the ordinary theatrical company. There are several stars in the revival of "Caste" which will be seen in this city at the Bradley opera house on Saturday evening, Jan. 24. They include Mary Scott who starred several seasons on the Pacific slope in the Frohman production; Robt. V. Ferguson who headed his own productions a few years ago; the Countess de Castelvecchio formerly with Sir Henry Irving's company, and William Hazeltine who occupied a leading position in the late Augustin Daly's celebrated organization. Mr. Hazeltine assumed the leading role of Longman during the extended run of "The Great Ruby" at Daly's theatre. These players were selected not because they were stars in the theatrical firmament, but on account of their peculiar fitness for the characters which they will impersonate in "Caste." The performance of the sparkling old comedy is certain to be a memorable one which should be witnessed by a house full of spectators.

William Green.

William Green was born in Quaintion, England, March 25, 1810, and was married to Elizabeth Curtis, of the same place in 1831. They came to America and settled in Ann Arbor, Washtenaw county, in September 1834, therefore living in Michigan three years before it became a state. His occupation while in Ann Arbor was contractor and builder, he having built some of the first houses erected in Ann Arbor.

He was an active member of the Episcopal church and took a prominent part in all public works of the town. He lived in Ann Arbor 23 years and in 1855 moved to Green Oak, Livingston county, Mich., settling on the farm where he died Saturday, Jan. 17, 1903, at the age of 92 years, 9 months and 22 days.

To Mr. and Mrs. Green were born nine children of which there are only two living, George Green, of Green Oak, and Mrs. Emily Hollister, of Ann Arbor. His wife died in June, 1881. A Woman's Wealth.

Paine's Celery Compound

GIVES VIGOR AND STRENGTH TO DEBILITATED AND RUN DOWN WOMEN.

It is maintained by many distinguished writers that the greatness of a nation depends much upon the physical condition of its women. The general conditions which contribute to health and long life, are those which do not imply a rapid and unequal exhaustion of those powers by which life is maintained. While we assert that the women of our land stand peerless for beauty and the virtues that make them lovable, we cannot hide the fact that there are thousands in our midst who, owing to overwork, worry, household cares, and an unequal exhaustion of life power, have become weak, nervous, sleepless, and debilitated.

We bring to the attention of all weary, despondent, hopeless, and sickly women earth's great rescuer and health builder, Paine's Celery Compound. Thousands of healthy women around us owe their present vigor, activity, and robustness to Paine's Celery Compound. Mrs. Stephen Smith, St. Paul, Minn., tells how she was snatched from the grave; she says:—

"I had a bad attack of la grippe this spring and was at death's door, and no one ever expected me to recover. I was so weak that as soon as they brought me out of one faint I was in another. I could not take any nourishment, and doctors' medicines did me no good. A friend advised my husband to get me a bottle of Paine's Celery Compound, which he did, but had no faith in it. The second day after taking the Compound, I began to get real hungry and took an interest in things. I had everything that money and loving care could supply, and with that and Paine's Celery Compound, I am now doing my own work, while three months ago I was almost in the grave. I know that I owe my health and strength to Paine's Celery Compound, and shall always recommend it."

A SIMPLE QUESTION.

Tecumseh People are Requested to Honestly Answer This.

Is not the word of a representative citizen of Tecumseh more convincing than the doubtful utterances of people living everywhere else in the Union? Read this:

Mr. Charles Bartholomew, who runs the bicycle repair shop in the south eastern section of Tecumseh, says: "Some eighteen years ago the doctors said I had diabetes and that I could not live. I got better but I have been troubled ever since with the kidney secretions, particularly retention of the kidney secretions which caused me considerable anxiety. I tried all kinds of medicines said to be good for kidney trouble but the annoyance still remained. Finally my attention was called to Doan's Kidney Pills and I got them at C. A. Wright's drug store. They are splendid. They gave me more relief and acted quicker than any remedy I ever used. From my experience I can say they are a reliable remedy and I consistently recommend them."

For sale by all dealers: Price 50 cents per box. Foster-Milburn company, Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

WORK AT THE MINES.

Breakers Would Run Longer If Miners Would Furnish the Coal.

Philadelphia, Jan. 22.—The moderate weather is apparently having its effect as far as coal shipments are concerned. All the mines of the Philadelphia & Reading Co. were working yesterday with the exception of one, which was closed on account of a funeral.

At the Reading offices it was stated that 1,241 cars were mined and loaded Tuesday. That is about 30,000 tons. The Lehigh Valley railroad shipped 1,407 cars, aggregating about 37,500 tons, over its lines. A representative of the Lehigh Valley says:

"Efforts are being made to run the collieries as long each day as the supply of coal in the breakers will warrant. In most of the mines of the Lehigh Valley company the miners will only work ten hours a day, consequently when the breakers clean up the coal that is mined in that time they have to cease operations. If the miners would continue work longer the operation of the breakers could be continued from twelve to fifteen hours a day, thus materially increasing the output of coal at the mines. The region of Centralia is a notable exception, as there the miners work late into the night and consequently turn out more coal per day per man than any other portion of the territory."

A PRETTY CEREMONY.

Attended the Signing of Militia Bill by President.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 22.—President Roosevelt Wednesday afternoon signed the militia bill recently passed by congress. The final act in the making of the new law was attended by a pretty ceremony.

After the president had signed the bill Secretary Root delivered a brief speech of congratulation to the committee on the enactment of so excellent a measure. General Dick, the author of the bill and the president of the National Guard association, made a fitting response. President Roosevelt then spoke of the merits of the bill. He expressed the hope that no president ever would be confronted with such an emergency as would render it necessary for him to avail himself of the services of the troops provided for in the bill.

Gompers Going to Porto Rico.

Washington, Jan. 22.—The executive council of the American Federation of Labor yesterday authorized President Gompers to proceed to Porto Rico to investigate labor conditions in the island and aid the wageworkers in organizing. He also was authorized to aid in preventing the enactment of an affirmative injunction law in Alabama. President Gompers was directed to make every effort to secure executive clemency in behalf of E. W. Clark, who twenty-five years ago was charged with mutiny and who has been incarcerated ever since, upon the ground of great provocation and his length of term of imprisonment.

Will Extend Road to the Soo.

Ogdensburg, N. Y., Jan. 22.—The Brockville, Westport & Sault Ste. Marie railroad was sold at auction at Brockville yesterday under first mortgage foreclosure of $1,250,000, the Knickerbocker Trust company of New York being the plaintiff, and bid in by Charles H. Holm of New York, representing a New York syndicate. The new owners will extend the road to Sault Ste. Marie and operate it.

House Rent Exceeds His Salary.

Berlin, Jan. 22.—Ambassador Tower has nearly closed the lease of a stately residence on Koenigsplatz, near the reichstag building and overlooking the Thiergarten. The rent considerably exceeds the ambassador's salary, which is true also in the case of the American embassies at London, Paris and St. Petersburg.

Steamer Lahn Now Afloat.

Gibraltar, Jan. 22.—The North German Lloyd steamer Lahn, Captain Malchow, left here last evening at 7 for New York. The Lahn grounded on a sandbank last Sunday morning five miles east of Gibraltar. She was refloated Tuesday morning. It was reported she sustained no damage.

NO WEATHER BUREAU

Rheumatics Can Tell by Their Aches When a Storm is Coming.

Rheumatics save barometers, but it is like sticking knives into them when change of weather comes.

When nature waves her danger flag it is an acute evidence of the disease and a cry for help. She cannot free herself from this Uric acid, but convulsively tries to throw it off as the stomach tries to eject a poison.

If you do not help nature you will have to suffer. You have suffered. There's no need. Athlophoros can stop the pain and free you from this weather-vane trick. Athlophoros acts directly on the Uric acid like a May day on an ice field—it will drive your Rheumatism away, no matter what kind of Rheumatism or Neuralgia you may have. Sciatica and Lumbago both come from Uric acid and will respond quickly to the action of Athlophoros—it will soothe and quiet you—you can prove it easily. If your druggist doesn't keep it send $1 to The Athlophoros Co., New Haven, Conn. It is pleasant to know help is so near. You will find it still pleasanter to be without aches and pains.

A Medicine for Old People.

Rev. Geo. Gay, Greenwich, Kas., is past 83 years of age, yet he says: "I am enjoying excellent health for a man of my age, due entirely to the rejuvenating influences of Dr. Miles' Nervine. It brings sleep and rest when nothing else will, and gives strength and vitality even to one of my old age."

"I am an old soldier," writes Mr. Geo. Watson, of Newton, Ia., "and I have been a great sufferer from nervousness, vertigo and spinal trouble. I have spent considerable money for medicine and doctors, but with little benefit. I was so bad my mind showed signs of weakness. I began taking Dr. Miles' Nervine, and I know it saved my life."

Dr. Miles' Nervine

Saved me from the insane asylum," Mrs. A. M. Heifner, of Jerico Springs, Mo., writes. "I was so nervous that I could scarcely control myself, could not sleep nor rest, would even forget the names of my own children at times. I commenced using Dr. Miles' Nervine and it helped me from the first, and now I am perfectly well."

REMARKABLE CURE OF CROUP

A Little Boy's Life Saved.

I have a few words to say regarding Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It saved my little boy's life and I feel that I cannot praise it enough. I bought a bottle of it from A. E. Steere, of Goodwin, S. D., and when I got home with it the the poor baby could hardly breathe. I gave the medicine as directed every ten minutes until he "threw up" and then I thought sure he was going to choke to death. We had to pull the phlegm out of his mouth in great long strings. I am positive that if I had not got that bottle of cough medicine, my boy would not be on earth today.—Joel Demont, Inwood, Iowa. Persian Customs.

In Persia, as well as in Turkey and throughout the orient generally, modern waterworks are unknown, and in every Persian town the women and girls may be seen at daybreak on their way to the common wells just as in old Bible times. They carry their pitchers on their shoulders and bring water for the household uses of the day. The well is the general clearing house for news. Another common sight in Persian towns is the tea seller. He carries a big brass teapot in either hand, the one full of hot water, the other of tea. His cups are in a tray, which is fastened to his belt. He cries in a singsong tone: "Hot tea! Sweet tea! Tea of crimson color!" His tea is prepared with herbs and has a delicious thyme odor. Wine is carried about in beefskins, which, plumped out to their original form by the fluid within, present a startling appearance to the novice. It is one of the impossible things for the western barbarian to attain admission to the Persian royal harem, but the rage for photographs has penetrated even that sequestered spot, and photographers have lately been admitted for the purpose of photographing the royal infants.—New York Tribune.

Attention, farmers and breeders of Lenawee county! In our midst is owned Steel Hal 2:16¼, a horse the type of which is needed to raise general purpose horses with warm blood in their veins. Steel Hal 2:16¼, a beautiful horse weighing about 1300 lbs. with chest and muscles of a horse weighing 2000 lbs. His owner, Chas. Maynard, of the bank of Britton, Britton, Mich., having no time to canvas for patronage, and Steel Hal being a strange horse, it was thought advisable to accept the offer of Tuscola county people who want to lease him for the season of 1903 but the owner has been persuaded to promise that if the people of Lenawee county want him to remain here by sending their name and address on or before Feb. 25, 1903, manifesting their desire to book one or more mares. If enough names can be booked (fees $25.00 to insure) thereby insuring a paying season, he will not send him away. Should he stay here he will go to Holloway, Adrian, Tecumseh, Clinton and Macon. Remember Steel Hal 2:16¼ is closely related to the best ones: Star Pointer 1:59¼, Hal Dillard 2:04, Direct Hal 2:04, etc. Some of this speed will come out somewhere. Attend to this at once.

CITY UP IN ARMS

St. Joseph Riled Over an Alleged Kidnaping Affair.

PUBLIC OFFICIALS DENOUNCED

Justice and Prosecuting Attorney Censured For Releasing Alleged Offenders and Not Permitting a Public Trial—Grand Jury Demanded.

St. Joseph, Mich., Jan. 26.—An enthusiastic mass meeting, held in this city Sunday afternoon and attended by about 1,000 citizens, was called to investigate an alleged attempted kidnaping of the two Loescher girls January 14.

The girls were rescued by Deputy Sheriff Dewan at the point of a revolver. J. J. O'Rourke and a man named Watson were lodged in jail, but next day were acquitted by Justice St. Claire. Reporters and citizens, it is charged, were barred from the court room, and it is claimed the deputy who made the arrest was not allowed to testify. Prosecuting Attorney Riferd refused to allow the parents of the girls to employ an attorney to assist in the prosecution.

Citizens became indignant at the release of the men, and Sunday's meeting was the result. Addresses were made by Mayor Rice, Rev. Roblee, pastor of the Congregational church; Rev. Beem and others, who denounced the actions of the officials.

Resolutions were passed asking Judge Coolidge of the Berrien circuit court to call a grand jury to investigate the matter thoroughly and see what can be done about the alleged kidnaping and what could have influenced the officers.

The grand jury, if called, will also be asked to investigate illegal licenses of winerooms in the twin cities and other matters.

A large sum was raised to help push the case. Attorney James O'Hara, who defended O'Rourke and Watson in the justice court, was hooted down and not allowed to speak. The indignation of the people is at the boiling point.

What the Officials Say.

Prosecuting Attorney Riferd says the testimony of the Loescher girls in the sheriff's office and their testimony in the courtroom was contradictory; that a mere charge of assault and battery might have been proven against O'Rourke.

Attorney James O'Hara says he believes nothing will come out of the case. At the meeting Sunday afternoon he said everybody was dismissed from the courtroom during the trial because the girl was reluctant to speak before a crowd; that Deputy Sheriff Dewan was not called upon to testify because it was thought his testimony would be of no weight in the case, that he knew nothing of the case except to make the arrest.

O'Hara was called upon to speak by the chairman of the meeting yesterday and was on his feet seven minutes. He says he was not listened to because the people had not read the testimony in the case and knew nothing about it. He says the girl testified that O'Rourke committed no criminal act.

Shot by Thugs.

Niles, Mich., Jan. 26.—Two thugs held up Edward Stewart, who was enroute home Saturday night from the plant of the Niles Board & Paper Co., where he was employed. This being pay day, Stewart had two weeks wages in his pockets. The highwaymen each leveled revolvers at him and commanded him to throw up his hands. Instead of complying, Stewart struck at one of his assailants and the latter pulled the trigger and the bullet struck Stewart in the pit of the stomach. Stewart fell and the robbers fled.

Loss to Adventists Was Heavy.

Battle Creek, Mich., Jan. 26.—The insurance adjusters have concluded the adjustment of the losses by the destruction of the Seventh Day Adventist publishing house. Total loss to building, $31,614 74; to stock and machinery, $271,912 48; total loss, $303,527 22. Total insurance on building and contents, $100,000; loss over insurance, $203,527 22.

Michigan Pensions.

Washington, Jan. 26.—Michigan pensions granted Saturday: Original (war with Spain)—William Villeneuve, Champion, $6. Increase—Alisha Martindale, Eaton Rapids, $12; George Lucas, Newaygo, $22; Martin Skillman, Mt. Clemens, $14; Edwin A. Stedman, Lansing, $14. Widows—Minor of Edward Heisler, Monroe, $14; Ellen F. Conklin, Adrian, $12.

Took Morphine and Died.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Jan. 26.—James Reynolds, employed at the Arlington livery barns in this city, died at Borgess' hospital Saturday night from the effects of a dose of morphine taken with suicidal intent. Reynolds was found early in the evening in a dying condition in the Arlington barns and was hurried to the hospital, but all efforts to save his life was futile.

Child Scalded to Death.

Hart, Mich., Jan. 26.—Hazel Motry, the two-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Motry, who live about two and a half miles south of Scottville, fell into a pail of boiling water and was so severely scalded that she died. The parents are almost crazed with grief over the awful fate of their little daughter.

CRISIS IMMINENT

Revolt in China Spreading—Tung Fuh Siang, the Leader.

HE MUST BE SUPPRESSED

Missionaries Are Leaving the Threatened Districts—Rebels Have Proclaimed Pu Chun Emperor—Rebelling Forces Number 40,000 or 50,000.

Victoria, B. C., Jan. 26.—The steamers Athenian and Tremont arrived Sunday from the Orient. The steamers bring further news of the revolution in Kansu. One correspondent telegraphs to the Shanghai papers from Lashekow to the effect that unless Tung Fuh Siang is suppressed the powers will soon find themselves face to face with a bigger revolt than that of two years ago. Missionaries already are beginning to leave the threatened district. A correspondent of the Shanghai Mercury, in Kansu, wires:

"A crisis is imminent and the officials are powerless to act. The taotai is suppressing news. There is cause for grave apprehension unless Tung Fuh Siang is suppressed."

Messrs. Rydbig and Soderstray, missionaries, who have reached Shanghai from Sinang, having come from the interior because of the threatened revolt, in interviews given to a German daily paper of Shanghai, state that Tung Fuh Siang is gaining ground and intends to lead his army to Singan, where he will endeavor to make his capital and place Pu Chun, who has been proclaimed emperor, on the throne. Tung is himself enlisting troops and everything else points to the fact that he has government support. Kansu and Shensi are overrun by Tung's spies. All pro-foreign officials are being removed from Sungan.

Pekin correspondents also tell of the threatened outbreak in the northwest and credit Yong Lu, "the real ruler of China," with being behind the movement.

The Canton correspondent of a Hongkong paper states that the rebellion in Kwangsi is more serious than ever known.

The rebels, 40,000 to 50,000 in number, have taken possession of many districts and towns, and Pakngai, Pakshek, Eishing, Syan, Pingyip and Lauchow are in their possession. They are now marching into Yunnan, armed with modern rifles. The names of their chiefs are Chan and Luk. The officials at Canton are enlisting soldiers.

Attempt at Train Robbery.

Trinidad, Col., Jan. 26.—A Colorado Southern passenger train, southbound, was wrecked Saturday night four and a half miles south of Watervale, N. M., under circumstances indicating an attempt at train robbery. The train was running at high rate of speed when the wreck occurred. The engine was turned over. The express car and smoker also left the rails and turned over. Four persons were injured, two of whom may die. An investigation showed that the spikes had been pulled and the fishplates connecting the ends of the rails had been removed.

Teller at Last Elected.

Denver, Jan. 26.—At 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon the Democratic members of the senate and house of representatives cast their ballots, fifty-one in number, for Henry M. Teller, to succeed himself as United States senator, and he was declared elected by W. H. Adams, who presided. The result was reached after a week of untiring effort on the part of the Democratic leaders, during which many rumors of treachery had been circulated, and many delays had occurred by reason of the absence from roll call of different members of the assembly.

Senator Clark's Brother Dead.

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 26.—Joseph K. Clark, brother of United States Senator W. A. Clark, died Sunday at the home of his sister, Mrs. G. F. Miller, in this city, aged 60 years. Joseph K. Clark resided at Portland, Ore., near which city he had large mining interests. For many years he resided in Butte, Mont. He was associated with his brother, Senator Clark, in mining enterprises, and with W. A. and J. Ross Clark in the sugar industry in this city. He leaves a widow but no children.

Much Money Contributed.

Mexico City, Jan. 26.—The charity committee at Mazatlan has received up to date $130,000 to combat the pleague. Money is still pouring in from all parts of the country. The official bulletin from Mazatlan reports four deaths and four new cases for last Wednesday, and for Thursday five deaths and two new cases. The total number of case in the hospital was forty-four, five of which were serious. At the pavilios are housed 520 persons, none of whom is sick.

"Disco Tracy" Alleged Murderer.

Mt. Clemens, Jan. 24.—Charles Harvey, the "Disco Tracy," who terrorized the citizens of that village two weeks ago by flourishing a revolver and afterwards firing on Deputy Sheriff Bellman and Eugene Harmon while making an escape after arrest, was Friday bound over to the circuit court for trial in March for attempt to murder.

Killed "Catching On" Bobs.

Grand Ledge, Mich., Jan. 24.—James, the 8-year-old son of John Brown, a drayman, was killed Friday afternoon by being run over by a sleigh upon which was a heavy sawlog. The lad had jumped on the sleigh for a ride unnoticed, and fell off in front of the runner.

STILL ANOTHER PROBLEM.

Volume of Spring Shipments Will Queer Transportation Companies.

New York, Jan. 24.—Bradstreet's weekly trade review today says:

Previously existing favorable conditions still rule. Spring trade shows further expansion, particularly in dry goods, such as linens, wash fabrics, underwear and hosiery. Clothing, shoes, hardware and hardwood lumber are active, and the volume of shipments of spring goods to fill orders offers still another problem for the congested transportation companies to solve. A spell of mild weather has induced the beginning of the usual clearance sales of surplus winter goods by retailers. It has also tended to soften the acuteness of the anthracite coal shortage at the east and cause a lowering in prices. This, however, is regarded as temporary only, another seasonable cold snap containing great possibilities in the way of enhanced prices. The snow covering on winter wheat is not uniform, and is on the whole rather scant, but no unusual deterioration is reported.

Mild weather weakens the price of country produce, such as butter and eggs. Sugar is unsettled by uncertainties as to reciprocity arrangements with Cuba.

Wheat, including flour, exports for the week ending Jan. 22 aggregate 3,538,757 bu, against 4,878,624 last week, 3,638,679 in this week a year ago, and 4,838,678 in 1901. Wheat exports since July 1 aggregate 144,179,557 bu, against 161,643,818 last season and 112,049,646 in 1900. Corn exports aggregate 2,376,683 bu, against 2,394,612 last week, 179,520 a year ago and 3,972,152 in 1901. For the fiscal year exports are 19,354,701 bu, against 21,434,967 last season and 112,907,647 in 1901.

Business failures for the week ending with Jan. 22 number 253, against 234 last week, 292 in the like week in 1902, 281 in 1901, 252 in 1900 and 246 in 1899.

THE NEW WAGE SCALE.

Mineworkers Reach Decision in the Amount They Will Demand.

Indianapolis, Jan. 24.—The convention of the United Mineworkers of America, in executive session Friday afternoon, completed the consideration of the wage scale, and Secretary Wilson announced last night that there will be no more executive sessions. The mineworkers decided to demand an increase in wages of 12½ cents per ton, on a run of mine basis, all coal to be paid for on that basis. A differential of 7 cents between pick and machine-mined coal will be asked for.

The entire competitive district, composed of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and the Pittsburg district of Pennsylvania, is governed by this scale. The present run of mine rate in Indiana is 49 cents, and the increase, if granted by the operators, would make the rate of wages 61½ cents per ton. In the Pittsburg district it would be 65 cents; in Ohio, 76 cents, and in Illinois 61½ cents. A demand also will be made for a proportionate advance to the inside and outside common laborers. The minimum rate of wages in Indiana for inside laborers is $2 25 per day.

Fled For Their Lives.

Amesbury, Mass., Jan. 24.—The strike situation in the carriage industry in this town, which has been in a quiescent state for nearly two weeks, suddenly became serious last night by a violent attack on the non-union men by the strikers. The police were overpowered, strike breakers were dragged from the places of refuge and assaulted, and all because some of these non-union men had boasted that they did not fear the strikers and could whip them at any time. The non-union men were compelled to run for their lives, chased by 500 strikers.

King Edward Turned Down.

Dublin, Jan. 24.—Timothy Harrington, M. P., was Friday re-elected lord mayor of Dublin for the third successive time. The keenest interest was taken in the contest. How King Edward should be received by the corporation of Dublin in the event of a royal visit to this city was one of the issues of the campaign. Mr. Harrington opposed a reception of the king and Mr. Dowd promised to be guided in this matter by the opinion of the municipal council.

DEATH FOR TREASON.

Colonel Arthur Lynch Found Guilty in English Courts.

London, Jan. 24.—Colonel Arthur Lynch, the Irish M. P., has been found guilty of treason and sentenced to death.

When the trial was resumed Friday counsel for the defense began summing up. There was no attempt to deny that Lynch supported the Boers, but counsel contended that his naturalization was in no way prompted by treasonable intent and was solely for the advantage he would thus secure for journalistic purposes. Subsequently the defendant actively supported the Boer cause in the belief that he was a legally naturalized burgher.

The lord chief justice summed up very briefly. He said that if in war time a British subject joined the king's enemies whatever his purpose, he was guilty of an unlawful act. Naturalization during war time afforded no excuse whatever for subsequent acts. There was abundant evidence, he said, of overt acts in aiding the king's enemies.

The jury, after having been out half an hour, returned a verdict of guilty.

When asked if he had anything to say as to why he should not be sentenced to death, Colonel Lynch replied: "Thank you. I will say nothing."

The sentence of death was passed on each of the four counts in the indictment.

Lynch throughout bore himself with unfaltering composure. He walked steadily between the jailers and past the bench where his wife and other relatives were seated. Mrs. Lynch has been given permission to see her husband.

Although formally sentenced to be hanged, Lynch's sentence will no doubt be commuted.

After the prisoner had been removed Lynch and his counsel had a conference regarding the course to be adopted in the future, and later it was announced that no action would be taken at present. Counsel can proceed with applying for a writ of error, but it is thought that this may be rendered unnecessary by the commutation of the sentence to a short term of imprisonment, in which case it is probable that the prisoner will accept the situation.

Double Tragedy in Chicago.

Chicago, Ill., Jan. 24.—Mrs. Stella Wright, a young woman acting as housekeeper for William E. Lewis, a carpenter living at 4449 State street, was killed by Lewis Friday. The crime, the cause of which is not known, was committed with a hatchet, the head of the woman being cut open. Lewis was placed under arrest after a desperate fight. While on the way to the police station he requested one of the officers who was holding his hand to loosen his grasp a little, and as soon as the officer complied Lewis snatched a razor from his pocket and cut his own throat. There is no chance of his recovery.

Fire at Summer Resort.

Pigeon Cove, Mass., Jan. 24.—Fire broke out at 2:30 this morning in the Pigeon Cove hotel, and in half an hour had not only destroyed the entire building, but, aided by a strong northerly wind, had jumped to the house of Charles H. Andrews, adjoining. At 5 o'clock it looked as if three other hotels in the immediate vicinity, as well as a dozen summer residences, would be destroyed.

Stockholm, Jan. 24.—King Oscar has decided to temporarily entrust the government of Sweden to Crown Prince Gustaf, who will take over the regency next week. This action of the king is taken as the result of medical advice. He has abandoned his projected visit to Norway.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

CHAPTER V.

THE SUDDEN INTERRUPTION OF A JOURNEY.

MR. GORDON was beginning to feel anxious. He knew just how long it took to go to Perm and return. Frances had often taken long journeys by herself, but she was now three days overdue, and the engineer was eager to get to the Obi.

"Where can she be?" he asked himself. "She must stop this racing all over the world alone. Something will surely happen to her one of these fine days. I'll stop it."

Frances arrived while he was making the resolve.

"Where have you been?" asked Gordon.

"To Perm."

"To Perm! But you have been away three days longer than was necessary. I do not like this way you have of going off by yourself."

"I fancy I can take care of myself. I've been in Perm the three days."

"With the blacksmith and his people?"

"No. The blacksmith and his people! Vladimir has been sent to Siberia."

"What! Not the ironworker Paulpoff?"

"Vladimir Paulpoff, Mamma Paulpoff and Papa Paulpoff are now on their way to Tomsk."

"The devil!"

"Yes, the devil! That is just the individual who did it."

"What is his other name?"

"Prince Neslerov."

"What! Neslerov sent Paulpoff to—Come, tell me what you mean."

"A man like Neslerov can do anything he likes in Russia except marry an American girl. Tell me just what conversation you had with the prince a few days ago."

"A few days ago! Oh, two weeks ago!"

"I don't know when it was. But he asked you for my hand, did he not?"

"Yes."

"You never told me."

Gordon laughed.

"I haven't told you the names of half the men who have asked me that."

"But in Russia we should know, because there are tricks. Now, what was it? Did he say much?"

"No, not much; said he was rich and powerful and wanted you as an ornamental wife or something to that effect."

"He told me the same thing."

"Told you! Where?"

"In Paulpoff's house."

Gordon panted and sat down.

"I wish you would tell the whole story," he said.

"I wish you would answer my questions first. What happened when Neslerov was here? What did he say and what did you answer?"

"He didn't say very much—the usual thing. Said he loved you and was rich and powerful and could give you a good station in Russian society and the world."

"And you said what?"

"Why, I said you wouldn't marry the best man on earth unless you loved him. I said if you would marry the man I wanted you to you would long ago have been the wife of Jack Denton, who"—

"Never mind Mr. Denton. We were speaking of Neslerov."

"Yes—but the deuce! You pick your old dad up so short! I am telling you what I said. Don't you want to hear?"

"Yes," replied Frances, laughing and kissing him. "Dear old dad, what did you say?"

"I said I liked Jack Denton better than any other man on earth and that you hated him worst. But I wanted you to marry him because he was good and noble and a rising man, a brave man and altogether a"—

"Hero and angel in one. What did the prince say to that?"

"He only repeated what he had said before."

"Then what?"

"I said—why—now, don't get angry at your old dad—I said you were a self willed creature and acted on your own whims."

"That is nothing to get angry about. I do. But I fear that between us we have sent the Paulpoffs to their doom."

"For goodness sake, how?"

"It was natural that"—

"It wasn't natural at all. What did I say—what have you done—to cause Vladimir Paulpoff to plot against the czar?"

"Heavens! Are you so blind? The Paulpoffs are as innocent of this charge as you or I. It was against Vladimir the plot was laid."

"I begin to catch your meaning. Who was it—Neslerov?"

"It is impossible to say whether he did or not, but I suspect him. You remember the day he was here. I met him as I came home from the bazaars, where I had been buying books for Vladimir. I did not, of course, suspect that he had been talking with you about marrying me. Unwittingly I told him they were for Vladimir and asked him also to take an interest in him."

"I also told him of a blacksmith in whom you were taking a great interest. He has put that and your independence together and has imagined Vladimir. Well?"

"I had my fears that something was said about Vladimir. It was so clearly a plot that I knew the jealousy of Neslerov had been aroused. When I learned what had been done, I waited two days at Perm to see Governor Guslav, but he was away, and I could not see him. It was the superintendent of police who gave me the little information I got. It seems that an inspector discovered—so they say—that nihilists were meeting in the forge. Letters were found on them which implicated Vladimir. There was a trial, so it was claimed, and Vladimir was found guilty. I am sure Vladimir would have sent to us if he could."

"I don't want to get mixed up in any nihilist scrape."

"But you will help Vladimir, will you not?"

"What can I do?"

"You can at least stop at Perm and see the governor. It will not delay us long."

"I will do that, certainly; but I don't fancy there is much use talking to Guslav. He is a stern old soldier and has no sympathy for lovers or plotters."

"But he is just and honorable."

"Yes, I am sure of that."

"Then come. We will go to Perm together and see him."

"Well, I suppose I must do as you say, but we are about ready to start for the Obi. We can stop at Perm for a day."

"That will do."

The preparations were hastily made, and four days more saw them at Perm. The governor was at home and received Mr. Gordon, the name being an open sesame anywhere in Russia. Mr. Gordon plunged at once into the matter of Vladimir's arrest.

"That he was arrested, if the circumstances were suspicious, I grant, was proper enough," said Mr. Gordon. "But was there a fair trial? Pardon me if I speak plainly. Your institutions of justice here are quite different from ours at home. I have known where men were hustled off to Siberia with no semblance of a trial."

"But they were guilty," said the governor, with a smile.

"Yes; I believe in all the instances that came under my observation they were."

"It was the same in this case. The Paulpoffs had been using their isolated position for base ends. A circle of the brotherhood of nihilists congregated there. Letters were found upon them. These letters were all signed by Vladimir Paulpoff."

"Did he admit anything?"

"They never do. It is only when a man is captured in the very act of assassination, and he knows he cannot escape the death penalty, that he admits his crime and glories in it. The Paulpoffs denied everything, of course."

"Poor Vladimir! He was as innocent as I am!" broke in Frances.

"Impossible. The letters were proof enough."

"Are the letters here?"

"No; unfortunately, they were carried away by one of the men who escaped."

"Then you did not see the letters?"

"No; I regret that I did not."

"What was said concerning them?"

"Their import was given by Inspector Jansky and Prince Neslerov, who found them. Their testimony so pleased the minister of justice that Jansky has been promoted to be superintendent of the police at Tomsk. You seem to think there is some doubt of the guilt of these people," said the governor, turning to Mr. Gordon.

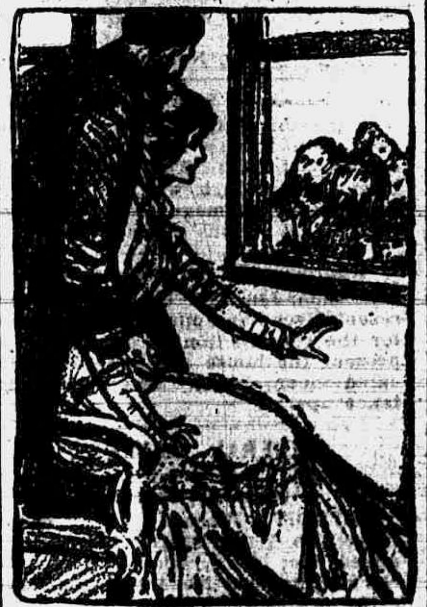
"For my part I am quite sure they are innocent. My daughter has been interested in them since the railway ran through Perm. It is not like them to plot. They are too simple and—ignorant."

"But Vladimir is not. He is shrewd and intelligent. He has been a reader of books."

"Yes; my daughter furnishes them."

"I am not at all doubtful myself," said the governor, with a grim smile. "Were I, I would begin an open investigation at once. But, you understand, the accuser was a prince and the governor of Tomsk, and the minister of justice has set the seal of his approval on the thing. It is a delicate matter for me to reopen. But I promise you this: I will guardedly look into the thing, and if I see any chance for doubt for your sake I will do what I can to help the Paulpoffs."

"Thank you. That is all we can ask," said Mr. Gordon. "We may see them at Tomsk. I may say to them that your excellency is working to know the truth?"



She looked out at the savage faces and shuddered.

"You may."

The interview ended, and Mr. Gordon and Frances continued their journey.

The first person they saw when they entered the train was Neslerov. The mark made by Frances' bullet was still there, but he had not, to all appearances, been seriously injured. He looked curiously at the two travelers, as if wondering when the outbreak of wrath from Gordon would come. But that gentleman walked up to him and held out his hand.

"How do you do, your excellency?" he said. "We are going to Tomsk together, it seems."

Neslerov was almost stunned, but he took the hand. Was it possible that Frances had not told her father of the scene in Paulpoff's cottage?

It was so, and Frances had her own reasons. She loved the liberty she had for years been permitted to enjoy. But she knew that if dangers and narrow escapes came to her father's ears her liberty would soon come to an end.

It was a long journey, and a weary one as well. Day after day they passed through the same scenes, crossed rivers on bridges that had been built by Jack Denton, Frances' old playmate, and the strong structures perhaps caused her to think of the hardworking young man who built them and was now planning a very large and excellent bridge across the Obi. But whatever was in Frances' mind did not find expression through her lips, for her father and Neslerov smoked and chatted and played cards with two officers going to garrisons on the border.

Frances said nothing more about the prince, for in the place to which they were going he was supreme, and to involve her father with him in a quarrel would have been to invite a disaster similar to that which had overtaken the Paulpoffs.

Day after day Frances leaned her head against the glass window and watched the flitting scenes. At last they reached the Irtish and crossed the border into that province, which was almost as much Neslerov's own as though he were a king.

There were but few passengers by that time, for the road had not been finished, and the train must stop at the Obi. Frances, half dreaming, lay back, looking at the great expanse of tundra, the new villages springing up, the old huts that were now deserted and the waste of railway supplies along the track.

The prince had asked her father to go into another car and smoke. This left her alone, and she closed her eyes and dozed.

She woke up with a start. A hand was on her shoulder. She saw Neslerov bending over her. A smile of triumph was on his face. Frightened, she glanced out of the window. The car was still. She looked forward—the rest of the train had gone on.

"What has happened?" she cried, leaping to her feet. "Where is the train? Where is my father?"

"Speeding toward the Obi, my dear," said Neslerov. "Unfortunately, at this point the couplings between this car and the next were broken, and the officers of the train, not missing you or me—for I had just come in with a cup of coffee for you—left us and went on. We are in a wild place, surrounded by various tribes of the remarkable collection of savages over whom I am governor. But I am governor, and if you will obey me I promise that you will reach Tomsk in safety."

Frances leaned back weakly and stared.

"My father gone!" she cried, and as she looked out at the savage faces that passed and looked at the car in wonder she shuddered.

"Unfortunately, your father was in a forward car. It was with his consent I came to you with coffee. Fear nothing, however, for, though we are in a wild region, I am governor and will protect you. I love you, and no harm shall come to you—if you obey me."

Pistol Dropped and Shot Him.

Marquette, Mich., Jan. 26.—A peculiar accident, of which John Morais, a Michigamme blacksmith, was the victim, bids fair to cost him his life. Morais was hit in the groin and the bullet penetrated the intestines.

Effort to Save Griswold.

Bay City, Mich., Jan. 26.—Attorneys for Dr. Roy W. Giswold, convicted of manslaughter, are still making desperate efforts to save their client from going to prison. Arguments for a new trial are being made. It is alleged by the defense that there was error in all the proceedings. It is probable an appeal will be taken to the supreme court should the efforts here prove futile.

Good Mine at Bay City.

Bay City, Mich., Jan. 26.—Handy Bros. have commenced operations at their new mine. They have a seven-foot vein of coal, with a four-foot vein ten feet above it. WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, Jan. 26, 1903.

What promises to constitute the greatest triumph in the present administration was accomplished in Washington late Saturday afternoon when Secretary of State Hay and Sir Michael Herbert signed a treaty providing for the final settlement of the Alaskan boundary difficulty, the last occasion of dispute between Great Britain and the United States. Three eminent jurists are to be appointed by each of the treating countries and the six will constitute a joint commission by the decision of which each is bound by treaty to abide. The settlement of this last remaining dispute between Great Britain and this country removes every ground for difference between the two nations and makes that perfect harmony which has been the object of Secretary Hay ever since he took charge of the diplomatic relations of the United States.

Congress now has before it a carefully considered, skillfully drawn and conservative anti-trust bill, which while it would not injure any so called trust doing a legitimate business, would, if placed on the statutes and enforced, prevent the unjust and nefarious practices which have in the past operated to build up gigantic monopolies and drive competitors out of the market. The bill reported by the House judiciary committee has received the approval of the attorney general who states that it contains provisions which are needful to the proper prosecution of the present law against trade discrimination and that it in no instance violates the constitution of the United States. While the democrats will urge the adoption of more drastic provisions than those contained in the proposed law, they will support it in lieu of something more in accord with their ideas.

Briefly, the proposed law provides for publicity for corporations doing an interstate business, prohibits rebates or discrimination in rates and service by transportation companies and forbids conspiracy, cutting prices, etc., with a view to ruining competitors. Reviewing the measure, Representative Powers of Massachusetts, said to your correspondent, "It lies fully within the constitutional authority of congress, but it marks a distinct advance in the legislation already provided to prevent rebates and discrimination and the destruction of competition by large corporations and combinations. Publicity for corporate statistics is left largely in the discretion of the Interstate Commerce Commission which will not make public such facts and figures as could be used to the disadvantage of legitimate enterprises. No corporation is endangered by the provisions of the bill unless it is engaged in operations in violation of the law now on the statute or of its spirit."

The Littlefield anti-trust bill will doubtless pass the House at an early date with few dissenting votes. It remains to be seen, however, what the Senate will do with it. It is well known that the upper chamber contains champions—it might almost be written creatures—of the great corporate interests of the country and they are to be found in both parties Under the rules of senate a few men are all powerful and the question which now interests the vast army of consumers is whether the Senate will permit an adequate and effectual trust bill to be placed on the statutes.

Much has been made of the statehood deadlock in the senate but within the past week the supporters of the statehood bill have demonstrated that they have a majority of the senate with them, thus placing the opponents of the omnibus bill in the position of filibusters. Senator Quay and his friends are ready for a vote at any time and have so announced. They have proven the futility of further debate on the question and made evident the fact that the opposition is either determined to filibuster until the 4th of March or to avail themselves of the statehood debate to prevent all legislative enactment at this session.

The Cuban treaty is on the executive calendar of the senate and merely awaits an opportunity for ratification. That a sufficient number of senators favor the convention to insure its ratification is now certain. When there will be an executive session of sufficient duration to permit its further consideration rests with the opponents of the statehood bill.

The treaty with Colombia has finally and unexpectedly been concluded and has been sent to the senate. By its provisions the United States is to pay a bonus to Colombia of $10,000,000 and an annual rental of $250,000 beginning five years after the mutual ratification of the treaty. At the end of sixty years the entire property of the Panama Ry. Co. will revert to the United States. This country will collect and retain all tonnage and other fees collected, not only on the canal but also in the ports of Colon and Panama.

ROUND ABOUT US.

Mrs. George Friedrich discovered that a rare specimen of bald eagle had alighted near the house one day last week. Mr. Friedrich followed the bird for about a mile but could not get within shotgun range.—Brooklyn Exponent.

It is now claimed that the watch which Chio traded for the revolver with which he killed his wife and then committed suicide in Adrian a week ago last Friday, was stolen from a Toledo woman, and the owner of the time piece has written the officers at the county seat to secure the watch for her. A postmortem examination on the body of Chio, it is said, revealed the fact that he had a tumor on his brain, and that he was probably insane when he committed the double crime.—Hudson Gazette.

A Michigan minister states that he has had all he wants of preaching funeral sermons gratuitously for persons who when on earth are better off than they are now, never had any use for ministers, churches or religion. The clergyman is in the right. It is like asking the editor of the village paper to print notices of church socials free when the members and pastor do not take his paper. It seems as though there should be "a hot time" for some people as well as for others.—Detroit Tribune.

A Fayette woman suspected that her husband was in the habit of kissing the hired girl and resolved to detect him in the act. Saturday night she saw him pass quietly into the kitchen. The hired girl was out and the kitchen was dark. The jealous wife took a few matches in her hand and hastily placing a shawl over her head, as the hired girl often did, entered the back door and immediately she was seized and embraced in an ardent manner. With heart almost bursting the wife prepared to administer a terrible rebuke to the faithless spouse, and tearing herself away from his embrace, struck a match and stood face to face with—the hired man.—Brooklyn Exponent.

A Large Business.

Last fall when it became evident that there would be a short supply of coal this winter we took pains at once to lay in a supply of soft coal and wood of all kinds and have delivered out to the people of Tecumseh, over 900 tons of coal and 500 cords of wood during the season thus far. This seems quite an amount of coal to be sold by one firm, not, of course, all of it in a retail way, but by our efforts, we have succeeded in keeping several manufacturing concerns running, and been able to supply at all times, all the retail trade that came our way.

If every coal dealer in the country had made every endeavor to secure coal that we have there would have been less trouble in the coal supply and much less suffering in the cities. We shall endeavor at all times as well as this season, to keep on hand all kinds obtainable to supply the retail trade and to sell it with prompt delivery at the lowest possible price.

HARRY C. NOONE, Village Clerk.

THE SEWER.

A Number of Tax Payers Sent in a Petition to the COMMON COUNCIL

That They Figure on a Sewer for the Length of Chicago Street and Order the Same Built.

The council has advertised that it will meet in the council room on Wednesday evening, January 28, that they might hear any complaint of any property owner who desired to make one against building this sewer.

It seems to the HERALD that a sewer on Chicago street in Tecumseh is a good thing for the town if it is built large enough to carry away all the water and if catch basins are put in through the business portion of the town. If large catch basins are put in through the business portion there will never have to be a pavement in Tecumseh, for with this improvement the street will at all times be dry and there is no better road in the world than right in the business part of Tecumseh, adding simply a sewer to take away the surplus water in spring and fall.

The sewer should be built large enough to carry not only the surface water on Chicago street, but if side street sewers should at any time be built to carry the water brought from this source.

By this plan the improvement would be permanent and a benefit to every one. But if no catch basins are put in and the pipe is not built large enough it will be money thrown away.

Maccabees Installment.

The Ladies of the Modern Maccabees for Michigan assembled at their hall last Friday night, each with a guest, to witness the installment of their new officers. The only new ones were:

Record Keeper—Miss Emma Ferguson.

Mistress at Arms—Miss Jennie McClure.

Hive Physician—Dr. Pauline Wilson.

Sentinel—Mrs. Berding.

Picket—Mrs. Church.

After the ceremony the entertainment committee gave a short program consisting of recitations by Mrs. Hiens, Misses Adelaide Putnam and Anna Ferguson and a song by the Titus girls. Then came a surprise when, to some good rag time music by Mrs. Nye, four handsome colored ladies and their attendant colored gentlemen danced in, singing "Arabella Johnson." The ladies were elegantly attired in red and black gowns with fancy stockings, the gentlemen wearing white duck suits and plug hats.

Mrs. Tom Wilson, Mrs. Geo. VanAtta, Mrs. Tom McCann, Mrs. Chas. Heck, Miss Jennie McClure, Mrs. Colson, Miss Mary Riley and Mrs. Robert McClelland made up this distinguished crowd. After responding to an encore, they retired to their dressing room amid much laughter and applause.

A very fine banquet supper was then served and the members and their guests went on their way rejoicing.

A Horse on Claude.

C. E. Teachout, of this place, and his brother, Fred, of Tecumseh, who are widely known horsebuyers, often do considerable jockeying and jolleying with each other. Not long ago Claude coveted the possession of a dandy animal owned by Fred in Toledo, and after much bargaining bought the rangy trotter which has a mark of 2:23¼. The horse was shipped to Onsted where Claude went to meet it one day last week. But when the car door was opened the object that greeted his gaze nearly caused a fainting spell, and it takes a lot to make a horseman faint. It was an animated bundle of old blankets, straw, torn fly nets and rags, from which two wild eyes stared forth, while the steam from the beast's nostrils made it appear not unlike a smouldering garbage pile. Claude soon knew by the horse laugh of the bystanders, however, that it was his animal. Among the fine points of the masquerade dress was an old pair of straw padded overalls that encased the racer's front legs while of the half dozen placards pinned to the extravagant costume was one of the horse's name, "Slippery Elm."

Several dozen of Onsted's population had been put next to the deal and were all there ready for the entertainment and to see how Claude would take "Slippery Elm." It is said that he took the medicine without making a face and with apparently no bad effects. He is now training the really fine fast animal to beat Fred at his own game.—Brooklyn Exponent.

Visit of Dundee Encampment I. O. O. F.

Oddfellowship was well represented at the Tecumseh I. O. O. F. hall last Thursday evening when about 35 of Dundee's leading business men came on the 6:30 D. S. train and several more by conveyance, the occasion being the conferring of nine degrees by the Dundee staff. Clinton was also represented by fifteen members.

At midnight a fine banquet was served by the home Encampment at Mrs. Purdy's restaurant after which the Royal Purple degree was conferred on three candidates. It was unanimously agreed that the occasion was a success in every detail, that the Tecumseh Odd Fellows know how to entertain and that Dundee Odd Fellows know how to confer the degrees. The visitors left for home on the 8:35 D. S. Friday morning.

Get the Most Out of Your Food

You don't and can't if your stomach is weak. A weak stomach does not digest all that is ordinarily taken into it. It gets tired easily, and what it fails to digest is wasted.

Among the signs of a weak stomach are uneasiness after eating, fits of nervous headache, and disagreeable belching.

"I have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla at different times for stomach troubles, and a run down condition of the system, and have been greatly benefited by its use. I would not be without it in my family. I am troubled especially in summer with weak stomach and nausea and find Hood's Sarsaparilla invaluable." E. B. HICKMAN, W. Chester, Pa.

At 11:20. He Was Pastor of the Universalist Church at Marshall.

Marshall, Mich., January 24.—(Special.)—Rev. John M. Getchell, aged 64 years, and pastor of Grace Universalist church, of this city, died at 11:20 today after an illness of six weeks. He was well known as a clergyman and author throughout the state. Rev. Mr Getchell came here about thirty years ago from Minneapolis, Minn., where he was engaged in the newspaper business, and located in Fredonia township. He removed to this city last fall. He has been pastor of the Universalist church for the past eight years and was a member of the Shriners Lodge of Waterloo, Ia., of the Masonic lodge of Tecumseh, Mich., of the Knights Templar commandery of Adrian, of Peninsular lodge, I. The New Sewer.

Many inquiries are being made as to where the proposed sewer is to be built. The plan is to start the sewer on west end of Chicago street at Adrian street intersection and continue it east on Chicago street to the river. The first section, 720 feet from river to mill race, 15 inch pipe. Second section 1,060 feet from mill race to Wyandotte street 12 inch pipe. Third section, 2,310 feet from Wyandotte street to Pearl street, 10 inch pipe. Fourth section, 2,310 feet from Pearl street to Adrian street, 8 inch pipe. The depth of cut varying from 8 to 14 feet. The grade on Chicago street will give a minimum velocity of 150 feet per minute.

All persons interested in this sewer and especially those who own property along Chicago street, are requested to examine the plans and assessment roll, and also to attend a meeting at the council rooms on Wednesday, Jan. 28 at 7 o'clock p. m., which time the common council have set for action on the proposed sewer, that being the time for any and all who may be opposed to the proposed sewer, and those who have any objections to the proposed assessment roll, to make it known.

It is estimated that in a consumption of 100 gallons of water per capita per day, the 10 inch sewer will provide for a population of 3,885 persons, sewer running half full. The outlet below Wyandotte street will discharge 188,000 gallons per hour, and based on running half full would care for a population of 16,000.

The estimated cost of sewer complete on Chicago street is $6,004.60. This cost is proposed to be assessed $1,500 on the village at large and $4,500 on property along Chicago street. A map showing the proposed line of sewer, also the proposed assessment roll, apportioning the tax on property benefited, is now open for examination at the village clerk's office.

Finds Way to Live Long.

The startling announcement of a Discovery that will surely lengthen life is made by Editor O. H. Downey, of Churubusco, Ind. "I wish to state," he writes, "that Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption is the most infallible remedy that I have ever known for coughs, colds and grip It's invaluable to people with weak lungs. Having this wonderful medicine no one need dread pneumonia or consumption. Its relief is instant and cure certain." C. A. Wright guarantees every 50c and $1.00 bottle, and gives trial bottles free.

A WAY OPEN.

Many a Tecumseh Reader Knows it Well.

There is a way open to convince the greatest skeptic. Scores of Tecumseh people have made it possible. The public statement of their experience is proof the like of which has never been produced before in Tecumseh. Read this case of it given by a citizen:

Vet. O. Austin, who lives with his son in the northeast section of Tecumseh, says: "I am more than thankful that Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to my notice for they did me a great deal of good, in fact they stopped a dull aching pain in my back which had annoyed me for years, and also rendered the action of the kidney secretions normal which at times were too frequent and highly colored. I tried a number of so called kidney cures but I did not receive any benefit, before I learned about Doan's Kidney Pills and I knew people who had used them so I went to C. A. Wright's drug store and got them. To say I entertain a very favorable opinion of them as a kidney medicine is putting it in mild terms. They are all and more than they are represented to be."

For sale by all dealers: Price 50 cents per box, Foster-Milburn company, Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

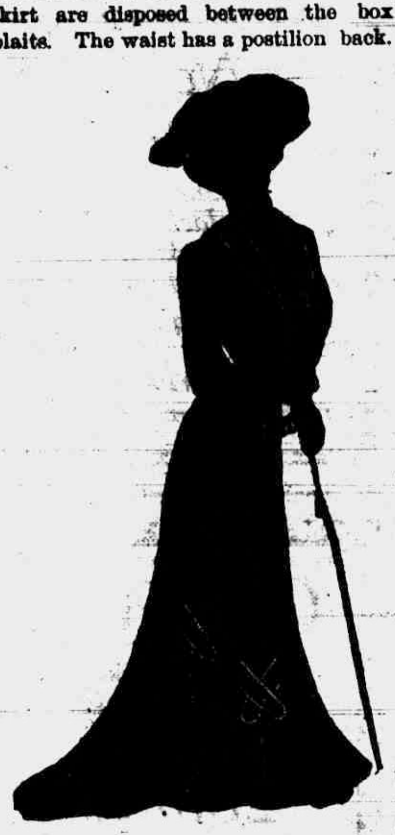
LATEST FASHION NOTES.

For Calling or Street Wear.

A costume of mixed suiting is here shown, with a blouse waist displaying a natty vest of white peau de soie trimmed in black braid. The strapped collar is of novelty braid over white, and piped with white. It has pockets and cuffs to match, and the strappings for the skirt are disposed between the box plaits. The waist has a postilion back.



Some of the new skirts are arranged in graduated box plaits being very narrow and flat at the top, widening out as they descend, and when released giving the fashionable fullness at the feet. Soft, pliable materials are especially appropriate for this style of skirt, and many of the models are threaded horizontally with bands of inserting, the band passing beneath the plaits. Three or four rows of inserting arranged at regular intervals and sometimes forming a slight dip in front, are used. The skirts are hung over five-gored foundations and the plaits are either secured on the under side or else they are stitched with Corticelli silk down to flounce depth and then left to flare gracefully. They are usually made with inverted plaits in back.

REMARKABLE CURE OF CROUP

A Little Boy's Life Saved.

I have a few words to say regarding Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It saved my little boy's life and I feel that I cannot praise it enough. I bought a bottle of it from A. E. Steere, of Goodwin, S. D., and when I got home with it the poor baby could hardly breathe. I gave the medicine as directed every ten minutes until he "threw up" and then I thought sure he was going to choke to death. We had to pull the phlegm out of his mouth in great long strings. I am positive that if I had not got that bottle of cough medicine, my boy would not be on earth today.—Joel Demont, Inwood, Iowa. Suit Verdict Against Steel.

St. Johns, Mich., Jan. 24.—A verdict of $4,419 20 was given the plaintiffs in the case of Hicks and otehrs against ex-State Treasurer George A. Steel of Detroit by a circuit court jury Friday. John C. Hicks, James B. Crawford and Henry E. Lewis, the plaintiffs, were stockholders in the First National bank of Ithaca at the time that institution closed its doors in 1896. The bank in 1895 held several notes against the Whipple Harrow company of St. Johns, and plaintiffs alleged that Steel agreed to pay one of them, amounting to $3,000, and told some of the directors he had done so. The bill in the case charged Steel with fraud, and the evidenced showed the methods by which bank examiners had been deceived for some time prior to the final crash.

Colby Offers Joint Resolution on Legislators' Salaries.

OTHER AMENDMENTS OFFERED

Prohibition Amendment Offered—Lovell Would Allow Women to Vote—More Appropriation Bills Filed—Sanitarium For Consumptives.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 29.—With only two senators—Barnes and Glasgow—voting nay, the upper house Wednesday afternoon passed a joint resolution relieving County Treasurer Buhrer of Wayne of the responsibility for the loss of $15,926.36 of inheritance tax funds deposited in the defunct City Savings bank of Detroit. The senators who opposed the resolution took the ground that the action was not constitutional.

Unless Attorney-General Blair, who feels it would be an injustice to hold Buhrer liable, gives an opinion that the auditor-general can legally proceed against Buhrer to recover the funds, the matter will remain a closed incident.

Using the Buhrer case as a precedent, Scullen in the senate and Dohany in the house will introduce a measure to relieve Gottfried Brinkman, treasurer of Gratiot township, of responsibility for the loss of $4,187 in the same bank. Of this sum $1,700 was township funds, the remainder being partly state and partly county money.

Appropriations were asked in the senate Wednesday by Mr. Jones for the Houghton School of Mines, for the fiscal year 1904, $55,000, and for the following year $65,000. Mr. Akin's joint resolution for a memorial at Monroe to the Kentucky troops who fought at River Raisin in 1863 carries with it an appropriation of $10,000.

Senator Burns' bill provides that "friends" as well as relatives of a deceased man may ask for a postmortem to discover the cause of death.

Another stream of proposed amendments to the constitution was poured in on the lower house Wednesday. Mr. Colby of Detroit laid a joint resolution before the house to fix the salary of legislators at $1,000 a year, with the usual mileage for one round trip, with no extra compensation for members from the upper peninsula. Computing the present compensation allowed legislators at the regular $3 a day for six months, they are receiving between $500 and $600 a session. Colby proposes to allow mileage and $2 a day for extra sessions. Colby wants to submit the amendment in April, if possible; if not, in the fall.

A prohibition amendment was presented in the senate by Senator Lockerby and in the house by Mr. Hallenbeck, to be submitted to a popular vote on the first Monday in April next. The section it is proposed to add to Article 4 reads:

"Sec. 50. The manufacture, gift or sale of spirituous, malt or vinous liquor in this state, except for medicinal, mechanical, chemical or scientific purposes, is prohibited, annd no property rights in such spirituous, malt or vinous liquors shall be deemed to exist, except the right to manufacture or sell for medical, mechanical, chemical or scientific purposes under such restrictions and regulations as may be provided by law. The legislature shall enact laws with suitable penalties for the suppression of the manufacture, sale and keeping for sale or gift of intoxicating liquors except as herein specified."

Mr. Lovell presented his proposed amendment for the qualifications of electors to allow every duly qualified citizen of Michigan to vote, at the proper age, without distinction of sex.

Senator Sovereign's amendment would reduce the number of justices of the peace in each township from four to two.

Mr. Anderson of Grand Rapids introduced an amendment to prohibit charter tinkering. He would compel all proposed changes in the charters of cities and villages to be first submitted to a vote of the people of the cities and villages affected.

Another state institution—a sanitarium for the treatment of tuberculosis, to be erected in "any suitable locality" at a cost of $200,000, with an annual appropriation of $20,000 for running expenses—is a proposition offered by Mr. Denby of Detroit at the instigation of the medical association and the state board of health.

Mr. Denby introduced another bill for the state board of health relative to the inspection of sewers and water supply. The bill provides that any municipality which contemplates instituting a water supply system must first submit its plans to the state board of health for inspection and examination.

Mr. Denby also introduced a bill enlarging the powers of corporations "so that they will not have to go outside of Michigan to get a charter and then return to do business in this state," as he explains it.

Appropriations for Michigan's Normal school system were asked by Mr. Barnaby as follows: For each of the fiscal years 1904 and 1905, $196,755, to be divided as follows: $103,210 for the State Normal, $55,560 for the Central, and $37,985 for the Northern, with the additional sum of $38,895 to be divided among the three for improvements.

Mr. Anderson, of Grand Rapids introduced a bill to provide for the criminal prosecution of the beaten party in a divorce suit on the charges of which the divorce is granted, and forbidding the marriage of such party until after the finding of the court.

Mr. Colby of Detroit offered two bills by request, one to guarantee veterans of the civil and Spanish wars preferment in appointment to state positions and providing for the impeachment of state officers who wilfully neglect this regulation; another to change legalized voting machines so that one instead of fourteen keys may be used for the election of presidential electors.

$10,000 Wreck on the Central.

Never endure this trouble. Use at once the remedy that stopped it for Mrs. N. A. Webster, of Winnie, Va. She writes: "Dr. King's New Life Pills wholly cured me of sick headaches I had suffered from for two years." Cure headache, constipation, biliousness. 25c at C. A. Wright's drug store.

TWENTY KILLED

A Terrible Wreck Near Tucson, Arizona.

OPERATORS' CARELESSNESS

Caused Head-End Collision—Engines Reared Up Like Animals in Combat—Wreckage Caught Fire—Two Michigan Men Hurt.

Tucson, Ariz., Jan. 29.—A disastrous collision occurred on the Southern Pacific railroad early Wednesday morning between two passenger trains. The wreck occurred near Vailsburg, Ariz., seventeen miles east of this city, and details as to the cause are difficult to obtain. Both trains, at full speed, came together with a terrific crash. The engines and cars were piled up in a mass and immediately took fire from the exploding oil tanks of the engines. The flames were communicated to the cars, eleven of which were consumed. Following is a list of dead as far as obtainable at this hour:

J. M. Hilton, Cambridge, Mass.; J. W. Bruce, engineer; R. R. Wilkey, engineer; George McGrath, fireman.

Among the seriously injured are: Frederico Romero, Juarez, Mex.; H. W. Hartman, Saginaw, Mich.; Frederick Donahue, Battle Creek, Mich.

Sixteen unidentified dead have been taken from the wreckage.

Later.—The failure of Night Operator George Clough, at Vails station, to deliver orders to a westbound train, known as the Sunset Limited, caused the head-end collison at 3 o'clock Wednesday morning between two passenger trains fourteen miles east of Tucson and six miles from Vails station, with fatal results. At last accounts, twenty bodies had bren taken from the mass of burned and charred wreckage, and it is believed several more are buried in the twisted and tangled mass of iron and steel.

The crash and the scenes immediately following were beyond description. So great was the impact from the two flying trains that the two engines reared up like animals engaged in combat and crushed the boilers like shells. The cars immediately in the rear rushed upon the mass of heated iron and piled up in an indescribable and frightfully tangled mass.

Fire broke out at once. The flames, fed by the oil from the broken tanks of the engines, quickly communicated to the cars, and the whole mass was soon in flames. Those who were able to escape from the cars in the rear of the trains quickly came to the rescue. But all their efforts went for little, as the pile of debris was so heated that the workers could not approach near enough to work.

A relief train was quickly made ready, and with three surgeons was hurried to the scene. They found a terrible state of confusion.

Men and women were running about in a panic. Sixteen of the worst injured were brought to Tucson, where they were made as comfortable as possible at the railroad hospital. Six of these were seriously injured and are not expected to recover.

A SHARP DEBATE.

Courtsmartial in Philippines Sets Senators' Tongues Wagging.

Washington, Jan. 29.—A sharp debate was precipitated in the senate Wednesday, when Mr. Rawlins called up his resolution offered Tuesday, directing the secretary of war to furnish the senate the proceedings of a number of courtsmartial in the Philippines. In the course of his remarks Mr. Rawlins referred to the death of Fr. Augustin and said he was murdered in cold blood. This aroused the ire of Mr. Beveridge, who demanded specifically to know who had committed the cold-blooded murder. Mr. Carmack entered the debate and characterized the charge which, he said, repeatedly had been made that Democrats were assailing the army, as the "meanest and dirtiest" of any that had been made against the party. Mr. Proctor defended Captain Cornelius M. Brownell, who had been mentioned in the Rawlins resolution as having been responsible for Fr. Augustin's death.

The house Wednesday made slow progress with the Indian appropriation bill, covering only about eight pages in more than four hours. Mr. Burton (Ohio) hung on the flank of Mr. Sherman (N. Y.), who had charge of the bill, and insisted upon an explanation of every item. He succeeded in having several appropriations cut down. In the course of the debate he furnished some interesting statistics on the subject of Indian education, designed to show that the more money the government spent the more helpless the Indians became. The senate amendments to the bill to amend the bankruptcy act were agreed to.

Coal Combine In Boston.

Boston, Jan. 29.—The investigation of the New England coal situation by the sub-committee of the committee on merchant marine and fisheries of the national house of representatives, which was begun here last Monday, has been concluded. Members of the committee stated that the hearing had proved satisfactory, especially in establishing the fact that a combination of some sort has existed between coal operators to raise prices. The committee expects to probe further into the question through hearings at other points. The testimony yesterday developed evidence showing that coal costing from $5 to $6 50 a ton had been sold at prices ranging from $12 to $16. The committee will return to Washington.

Columbia, S. C., Jan. 29.—In the banks of Columbia Wednesday subscription lists were opened to raise a fund for the erection of a monument to N. G. Gonzales, late editor of the State.

Want Knappen For Regent.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Jan. 29.—The Grand Rapids alumni of the State university held a meeting Wednesday afternoon and decided to indorse Loyal E. Knappen as a candidate for regent to succeed Roger S. Butterfield, who will decline another term. Knappen's candidacy will conflict with that of George A. Farr of Grand Haven, who will ask for the nomination.

Bernard Granted a Pardon.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 29.—Charles L. Bernard, sentenced to seven years in Jackson prison from Van Buren county, Feb. 14, 1900, has been granted a pardon. In an attack upon a boat he was running on Black river, he shot an officer. He was wounded himself but recovered.

THE RURAL ROUTE

Will Put 40,000 Fourth Class Offices Out of Business.

ROUTES DOUBLED IN 1902

First Route in the United States Was Established in October, 1896, Out of Village of Climax, Kalamazoo County, Michigan.

Washington, Jan. 29.—A. W. Machen, general superintendent of the free delivery system of the postoffice department, made the interesting statement Wednesday that by July 1, 1905, the department expects to have all of the available territory in the United States covered with rural delivery routes. This will mean well onto 40,000 routes and the discontinuance of an equal number of fourth-class offices. Superintendent Machen has had charge of the rural delivery service from its inception in 1896, so he is thoroughly familiar with all the conditions under which it has grown.

Speaking of the rural service generally and its future, he said:

"The number of rural routes in the entire country has increased about 100 per cent during the calendar year 1902. To be exact, the number of routes in operation Jan. 1, 1902, was 6,211, and on Jan. 1, 1903, 12,473. By July 1 next, 2,500 more will be added. The postal appropriation bill now before congress calls for sufficient money to establish 10,000 new routes for the next fiscal year, so that by July 1, 1904, there will be approximately 25,000 routes in the country. The time when the department hopes to have rural routes everywhere is one year further on. By everywhere, I mean in all sections where the population is sufficient so that at least 100 families live along the roads of a proposed route. One hundred is the minimum number of families that must be on a route. Of course, in scattered sections, notably in the west, the population is so thinly scattered that the people there cannot hope for rural mail delivery.

First Route in Michigan.

"This fine growth of the service covers a period of less than seven years, for it was on Oct. 1, 1896, that the first route was established. The village of Climax, in Kalamazoo county, got the first rural route in Michigan. On Oct. 2, 1896, Frank H. Jones, then first assistant postmaster-general, directed, upon the request of Senator Burrows, that Climax be selected to test the rural free service, and the service went into operation from that office on Nov. 1 following. Up to the 1st of the present year the number had increased to 674. There have been received petitions for 1,396 routes in Michigan. Of this number, 107 have been denied mostly because of insufficiency of population. By the end of April next 114 additional routes will be established there. By March 15 next the department will have complete rural free delivery in Ingham and Clinton counties, and the establishment of complete delivery will follow shortly in Kalamazoo, Kent, Hillsdale and probably a few other southern Michigan counties. All that will be necessary is the establishment of a few additional routes in these counties and the rearranging of existing ones."

Prince Committed Suicide.

Nordhausen, Prussian Saxony, Jan. 29.—prince Wolfgang Zu Solberg-Stolberg, who was found shot dead Tuesday morning in the park of his castle at Rotlerberode, probably committed suicide. His father lay dead in the castle of Stolberg, and the son started to drive from his own castle at Rotlerberode to spend the night by his father's body. The prince took a hunting rifle with him. Before he got out of the park he alighted from the carriage, and taking his rifle went into the thick woods. The driver heard a shot and when the prince failed to return made a search and found him dead, shot in the head, and his hands still clutching the rifle.

To Help Starving Fins.

Washington, Jan. 29.—The treasury department has received a letter from the management of the Christian Herald, calling attention to the present destitute condition of a large part of the people of Finland and asking that immigrants from that country be given special consideration by the immigration officials at New York. In compliance with this suggestion, the department has instructed the New York authorities to construe the laws as liberally as possible in the cases of these arriving Finns, who are being forced out of their country to escape famine. The record shows that about 1,700 Finns arrived in this country in December.

American Methods Inapplicable.

London, Jan. 29.—Presiding at a meeting of the shareholders of Great Eastern railroad Lord Claud Hamilton said that after careful study the directors of the board had concluded that while some features of American railroad managements were deserving of further consideration, American methods generally were totally inapplicable to this country. The Great Eastern railroad had tried an American locomotive for a year and a half, but it was found to be a complete failure.

Forty Kaffirs Killed.

Durban, Natal, Jan. 29.—Serious factional fighting between Kaffirs has occurred in the Umminto district, thirty-seven miles from here. It is reported that forty of the natives were killed.

Disinfect the Money.

Mazatlan, Mex., Jan. 29.—Many people now in the lazareto will die. More families have taken out permits to leave the city. It is now proposed to disinfect all money in circulation.

Michigan Postmasters.

Washington, January 29.—Michigan postmasters were appointed Wednesday as follows: Orleans, Ionia county, E. W. Olmstead, vice John Morton, resigned; South Fairfield, Lenawee county, Manford Fairbanks, vice Mrs. Susan H. Lake, resigned.

CHAPMAN THE MAN.

Bliss Selects Him for Office of Game Warden.

HIS TERM BEGINS MARCH 15

Senator Woodman Hot After the Warring Telephone Companies—More Appropriation Bills Introduced—Hunt Wants Juvenile Court.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 28.—The game warden contest has been settled. Governor Bliss last night told Charles H Chapman of Sault Ste. Marie that he would issue his commission today, the appointment dating from March 1, next, to run four years. It will not be necessary for the governor to send Chapman's name to the senate for confirmation. The senate bills requiring such procedure are in limbo, as are the senate leaders, though they take matters with an air of resignation. Chapman would not name his chief deputy last night.

In the Senate.

Senator Woodman of Van Buren is going to see to it that the public be no longer made the victim of warring telephone companies. "This state is being gridironed with telephone lines," he said, "and the more we get the less our opportunities for easy communication seem to become. My bill makes it compulsory for every telephone company to receive messages from other companies, installing switchboards for that purpose."

The attorney-general is preparing for his fight with the Michigan Central, and wants more clerks. He needs more money to pay for them. In a bill introduced by Senator Lockerby, it is proposed to increase his salaries appropriation from $6,000 to whatever he needs for the extra expense, not to exceed $10,000.

Appropriations of $187,500 for the hospital for the insane at Newberry for the years 1904 and 1905 were asked by Senator Fuller in a bill presented to the upper house.

In the House.

Cassius M. Jenks, Democrat, Tuesday introduced in the house the bill which he noticed last week for the amendment of the charter of the city of Jackson. Among its salient features is a clause providing for the election of eight aldermen-at-large each year for a term of two years, not more than one candidate to come from each ward.

The Denby bill, taxing the property of estates held by "trustees and agents," as well as by "executors and administrators," was reported out by the house committee on general taxation and placed on the general order. Denby disclaims any intention of aiming at any particular property through his bill, but it covers the big estates of the late James McMillan of Detroit and David Whitney, Jr.

Three more appropriation bills were presented. Mr. Pettit asks $55,450 for each of the fiscal years 1904 and 1905 for the Michigan College of Mines at Houghton. He also asks $65,180 additional to be expended as follows: Metallurgical building, $45,000; equipment for mining engineering, $9,000; for chemistry, $4,000; for mechanical engineering, $1,000; for geological museum, $2,000; for improvements to grounds, $4,180.

Mr. Baumgartner asked for Jackson prison $171,435 for the years 1903 and 1904; $147,000 of this amount to be expended for the construction of new cells in the west wing and $10,000 for a storage plant.

Mr. Reynolds asked for $9,900 for the reformatory at Ionia for the fiscal year 1904, the estimate including $500 for library purposes.

Mr. Hallenbeck of Eaton introduced his bill to provide for the election of county drain commissioners for terms of two years.

Mr. Hunt of Detroit introduced in the house a bill providing for the establishment of a juvenile court in Detroit and "to regulate the treatment and control of dependent, neglected and delinquent children under the age of 16 years in Detroit," this court to have jurisdiction over children under 16; no child under 14 to go to Ionia reformatory or Detroit house of correction; no child under 12 to go to jail or prison; Wayne county to provide a suitable place for those to be detained. The bill authorizes the appointment by the governor of a judge of a municiple court, to be known as the juvenile court, with a salary of $4,000 a year, "to be allowed monthly by the board of county auditors." The court shall have power to appoint one or more "discreet persons" as probation officers, without compensation.

Mr. Van Zoeren is after the St. Joe marriage mill. The popular summer Sunday pastime of taking a wife on short notice in Michigan will be knocked out of the amusement list if the bill passes. It stipulates that five days' notice must be given before matrimonially inoculated persons can get a marriage license. It also prohibits Sunday marriages of other than resident Michiganders.

The house has decided to hold afternoon sessions only until further notice. This means that the daily business for this week at least is to be transacted by both bodies at 2 o'clock.

Falling Ice Killed Him.

Cassopolis, Mich., Jan. 28.—The body of William Daniels, village night watch, was found at 2 o'clock Tuesday morning in the rear of G. L. Smith's store, where he had been struck by a mass of falling ice from the eaves and his skull crushed.

Griswold Sentenced For Two Years.

Bay City, Mich., Jan. 28.—Judge Shepard Tuesday morning denied the motion for new trial in Dr. Griswold's case and in the afternoon sentenced him to two years in the Ionia reformatory.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

CHAPTER VI.

AN AMERICAN GIRL'S PLUCK.

ANOTHER glance from the window showed Frances that the car had come to a stop near a new bridge over a branch of the Irtish. Involuntarily she sighed for the man who had built that bridge—Denton, whose eye was keen and steady, whose muscles were of iron.

But Denton was miles farther on, at the Obi.

"Now," said Neslerov, as the girl sank back in her seat, "let us face this situation, my dear. Let us realize the true significance. We are practically alone, you and I. Save for the poor wretches in that village yonder, we are the only people on this earth just now. Can you realize the fullness of that statement? You are mine—absolutely and wholly mine."

"Oh, you cur! You coward!" exclaimed Frances. Her hand went as if by instinct toward that pocket from which she had drawn her revolver on a previous occasion. Neslerov saw her face turn whiter still, and he laughed pleasantly.

"Of course I guarded against that," he said. "I knew you would, with your American impulsiveness, try to shoot me again. So, while you slept, I quietly took your little toy pistol from your pocket. I have it here. This, I believe, deprives you of the power to do any more mischief."

"Oh, you miserable coward! You thief!" said Frances in a tense voice. "I wish there was a good American fist here to strike that grinning face of yours!"

"Undoubtedly," said Neslerov, with an exasperating coolness, "that would be pleasant for you, but it would be unfortunate for the American who owned the fist. One blow—peste! He would be torn apart by my agreeable savages yonder."

She could not resist the temptation to follow his finger as it pointed through the window on his side of the car. A short distance, on the banks of the stream, she saw a wretched, miserable village of rude huts. Men and women, dressed in leather, undressed skins, heavy cloths from Moscow merchants, stood in groups, all with their faces toward the car.

"Were I to say the word," said Neslerov, "these people would tear you limb from limb and would perform the same agreeable service for any fool who attempted to interfere between us."

"Monster!" she gasped.

"Of course I am a monster to you," he said. "All Russians are monsters to those who do not like us. We may have our little peculiarities. One of them is that what we cannot get by fair means we get some other way. I spoke to your father, and I spoke to you. I offered the honest love of a Russian prince. I was spurned. But now the game is mine, and I shall win. You shall become my wife before your father has time to return from the Obi."

"Never! I would prefer to be torn apart by your villagers!"

"You believe that now while you are in the heat of anger, but a short period of rest and contemplation will show you the folly of your refusal. Think of this. I shall go out now and obtain some food. We may remain here a week. Who knows? Before I leave you I wish to say that until you consent to have the priest of that village make you my wife you shall not be permitted to leave this car. I much prefer, as would any man, a willing bride; but, denied this, I will compel you to obey. It will be the worse for you. I offered love—an affectionate embrace. You refused. Now I command! Think this matter settled only when we are married."

"Never! You have my revolver and, I suppose, one of your own. Shoot me if you will. I will not marry you!"

"It will not be you I shoot. What do you think your father will do when he finds you are left behind?"

"Without doubt he will obtain a special train and come here after me. Then, Prince Neslerov, beware!"

He smiled like a wolf and showed his teeth.

"That is what I wanted you to say. If when your father comes here you are not my wife, I will shoot him dead."

"You dare not!" she gasped.

"I dare anything. No report of mine would be discredited at St. Petersburg. I could prove that your father was a conspirator against the government and was shot while fighting my soldiers."

"There is a government of the United States of America!"

"True, but at a distance. I do not fear it. But consider what I have said. I will return with food."

He left the car, securing the doors to prevent her escape. When she saw him striding toward the village, she leaned against the window and studied the rude people.

"I am helpless—absolutely helpless!" she moaned. "Oh, if he had not taken my revolver I could have shot him—or myself."

She looked about her for some method whereby she could, if the need should come, take her own life rather than submit to his demands. She knew that if there were a priest in this squalid place he would obey Neslerov, and mumble some words perfectly meaningless to her, but which would give Neslerov power over her. She walked the length of the apartment like a caged lioness.

Women turned into their huts and came out again. She saw Neslerov start back toward the car carrying a wooden tray. She shuddered again.

"God give me strength, courage, calmness!" she murmured. "To lose consciousness would be to fall a victim to him."

She nerved herself to meet him as his footsteps sounded on the platform. The door opened, and he entered with a bowl of gruel, some steaming potatoes, roast fowl, coffee and some coarse bread.

"It is not quite like our usual fare," he said, "but it is better than being hungry."

He set the dishes on a table he improvised out of the back of a seat. He had a large traveling bag with him, and from it he took a bottle of wine.

"We will pledge each other," he said, with a laugh.

"I do not wish any," said Frances.

"Come, don't be churlish! Let us get over the unpleasant part. Drink a toast to your future husband."

"I will not. I will not touch it!"

"Drink—drink my health!" he commanded.

"I will not!"

"I will make you!"

He held the cup in his right hand. With his left he grasped her by the hair. He bent back her head.

"Open your mouth. Swallow the wine. I will choke you!" he cried.

With a powerful effort she wrenched herself free and to her feet, and the wine went to the floor with a smash.

Her eyes were glaring with desperation. She clinched her fist and rained blow upon blow upon his face.

Curses deep and terrible burst from him. He clutched her round the waist and struggled with her. She exerted all her strength. She was like a ferocious tigress. Her nails scratched his face and tore his hair. Her blows cut his lips on his teeth. But he was a powerful man and used his strength against this captive woman. With a gasp she succumbed and sank helpless and exhausted almost in his arms.

"Curse you!" he spluttered between his swollen lips. "I have wasted my kindness on you! I should have starved you. But I will delay no longer. I'll drag you to the priest, and in ten minutes you will be the Princess Neslerov—and my slave for life. I'll break your heart, you devil!"

He closed his arms tightly about her and dragged her from the car. The villagers stared in astonishment as they saw him coming toward them with his burden.

"What means this strange happening, little father?" asked a woman of an older man of the village. "Is the man killing her?"

"Let be!" growled the man. "Use your eyes in your house, but meddle not with others. The man's gold is good. He will not hurt her. She is probably his wife."

Russian wives are accustomed to cruelty from their husbands. A beating is but part of their demonstrations of authority as head of the house. The women looked on with apathy, while the men smiled.

"He has married a Tartar," they said among themselves.

"Help! Save me from this man!" gasped Frances as Neslerov half dragged, half carried her into the nearest group.

"Where is your priest?" Neslerov demanded. "Get him at once. Not only he, but all in the place, will receive pay. Call the priest at once!"

"Save me! I am an American! Gordon—the man who built—the road—is my father!" cried Frances, struggling again.

A bent old man was seen shambling toward them.

"Come," said Neslerov roughly. "This young woman and I are to be married. Hurry. We have been left behind in that car, and to save her good name she must become my wife. Proceed!"

"No! For pity's sake, do not!" cried Frances. "My father will pay you well! Do not compel me to marry him! I hate him!"

"I command you to marry us!" shouted Neslerov.

A tall man of about middle age stepped from the crowd.

"It is wrong," he said. "Who you are I know not, but it is not the way to win a wife. Release the young woman. Let us hear what she has to say."

"What she has to say! Curse you!" howled Neslerov. He did release her for a moment and sprang forward. His fist shot out against the man's face. Without an effort in his own behalf he fell.

"I am Neslerov, governor of Tomsk!" shouted the prince, now perfectly frenzied. "I command you, old dotard, to say the words that will make this girl my wife."

"Please do not!" cried Frances. "He has stolen me from my father! He is a cruel monster! I cannot marry him!"

"He is his excellency, the governor," muttered the old man. "We must obey."

Neslerov seized her by the wrist and swung her toward the priest. The villagers crowded round, awestruck at the great name they had heard. They well knew the governor. Many of them had felt the knout at his command.

"It must be done," again muttered the priest.

"No, no!" cried Frances, trying to wrench away from Neslerov.

A boy slid quietly away from the crowd and ran.

"Stand there, curse you!" said Neslerov, grasping Frances by the hair. The pain of his rude hand on her lovely hair made Frances cry out in terror, pain and shame. "I'll kill you if you move again!"

There was the sound of a quick and stealthy tread. There was a swish in the air. There was a gasp, a murmur from the crowd, which fell back in consternation.

A heavy Russian riding whip swung through the air in an arc and, descending, cut the skin across the face of Neslerov.

"Curse you!" said a hearty American voice. "I'll have your life for this!"

"Jack! Oh, Jack!" cried Frances, and then, the last vestige of her strength deserting her, she fell unconscious into Jack Denton's outstretched arms.

Car Barns Destroyed.

Bay City, Mich., Jan. 29.—The car barns of the Consolidated Railway company were destroyed by fire just before midnight last night, together with sixteen cars and snow plows, sweepers and wreckers, entailing a total loss aggregating $75,000, with insurance between $36,000 and $40,000. The buildings were 100 by 250 feet. The fire started in a car in the extreme rear and swept through the building so rapidly as to drive employes out.

Minister Committed Suicide.

Hillsdale, Mich., Jan. 29.—Rev. Richard Osborn, an old resident of this county, committed suicide at his home near this city about noon Wednesday. He was 85 years of age, and for some time had been in feeble health. He lived alone with his wife and required constant care and attention. She missed him from the house and on searching discovered him hanging in the barn, dead.

TO BE OR NOT TO BE!

A Good Letter From a Tax Payer About the Question of the

CHICAGO STREET SEWER

Containing Ideas That Would be Well for All to Consider.

Like all other public questions, the question of installing a sewer throughout Chicago street, has precipitated a discussion. One element amongst our citizens is arrayed against the measure and one is championing the cause.

The arguments pro and con are many, but let us consider these arguments in a temperate and judicial mood and not allow our personal selfishness or our personal stubborness to stand in the way of "the greatest good to the greatest number."

Some argue that a sewer is not a necessity. In one sense no modern improvement is a "necessity." Five years ago we thought the telephone a useless extravagance. Today, how many of us would willingly remove it from our homes?

It has been contended that the sewer, (as planned), will prove too small to conduct the sewage of our village. Is it not at least reasonable to infer that a reliable engineering firm is fully competent to decide this matter,—a matter which is capable of being mathematically demonstrated?

There are those, too, who say that the sewer should be sufficiently large to accomodate all surface water. This is absolutely contrary to modern engineering practice and it is also contrary to economy. The modern practice requires that all surface water be conducted in separate pipes or by means of outside channels, for it has been proven that, where pavements do not exist, the infiltration of sand and similar sediment causes clogging of the pipes and endless cleaning and repairs. Furthermore, a tithe of the expense required to pipe this water beneath the soil would put our naturally excellent streets under such uniform grade and surface as to make a mud hole but a memory!

Some also argue that none of the expense attendant upon the installation of this sewer should be borne by the village at large. This would be quite true were it not for the fact that the Chicago street main is the natural and practical outlet for the entire eventual sewerage system of Tecumseh. Because of this, this main requires to be more than twice as large as it would were it to accommodate only the abutting property, and, in addition to this, proper provision has to be made at intersecting streets to care for future laterals.

It is as proper that this proportion of 25 per cent. of the entire cost of the Chicago street artery should be spread upon the general tax roll as that the village should pay 25 per cent. of the expense of all cement walks.

Moreover, if the payment of the entire assessment in one lump sum should work hardship upon any individual, it would be entirely within the province of the Common Council to arrange to spread the entire payment over a period of five years, one-fifth to be paid into the village treasury annually.

As a compromise measure it has been proposed that this sewer be begun near Pearl street, extend through the alleys in the rear of the business blocks, reunite at Ottawa street and thence continue to the river. This is unworthy of serious consideration. It is not a feasible proposition. The expense of construction and maintenance of these two small sewers would be greatly in excess of the one larger sewer and the ease of connection would not be increased. Lavatories in offices, fountains in groceries, motors in shops, attachments in dental offices and barber shops, usually in the front of business buildings, must be taken into consideration as well as water closets which are usually in the rear of these buildings.

Thus are summed the main contentions to this project and thus are they contradicted.

Our pocket books are the most tender portions of our anatomy, and, were we to admit it, the real blow is on the solar plexi of these bits of leather and is the sole cause of all these heartburnings and this intense desire for the public weal.

Let us rise above all this; let us make "Tecumseh" a synonym for municipal beauty and municipal progressiveness! Let us make our village so desirable a place to live that the retiring city man and the retiring farmer will certainly seek it for a home—a place where can be had the conveniences of a city and the quietude of the country; let us make it so desirable by our progressiveness that factories will seek us out, and by doing all of these things do not let us forget that we are making our own lives more comfortable and more healthful and that our property is enhancing in value.

What is more barbarous than the old fashioned "vault?" It pollutes the air we breathe and the water we drink. It is a constant annoyance, a constant expense, a constant eyesore and a pestilential thing! Make a start in the right direction and abolish it so much as we may. Begin by putting a sewer on Chicago street and by willingly contributing the few dollars which you individually will be compelled to pay toward a genuine sanitary and commercial necessity.

Robert Crosby.

In the second hour of Monday morning, Jan. 19, the soul of Robert Crosby passed into the Silent Land. As quietly and gently as he had lived, he went from the midst of them who loved him.

Robert Crosby was born in Pickering Yorkshire, England, June 6, 1842. He removed with his parents to Derham, Oxford County, Canada, when he was a lad of fourteen. In 1863 he came to Tecumseh and had been a resident of this place just forty years at the time of his death.

An aged mother, four brothers and seven sisters are left to mourn the vacant place in the family circle.

On the 8th of Oct. 1864 he was united in marriage to Susan M. Potten, of New London, Oneida County, N. Y. To them was born one son, Joseph, who with the sorrowing wife mourns the loss of a loving husband and kind father.

He was a faithful and earnest worker in the Master's service, having with his wife united with the M. E. church of Tecumseh in 1875, and for more than a quarter of a century, the alter of God's house has been made beautiful and many weary hearts gladdened by the flowers furnished and placed there by their loving hands.

The funeral was held at his late residence in Brownville Wednesday at 2 p. m. Rev. Seelye officiating.

A true friend, a true citizen, in all things true.

CARD OF THANKS.

We desire to extend the most heartfelt thanks to those who, in the hour of deepest trial, gave to us of friendships' richest offerings, love, sympathy and kindness.

CHICAGO ST. SEWER

Thinking there is Much Talk about the Question of the Proposed Sewer,

THE HERALD REPORTER

Interviews every Property Owner on Chicago Street except Two or Three Persons who Could not be Found, as to their Opinion and All are Reported as Here Stated.

Do you think the proposed sewer on Chicago street would be a benefit to the village and would you be willing to pay the assessment made against your property to help build it?

Property of Mrs. G. Knight, of Adrian, Samuel Shutts, resident—Mrs. Knight does not favor sewer and would not care to pay assessment. Let those who receive benefit pay for proposed sewer.

Mrs. Abbie Fisher—I am decidedly opposed to the sewer and think it should connect only the business portion of the town.

Dr. Jenkins—Tecumseh has been free from disease for many years. Sewers are no preventatives against disease, therefore I do not think favorably of the plan.

Mrs. Jennie Hall—I am opposed to the sewer as it is planned.

P. W. A. Fitzsimmons—I think the sewer is a good thing for Tecumseh and am greatly in favor of it.

Misses Sarah and Agnes McNair—Our property is not in need of sewerage and taxing property where no sewer is needed, we think unjust, therefore we are greatly opposed to the plan.

Mrs. John Heck—I am decidedly opposed to the sewer and would not pay the assessment. Let those wh: receive the most benefit pay for the sewer.

Mrs. A. Bramble—I could not use a sewer without remodeling my buildings, and I do not think the expense would justify me. I am opposed to the sewer.

Miss M. Taylor—I am opposed to the sewer and, as I have no need of it, would not care to meet the assessment.

Miss Nettie Southworth—I am not enough versed regarding sewerage to express an opinion.

Horatio Keyser—I am opposed to the present plan of sewerage.

B. P. Anderson—I am not in a position to thoroughly discuss the sewer question.

S. W. Anderson—I will agree with the majority on the sewer question.

E. B. Anderson—I think we could do well without the sewer in the residence portion.

Fred Ferguson—A sewer properly built is a good thing, but I am not in favor of a sewer built of 8 or 10 in. tile.

Mason Leonard—I have no use for the proposed sewer.

James Updike—I do not need any sewer for my property.

Chas. Matthews—I am decidedly opposed to the sewer. We, in this locality, think we can care for all drainage upon our property.

A. C. Aylesworth—I am much opposed to this plan of a sewer.

Horace Westcott—I do not care for this proposed sewer and do not feel like standing the assessment.

Henry Nyland—I do not need any sewerage upon my property. In fact, I am greatly against it.

R. A. Heesen—Tecumseh needs a sewer and the one proposed would be a benefit to all living on Chicago street.

Mrs. Jane Satterthwaite—I am opposed to the sewer and think there is no need of taxing those who do not care for it.

Elbridge Hyde—I am opposed to the sewer and think those benefited by it should stand the expense.

John Osborn—I am decidedly opposed to the sewer.

Mrs. Cordelia DeWolfe—I am opposed to this plan of a sewer. If my property is assessed I would have to sell.

John Waters—I am much opposed to the sewer.

James McCann—I am in favor of the proposed sewerage, and think it a move in the right direction. I will be willing to pay my assessment.

B. J. Garlinghouse—Individually I am in favor of the sewer, but would not care to impose a tax upon those who are unable to stand the same.

James Henderson—I am not prepared to discuss the sewer question at present.

E. H. Halladay—I am personally in favor of a sewer in Tecumseh, but would not care to burden the people with a tax which they are unable to stand.

Mrs. J. N. Heck—I am decidedly opposed to the sewer.

Mrs. R. L. Morley—I am not prepared to discuss the sewer question.

A. D. Lawrence—I see no necessity of a sewer, except for the business portion of the town.

Thos. Elliott—I am in favor a sewer to carry away surface water and other purposes.

A. C. Paxson—I am much opposed to the sewer for Tecumseh.

H. L. Jones—I am decidedly opposed to having sewerage at the present time. In my opinion Tecumseh is not prepared to meet the expense of a sewer.

Geo. W. Frazer—I will agree with the majority in regard to the sewer.

Dell Hubbard—I do not want a sewer for my property.

C. Patterson—If Tecumseh has a sewer let it be a first class one or none at all.

Jas. VanAntwerp—I am opposed to the sewer on Chicago street.

Archie Allen—I am not prepared to fully express an opinion on the sewer question.

John Mahaney—I am in favor of a large-tile, first class sewer to carry off all the storm water.

L. O. Church—I am greatly against the sewer for Tecumseh.

Geo. Washington—I could not make any use of the sewer on my property.

James Hastings—I do not approve of the sewer.

Mrs. John Hastings—I am opposed to the sewer.

Mrs. Jerry Root—I am in favor of the sewer and think it a good thing.

E Priest—I am opposed to this proposed sewer.

All Stuffed Up

That's the condition of many sufferers from catarrh, especially in the morning. Great difficulty is experienced in clearing the head and throat.

No wonder catarrh causes headache, impairs the taste, smell and hearing, pollutes the breath, deranges the stomach and affects the appetite.

To cure catarrh, treatment must be constitutional—alterative and tonic.

"I was afflicted with catarrh. I took medicines of different kinds, giving each a fair trial, but gradually grew worse until I could hardly hear, taste or smell. I then concluded to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and after taking five bottles I was cured and have not had any return of the disease since." [illegible], Lebanon, Kan.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Cures catarrh—it soothes and strengthens the mucous membrane and builds up the whole system.

Chas. Hooten—I do not want the sewer for my property.

R. S. Cummins, Sr.—I am in favor of the proposed sewer.

J. S. Strong—I am much opposed to a sewer.

Mrs. Cynthia Hoag—I am not in favor of the proposed sewer.

Ezra Coryell—I do not favor the proposed sewer.

P. J. Welling—I do not think the sewer would be a good thing for Tecumseh.

Mrs. A. Lowry—I am in favor of a first class sewer.

Geo. Tiffany—

Dr. Geo Howell—I think the sewer is all right if used for street drainage.

Miss J. Hough—I am not in favor of a sewer at present.

G. H. Tansley—I do not approve of the proposed sewer.

Miss Ann Hewitt—I think the sewer would be a good thing for Tecumseh.

Ettinger & Eberly—We think Tecumseh needs a sewer.

J. J. Freeman—A first class sewer is a good thing, but I think Tecumseh unable at present to meet the expense of such a sewer.

Geo N. Stacy—I think the sewer in Tecumseh would be a good thing providing catch basins were placed in the business portion to take away the surface water. as in this way all future use of pavement would be done away with. I would be willing and glad to pay my assessment.

Chas. Patterson—I certainly think a sewer would be a great benefit to both residents and business people of Tecumseh and I would consider that the moment a sewer passes a residence or business block, the land valuation is increased from 5 to 20 per cent.

A. B. Harding—I am much opposed to this proposed sewer.

Satterthwaite Bros.—We are decidedly in favor of a sewer.

[illegible] Wright—I am much in favor of the proposed sewer.

Anderson Bros.—We are not prepared to discuss this important question.

Mrs. Joseph Hanford—I stand neutral in regards the proposed sewer.

A. W. Mills—I am in favor of a large first class sewer.

A. J. Usborne—I would pay my assessment with the rest of the property owners if the sewer is put in, but I have not thoroughly looked into the matter.

E. P. Keyser—I am in favor of a general sewer.

Mrs. J. D. Shull—I am not prepared to make a statement in regard to the sewer.

Fred Kolkloesch—I do not think much of the sewer as proposed.

Webster Anderson—I am opposed to the sewer as proposed up Chicago street, but a sewer for the business blocks would be a good thing.

Lucius Lilley—If a majority of property owners on Chicago street are in favor of a sewer, I do not object provided the abutting property pays the expense. But I am opposed to taxing property outside of Chicago street. I think each street or cross street that is benefited by the sewer should pay the expense when a majority of the property owners ask for it.

Jas. Montague—I am not in favor of a sewer, but I am in favor of cleaning up the surface first.

H. I. Bidwell—I am decidedly opposed to the sewer for Tecumseh.

Geo. Merritt—On general principles, I am financially opposed to the building of a sewer.

E. C. Kennedy—I am in favor of a large tile sewer.

C. E. Williamson—A sewer for the business portion certainly would be a good thing, if run along each alley.

Jesse Coller—A large tile sewer would be a good thing.

Frank Wallinger—A sewer to be built by general taxation is a good thing, because if it does good to one man it will do good to all.

Clarence Milburn Keyser.

Clarence Milburn, elder son of Milburn and Mae Keyser, was born August 19, 1895, and died January 20, 1903. For five weeks he was intensely ill with pneumonia and severe complications that made his recovery almost hopeless from the first.

Little Clarence was an unusually bright lovable child, keen and alert to all about him. He was a member of the primary class of the Presbyterian Sunday-school and a delight to his teacher. He was laid away amid a profusion of flowers, the tokens from loving friends.

O, not in cruelty, not in wrath,
The Reaper came that day.
'Twas an angel visited the green earth
And took the flower away.

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to thank most sincerely our many friends and neighbors, who by their acts of kindness and expressions of sympathy, have helped us during the long illness and since the death of our little son.

Rescued from Suffering and Death by

PAINE'S Celery Compound

THE GREAT MEDICINE.

MR. ALFRED BROWN,

A Prominent and Popular Citizen, Says:

"After the Use of Paine's Celery Compound, I Am Now in the Best of Health."

The greatest of modern physicians, Prof. Edward E. Phelps, M. D., LL. D., after years of long practice and close scientific study, gave to suffering and diseased men and women his marvelous, life giving prescription, with the conviction and positive knowledge that it had peculiar virtues and ample powers to cure.

Thousands of the strongest testimonials from the best known and most reliable men and women of our country fully sustain the claims made by Dr. Phelps regarding his incomparable Paine's Celery Compound.

One of the most convincing proofs furnished, comes recently from a gentleman widely known in the capital city of the Dominion of Canada. We refer to Mr. Alfred Brown, 91 O'Connor St., Ottawa, Ont. Mr. Brown's letter fully demonstrates the fact that the greatest sufferer may cast off his or her burden of disease and become well, strong, and happy. It proves, too, that the great medicine maintains more fully than ever before its unrivaled place in the estimation of people of wealth and social standing as well as with the masses. Mr. Brown says:—

"I acknowledge with thankfulness and pleasure the fact that I have been cured of a very painful illness of eight years' standing by use of Paine's Celery Compound. I had, during the years of my illness, tried almost all the advertised medicines without deriving any good results. I was also treated by several of the best doctors of this city, hoping to find that one of them, at least, would understand my case.

"I was getting worse, and was told I was incurable. I was indeed in a critical condition. I could not go from the house alone, as I was liable to sudden collapse. I tried hospital treatment, but no relief or good results came to me. I could not sleep; anything that I ate increased my agonies; I was extremely weak, restless, tired, and despondent; was obliged to walk about with my hands pressed firmly into my left side to ease my pains; my feet and hands were cold continually; had inclination to vomit, had profuse, cold sweats, quick breathing, and would be racked with pain for hours at a time.

"After the regular use of Paine's Celery Compound for a time, I am now in the best of health, have good appetite, and can use any kind of food. Thank God I am my old self once more, all through the use of Paine's Celery Compound."

A WAY OPEN.

Many a Tecumseh Reader Knows It Well.

There is a way open to convince the greatest skeptic. Scores of Tecumseh people have made it possible. The public statement of their experience is proof the like of which has never been produced before in Tecumseh. Read this case of it given by a citizen:

Vet. O. Austin, who lives with his son in the northeast section of Tecumseh, says: "I am more than thankful that Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to my notice for they did me a great deal of good, in fact they stopped a dull aching pain in my back which had annoyed me for years, and also rendered the action of the kidney secretions normal which at times were too frequent and highly colored. I tried a number of so called kidney cures but I did not receive any benefit, before I learned about Doan's Kidney Pills and I knew people who had used them so I went to C. A. Wright's drug store and got them. To say I entertain a very favorable opinion of them as a kidney medicine is putting it in mild terms. They are all and more than they are represented to be."

For sale by all dealers: Price 50 cents per box, Foster-Milburn company, Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

Steel Hal 2:16½, a beautiful horse weighing about 1300 lbs. with chest and muscles of a horse weighing 2000 lbs. His owner, Chas. Maynard, of the bank of Britton, Britton, Mich., having no time to canvas for patronage, and Steel Hal being a strange horse, it was thought advisable to accept the offer of Tuscola county people who want to lease him for the season of 1903 but the owner has been persuaded to promise that if the people of Lenawee county want him to remain here by sending their name and address on or before Feb. 25, 1903, manifesting their desire to book one or more mares. If enough names can be booked (fees $25.00 to insure) thereby insuring a paying season, he will not send him away. Should he stay here he will go to Holloway, Adrian, Tecumseh, Clinton and Macon. REMARKABLE CURE OF CROUP

A Little Boy's Life Saved.

I have a few words to say regarding Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It saved my little boy's life and I feel that I cannot praise it enough. I bought a bottle of it from A. E. Steere, of Goodwin, S. D., and when I got home with it the the poor baby could hardly breathe. I gave the medicine as directed every ten minutes until he "threw up" and then I thought sure he was going to choke to death. We had to pull the phlegm out of his mouth in great long strings. I am positive that if I had not got that bottle of cough medicine, my boy would not be on earth today.—Joel Demont, Inwood, Iowa. DOCTOR IN PRISON

Charlotte Physician Is Charged With Murder.

WOMAN PATIENT IS DEAD

She Made a Sworn Statement on Her Deathbed—Grand Jury to Investigate Alleged Attack Made by Men on Two St. Joseph Girls.

Charlotte, Mich., Feb. 2.—Dr. W. E. Newark, a well-known physician and proprietor of the Charlotte sanitarium, was arrested at 1 o'clock Sunday by Sheriff Holliday, charged with murder. It is alleged that he is responsible for the death of Mrs. Harriet Wirts of Marshall, who died at the boarding house of George Bush about 4 o'clock in the morning.

Up to Saturday Dr. Newark had been the attending physician, and it is alleged that certain operations performed by him caused Mrs. Wirts's death.

The patient did not improve under Dr. Newark's care and Saturday morning her husband became alarmed about her condition and called Dr. Leroy F. Weaver into the case. Dr. Weaver at once realized the seriousness of the situation and refused to take the case unless he was fully protected, and in order to protect Dr. Weaver the patient made a sworn statement before Justice Guy W. Rowley concerning the details of her case from the time Dr. Newark took charge of it. The condition of Mrs. Wirts had already become alarming and the patient gradually grew weaker until her death Sunday morning. The officers were aware that Mrs. Wirts had made the statement referred to, and soon after her death Sheriff Holliday asked for a warrant for murder on the strength of the sworn affidavit. The prosecuting attorney is in possession of the statement, and while he refuses to divulge its contents he admits that it contains damaging statements against Newark.

Justice Rowley summoned a coroner's jury. After viewing the remains an adjournment was taken until 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Niles, Mich., Feb. 2.—Judge O. W. Coolidge of this city will issue a call for a grand jury, in open court, at St. Joseph this afternoon to investigate the attack alleged to have been made by the two packing house drummers, O'Rourke and Watkins, on the two Loescher girls. The judge is preparing an unofficial document in the shape of a letter to Captain Lloyd Clark, the [illegible] movement, which took place last week Sunday.

When asked if the grand jury would be called for the exclusive purpose of prosecuting O'Rourke and Watkins, Judge Coolidge replied that lawlessness in all parts of the county would receive attention. It is expected that the grand jury will bring to light the [illegible] of the Niles City municipal scandal over which the people of Niles have been up in arms for months, and incidentally involve prominent personages.

The police are on the trail of the Italian.

A DAY OF EULOGY

United States Senate Honors Memory of James McMillan.

EIGHTEEN SENATORS SPOKE

Senator Burrows Delivered Opening Eulogy—Senator Alger Made His Initial Speech in Appropriate Remarks Relative to Dead Senator.

Washington, Jan. 31.—Today's session of the senate was occupied almost wholly by eighteen senators delivering eulogies on the late Senator James McMillan. Senator Hanna was sick and Senator Spooner was home in Wisconsin, although both had expected to speak, but aside from them more senators of national prominence paid tribute to the dead Michigan senator than have spoken at eulogy exercises on any senator who has died in recent years.

Senator Burrows delivered the opening eulogy, and was followed in order by Senators Allison, Cockrell, Morgan, Platt of Connecticut, Hale, Foster of Louisiana, Aldrich, Cullom, Warren, Gallinger, Lodge, Perkins, Tillman, Bacon, Fairbanks and Senator Alger closed. It was Alger's first speech. When he concluded he moved an adjournment out of respect to his dead predecessor, whose old desk was draped and decked with a sheaf of white roses.

Senator Alger of Detroit spoke in part as follows of the life and character of his predecessor:

"Mr. President: When the last leaf is turned and the Book of Life falls idly to the ground, we pause and think.

"The crowding incidents of conflict and treaty, of loyalty and indifference, blend together, with the happier memories dominant.

"It would be impossible for me here to give a history of the life of James McMillan. With its main features the whole country is familiar, and it is not its details which concern us so much as its significance.

"His charity is shown by hospitals, and his quiet giving the good and needy will always hold in grateful remembrance.

"I could tell you of an acquaintance of more than a third of a century with this man, who was ever courteous, generous and modest, whose courage was unyielding, and whose character was made strong by an unflinching determination. But I could tell you nothing half so eloquent as the single-hearted devotion of those and to those who lived in closest communion with him.

"Memory will inscribe upon her tablets his undeviating loyalty and love to those he held most dear, let that be James McMillan's monument."

His colleague, Senator Burrows, made extended remarks regarding the late senator. Among other things he said:

"Mr. President: The life of Senator McMillan fell somewhat short of the allotted span. He died at the age of 64. If it be true, however, that the value of a human life is determined not by years but by deeds, then the sixty-four years of his life were all that could be desired and filled to the full the measure of human ambition. They were ample to develop and round out the dominating traits of his character, and leave their enduring impress upon the private and public affairs in which he bore so conspicuous a part. More than this, they were sufficient for the maturity of those manly virtues which so endeared him to his associates and make the memory of his life a priceless heritage to his family and friends."

Fierce Fight With Ladrones.

Manila, Jan. 31.—Eight ladrones and one constable were killed in an encounter at Ormoc, West Leyte province, on Tuesday. The fight was a hard one, but the constabulary ultimately won by a daring charge. One hundred and fifty ladrones surrendered at Ormoc the following day. The district had been orderly, and it is believed that the surrender of these men will lead to its pacification. The bodies of the three American volunteers, including Mr. Osborne, a teacher, who was killed at Bolinao, province of Zambales, recently, in a fight with ladrones, have been recovered.

Sword For Admiral Taylor.

Washington, Jan. 31.—Rear Admiral Henry C. Taylor, chief of the bureau of navigation, who commanded the battleship Indiana during the war with Spain, has received a letter from Governor Durbin of Indiana, asking him to be present at the capitol on Monday, Feb. 23 next, "to formally accept a modest offering to be tendered you by the state by the chosen representatives of the people." The testimonial referred to is a magnificently ornamented service sword.

French Battleships Collide.

Paris, Jan. 31.—The minister of marine has received information that the French battleships Gaulois and Bouvet collided during manœuvers by the Mediterranean squadron, which sailed from Toulon Thursday morning. A preliminary examination of the two warships shows that the Gaulois had one of her forward plates loosened and has sustained other slight injuries, while the damages to the Bouvet are insignificant.

Negro Joked on the Scaffold.

Washington, Jan. 31.—John St. Clair, alias Sinclair, a negro, was hanged at the district jail Friday for the murder of his sweetheart, Daisy Maddox, eight months ago. St. Clair had a wooden leg, which he jokingly said would be sure to "break my neck." On account of this handicap a platform was built from his cell to the scaffold, obviating the necessity of his climbing steps.

State Medical Board Want to Raise the Standard.

BILL INTRODUCED IN HOUSE

Reciprocity Treaties With Other States Also Desired—Senate and House Adjourn For the Big Junket—Convene Again Feb. 10.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 31.—The house and senate convened at 9 o'clock Friday morning with about forty members absent in both houses. Several legislators have their wives here for the big upper peninsula junket, and the members are in a hurry to get away for the trip north, which begins Saturday night. About seventy-five will go on the big junket and thirty on the fish junket. Both houses adjourned before noon, the recess lasting until Tuesday, Feb. 10, at 2 p. m.

With a few words of explanation from Representative Denby and without a vote being recorded against it, the senate bill to relieve County Treasurer Buhrer of Wayne from all responsibility for the loss of state funds by the failure of the City Savings bank, went through the house Friday morning. It now awaits the governor's signature.

Senator Moriarty of Crystal Falls got a bill through the senate Thursday authorizing five upper peninsula counties—Dickinson, Alger, Marquette, Baraga and Iron—to raise funds for the construction of county hospitals for contagious diseases and for the employment of physicians to act as special officers of public health. Representatives from three of the counties objected, as they were not in need of any such legislation, and the bill, amended by striking out the names of the first three counties, went through. Smallpox is prevalent in Baraga at present.

Representative Bolton offered a bill giving the state board of control of swamp lands power to dispose of the remainder of the 5,000 acres set apart in the upper part of the lower peninsula as it sees fit.

Representative Dennis asked for $14,430 for general improvements to Marquette prison.

Representative Ferry has a bill which he will submit to Judge Durfee for approval, by which he proposes to abolish all split tickets in elections, leaving only the straight and mixed ballots.

Most of the junketing senators and representatives have started for Detroit. The fish commission leaves there today over the Pere Marquette, the upper peninsula crowd starting by Michigan Central Sunday night at 8:30.

The state board of registration [illegible] going to see that the medical men of this state are up to the standard, and wants to prevent practitioners from other states and countries who are not from getting into Michigan. That is the avowed object of a bill introduced in the house by Dr. Nottingham of Lansing Friday morning to amend the medical licensing and registration act.

"We want to raise the standard of our state examinations and we want to give the board sufficient power to regulate the profession of the state satisfactorily," says Dr. Nottingham. "The main object of the bill is to give the board the power to enact reciprocity treaties with other states, so that Michigan men, for instance, who have passed their own state examination can practice in Minnesota, Ohio or any other state without taking the examination of that state, and vice versa. We also ask power for the board to administer to the province of Ontario the same treatment that is given our graduates over there."

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 31.—Judge Kinne, of the circuit court granted a decree of divorce in the case of George Reichert vs. Catherine C. Reichert and that the husband pay the wife $2,000. Both belong to well-known German pioneer families of Scio.

Smith Recommends Them.

Washington, Jan. 31.—Henry C. Smith Friday filed with the postoffice department with his indorsement, the application of Sidney B. Lawrence to succeed Postmaster Stewarwald at Hudson, and Captain Bidwell to succeed Postmaster Wightman at Tecumseh.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 31.—For several days there have been sensational stories circulated concerning the lack of stability of both the City National and Lansing State Savings banks, with the result that a slight run was commenced Thursday and was continued yesterday.

TROOPS TO SCENE

Riotous Disturbances Continue at Waterbury, Conn.

MOBS ATTACK NON-UNIONISTS

Street Car Strikers Causing Much Trouble—Twenty Non-Union Men Have Been Injured—Police Had Trouble Sunday.

Waterbury, Conn., Feb. 2.—Fourteen companies of the First and Second regiments, C. N. G., reached this city last evening, and together with the two local companies, A. and G., are under command of Brigadier-General Russell Frost of South Norwalk.

All the visiting companies, which average fifty men each, and the local companies total 800, arrived in the city between 8:40 and 10:15 on trains from New Haven and Hartford and marched to the armory under police escort, amid the hooting and hissing of the crowds that quickly gathered.

Violence continued Sunday, though no serious damage was done. One of the injured non-union motormen, who is in a serious condition, was ordered to be removed to the hospital. Three non-union men were on their way to the hospital for a stretcher when a mob of several hundred men and boys assailed them with rocks. The men ran and found refuge in the hospital. The mob surrounded the building and became so threatening that the superintendent telephoned to the police for protection.

Three officers were sent up and they succeeded in dispersing the mob, but when asked to escort the men back to the car barns, it is said they refused. Last evening a squad of officers escorted them to the car barn. About twenty non-union men have been injured in the riots.

NAVY YARDS HURRYING UP.

Repairs and Shipbuilding Being Pushed to the Limit.

Springfield, Mass., Feb. 2.—Orders have been received at the United States armory here to rush the shipment of 100,000 Krag rifles to arsenals over the country. The original cause of the order was the passage of the militia bill, but the rush feature of the order has apparently a special cause.

Washington, Feb. 2.—The coming of Baron von Sternburg, the new German special envoy, whose mission is said to be that of bringing about more friendly relations between the two nations and of smoothing over the Venezuelan tangle, has given rise to more or less talk. It is all of a speculative nature, there being no disposition to draw conclusions and the only significant fact is that rush orders have been sent to all the navy yards to finish repair work on all ships. This means that work will be pushed to the limit and three shifts of workmen will be employed.

Ex-Michigan Man Disappears.

Newark, N. J., Feb. 2.—Edwin J. McAllister, manager of the sign and decorative department of the Electric Motor and Equipment company, has disappeared, and detectives are scouring the country for him. McAllister left on Jan. 4, ostensibly on a business trip, and nothing since has been heard of him. His wife and their little children have gone to her former home at Battle Creek, Mich. McAllister is charged with forgery by the United States Mortgage & Trust Co. of New York, with whom he deposited a government check for $27,000, payable to the electric company, which had been received for work done in fitting up the cruisers Baltimore and Boston with electric devices.

A Dastardly Trick.

Pittsburg, Feb. 2.—Three newsboys, Fred White, 14; Fred Reck, 12, and Harry Hess, 12, were so badly scalded shortly after midnight that White and Reck will die. They were sleeping in an areaway belonging to the First National bank, when some unknown person threw two buckets of scalding water upon them. Hess is the only one who can talk, but he is unable to give the name of the person who threw the water.

Crew of Torpedo Boat Drowned.

Corfu, Island of Corfu, Feb. 2.—The British cruiser Pioneer ran into a torpedo boat destroyer in the channel of Corfu Saturday and fifteen persons were drowned. Two bodies were picked up. The torpedo boat destroyer run down by the Pioneer was the Orwell. She was cut through at the conning tower during night naval operations and her forepart sank in deep water, taking down fifteen men.

Forced the Blockade.

Porto Cabello, Venezuela, Feb. 2.—Two Americans, James Cooper and Grovie Allen, have arrived here in a sloop after having forced the blockade. Cooper is an ex-confederate major of cavalry and Allen is a military engineer. They have come to serve with Venezuela against the allies in the event of hostilities. They left here for Caracas.

Found 500 Stolen Letters.

Toledo, O., Feb. 2.—Over 500 letters were found buried in a lumber yard here. Every envelope had been slit, but money orders and checks to the value of several hundred dollars, which could not be disposed of without danger of detection, were left undisturbed. The envelopes were rifled of jewelry, cash and New Year's gifts.

Congressmen Eulogized McMillan.

Washington, Feb. 2.—Eulogies on the late Senator James McMillan were delivered in the house Sunday by Representatives Corliss, Henry C. Smith, Gardner, Hamilton, Samuel W. Smith, William Alden Smith, Derragh, Aplin and Shelden of Michigan; also by Representatives Babcock of Wisconsin and Burton of Cleveland, O.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

CHAPTER VII.

A DUEL.

NESLEROV recoiled, and the writhing of his face in pain and fury, together with the long red cut made by the whip, gave him the expression of a demon.

"You! You!" he gasped.

"Yes, I!" said Denton. "Fortunately, I arrived in time to foil this dastardly attempt of yours to take advantage of a defenseless girl. I have been riding along the railway from stream to stream examining the bridges. I reached this place on my horse a moment ago. A boy saw me coming and hurried to tell me what was going on. I had no idea I should find a friend in need of help. But, thank God, I was in time."

"You will never leave this place alive!" said Neslerov.

He plucked a revolver from his pocket and aimed at Denton.

A woman standing near held out her hands and caught the form of Frances and bore it into her house. Denton, with flashing eyes, leaped forward and closed with Neslerov.

"It is a battle to the death between giants!" cried a man in the crowd.

The pistol fell from the grasp of Neslerov, and the whip before wielded by Denton dropped to the ground.

The iron fingers of Denton would close on the throat of Neslerov, and it seemed as though the struggle would end that moment, but Neslerov would wrench himself free and leap at his enemy with a curse and growl.

"It is you or I! One of us must die!" cried Neslerov.

A swinging, crashing blow from the American's right hand sent the governor to the ground, where he lay as if stunned.

"Take care of him, somebody," said Denton in Russian. "I don't want to kill him."

He turned without a look at the fallen man and started toward the hut into which Frances had been carried.

"Look out!" cried a woman.

At the cry, which was echoed in the crowd, Denton turned suddenly. The dastardly Neslerov had feigned. He had risen to his feet and was creeping upon his enemy with a dagger drawn.

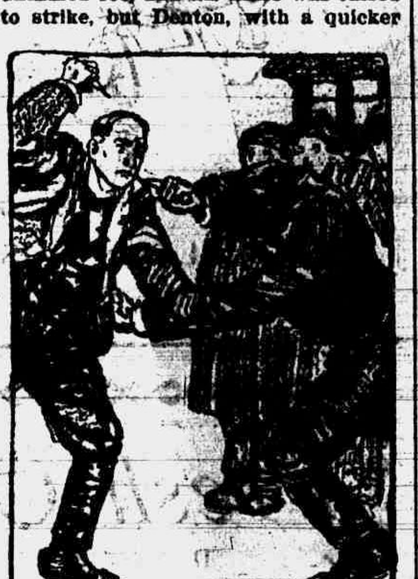
"Oh, you are an assassin, eh?" said Denton as he drew his revolver. "Let me see if we can't settle you once for all."

While it might be that not one of the villagers sympathized with Neslerov, yet his act was not a crime to them. With their sordid understanding of women having no rights, no freedom, no liberties save what their lords and masters gave them, the men of this place looked upon the eagerness of Neslerov to be married to so beautiful a girl as natural.

One of them, realizing that the governor's safety was necessary to their own, sprang upon Denton and drove a knife through the fleshy part of his arm.

The pistol fell to the earth near that of Neslerov and two villagers picked them up and hid them.

Like a flash Neslerov was upon his unarmed foe, and his knife was raised to strike, but Denton, with a quicker movement, drew a knife from his belt. He had ridden too often over the tundra to go unprepared for enemies, human and otherwise.



And now began a duel.

And now began a duel the like of which the banks of the Irtish or its branches will probably never see again.

Steel flashed on steel.

The blood from the wound in Denton's arm was flung over the face and clothing of Neslerov, while that from the bruises on the governor's face grew thick and dark, making him truly hideous.

With a grasp as of iron Denton seized the hand of Neslerov that held the dagger, but with a wrench the governor got it away and cut to the bone half the length of Denton's finger.

But the American scarcely felt the wound. He was not fighting now for life, nor for vengeance. He was fighting for that girl who lay in the hut. He knew that if Neslerov killed him and was not killed himself, her life would be made such a hell in the power of this monster of brutality that death would be preferable.

A year ago she had told him she did not and never could love him. It had been a quarrel. She didn't want to get married, and he asked her if his rough exterior, the result of years of hard work in rude and dangerous places, was disagreeable to her. He said there were fine gentlemen at Paris, New York, London and St. Petersburg. She had answered that she knew it. She preferred their company to boors. They parted then and had not met till now.

Denton and Neslerov kept fighting on, the villagers too much aghast to step between or utter a word.

Neslerov felt his right arm getting weaker. Denton's knife had slashed through the sleeve of his coat and found the bone near the elbow. An artery must have been cut, for the blood was thrown from the end of the sleeve. Made desperate, he gathered all his strength for a final effort and sprang bodily upon his foe.

Denton, seeing an opportunity and knowing that nothing but a deathblow seemed likely to end the fight, met the plunge and drove his knife into Neslerov's side.

With another curse, a spluttering of blood and a groan the governor of Tomsk sank to the ground at the foot of his adversary unconscious.

"Take care of him, you fellows; no need to let him die," said Denton, examining the wound. "His lung is not touched. Nothing fatal here, I am glad to say. Here, you!"

The old priest came mumbling toward him.

"You know more about surgery than the rest. Get some water, bathe these wounds, take a few stitches in the long cuts and bandage him up."

"Yes, little father," said the priest, trembling. "But what of you?"

"I can take care of myself."

He strode to the bank of the stream, over which he had but a few months before built a bridge, and bathed his wounds. Then he went into the hut to see Frances, as if nothing had happened.

CHAPTER VIII.

THE INTERVIEW IN THE HUT.

FRANCES lay on a rude bed, scarcely conscious, and Denton stood a moment looking down solemnly upon the lovely upturned face. He bent over her, touched her brow and felt her pulse. All sense of his own injuries seemed to leave him as he saw her need of immediate care.

Frances felt his touch and looked up at him with about the same expression she might have worn had he been a stern and high priced specialist called in to make an examination.

"You are merely knocked out by the shock," he said, with assumed indifference. "You will probably be all right as soon as we get to Tomsk."

"Yes, if I could get there," she whispered. "My father will be anxious."

"We must relieve his anxiety as soon as possible. You must not worry."

"What will you do? And Neslerov?"

"Never mind Neslerov now. Keep cool. You've got to be braced up a little. I wish I had some wine."

"There was some in the car," she answered. "Neslerov had it. He tried to make me drink, but I would not."

Denton went to the car, still on the main track, and brought from it the remains of the bottle of wine Neslerov had opened. This he took with him to the hut and offered some to Frances.

"I don't want it. I refused it before," she said.

"Oh, don't you want it?" he asked ironically. "I suppose in your keen and subtle mind there is no distinction between a glass of wine offered by Neslerov when you were his prisoner and by me when you are ill."

"I did not mean that," she said meekly. She reached out her hand, took the cup and drained it.

"Now, then," said Denton, coolly seating himself on a stool near her bed, "tell me this whole miserable business from the beginning."

"I haven't thanked you yet, Jack," she said, with a return of color.

"Never mind thanking me. I did merely what any other American would have done, and, seeing you in danger, it would not have been manly, indeed, to stand off. I accept your thanks, but let's get to the business. How did you happen to be here—with Neslerov?"

"We were in Moscow," she said. "There was a meeting about the new railway."

"Yes, I know. That was what took Neslerov there."

"He had an interview with papa while in Moscow—he"—

"Why do you hesitate? It is not a new experience to have a man want to marry you, is it? You gave him the usual answer, I suppose."

"Oh, Jack! There was but one answer papa could give him. I do not like the prince, and papa knows I will never marry a man I do not love."

"Everybody knows that—who knows you," said Denton soberly.

"He told him about you—and about Vladimir—and the prince got angry."

"About Vladimir! Who is he?"

"Vladimir Paulpoff, an ironworker, now sent"—

"Never mind, we will get to that afterward. You started for the Obi, where Gordon is to take a house in Vashlov."

"No, not yet. I must tell you about Vladimir—poor fellow! I met him in the forge—in his shop—one day while the railway was being put through Perm. Papa and I went there. He is a marvelous man, Jack. You would think as much of him as I do if you knew him. He is so handsome and strong. He is"—

"Do you mean young Paulpoff, the blacksmith of Perm?"

"Yes, Jack. Do you know him?"

"I've had him turn out some iron for small bridges. Well?"

"He is so intelligent, and was so anxious to learn, to improve, I helped him. I used to send him books, papers, magazines, scientific works—anything I could get hold of that would help him. He studied hard, poor fellow! He grew to—I think he loved me—he"—

"Of course you returned his affection. You've done it so—I mean—it came quite easy."

Tears glistened in her eyes, and she turned away her head. She had quarreled with this man and had said she would never marry him, and their friendship had been almost cut asunder. But he had saved her from Neslerov. Now he was chiding her.

"One could not know Vladimir without admiring him," she said suddenly, with a great accession of spirit. "I fail to see why I should be put through this catechism by you."

"You needn't be if you don't want to," he answered coldly. "This is a nice, quiet village. Neslerov is lying not far away, somewhat cut up now, but he will get over that. If I could go on my way and leave you if my questions are distasteful. The thing is that there must be an explanation to this affair, and I'd like to know what it is to be. It is no trifling matter to cut the governor of a Russian province to pieces."

"Have you been fighting?" she asked quickly.

"No," he replied, with a tinge of sarcasm. "Neslerov and I indulged in a few pleasantries. He doesn't feel as gay over them as I do, that's all."

"Oh, I see your hand is bandaged—I never noticed it. Oh, Jack, forgive me!"

"We were following a course of inquiry," he said, putting the bandaged hand behind him. "This Vladimir—you met—there was an attachment—so far, so good. Now, how did that lead to this affair?"

"I wanted to see Vladimir and went by train from Moscow to Perm. I found a drosky at the station and was driven to the shops. Shops, house—all were deserted. I found Neslerov there with a painting under his arm. He was taking it away. It was a beautiful picture, a beautiful face. I asked the prince where Vladimir was. He said that all the Paulpoffs—father, mother and Vladimir—had been sent to Siberia."

"Sent to Siberia! That big simple hearted fellow! For what?"

"Conspiring with others to kill the czar. We were alone; the drosky driver went out, and Neslerov tried to kiss me. I fought him; I shot him."

"You shot Neslerov?"

"Yes, I shot him. I would again. I then returned to Moscow, but did not tell my father anything about the matter, save that Vladimir was sent to Siberia. We soon after started for the Obi and stopped at Perm. We saw the governor, and he promised that if he discovered that Vladimir was innocent he would help him."

"He might as well have said that if he discovered the moon was cheese he'd give it to you for lunch. Things like that are rarely corrected in Russia."

"When we left Perm, Neslerov was on the train. Of course, as papa did not know anything about the shooting in the house of the Paulpoffs he greeted Neslerov as a friend. Everything went well till we had crossed the border and come into Neslerov's own province. At this place—I had been sleeping—I woke up. The car had become detached from the train. I was alone with Neslerov. He took my revolver from me and dragged me here and ordered the priest to marry us. Then you came."

"Yes, I think I came just in time," said Denton.

Then a stern look came again upon his face.

"Frances," he said, "I do not know, of course, how this matter will end. If Neslerov wishes, he can destroy me. If he finds it advisable to keep silent, then I may find a way to assist this Vladimir. I think we shall soon be on the way to the Obi."

With these words he left the hut and was met at the door by an angry, threatening mob of villagers.

"There he is!" growled an old man, evidently the leader. "He tried to kill his excellency. Kill him!"

"Kill him!" said another. "It is the governor's command. He put the iron road, the bridge, the devil wagons, through our country. The czar does not wish it, and we must avenge the wrong. Kill him!"

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Much In a Name.

An Englishman who has just returned from an extensive tour through the east tells a good story in which he was one of the principals.

He was one of a party at a banquet tendered to the maharajah of Patiala, at which nearly a hundred guests, representing nearly every branch of Indian life, were present. As a special guest he was seated on the left of the Indian potentate.

During the meal he noticed that the latter partook of some fine Cumberland ham, and, knowing that it was contrary to the Indian caste rules to eat any portion of a pig, he without a thought asked his highness how it was he was eating ham.

The maharajah looked at his plate, then, turning round to his body servant standing at the back of his chair, said: "What am I eating?"

The servant instantly replied:

"Mutton, sahib." And without referring to the incident again the maharajah continued his meal.

After the banquet the Englishman related the incident to an Indian judge, and the latter said:

"If that servant had said 'ham,' he would have been headless before tomorrow morning. It is advisable not to notice caste rules when you are with natives of rank."—Pearson's.

A Royal Talisman.

For 400 years the Hohenzollern family has possessed a peculiar talisman in the shape of a black stone set in a ring, each head of the house having passed the charm on to the next in succession for many generations. Frederick the Great is said to have found the ring sealed in a package with instructions as to its preservation and transmission written by Frederick I.

Precisely what value or significance attaches to this carefully treasured bit of jewelry it would be difficult to say. Tradition says that a huge toad hopped into the royal presence centuries ago with the stone held in its mouth. As to whether the golden setting in which the stone is now preserved is due to the forethought of the intelligent toad or to the afterthought of the Hohenzollerns tradition fails to enlighten us.

Job For Detroit Man.

Washington, Jan. 29.—Colonel Frank J. Hecker of Detroit can be one of the commissioners to have charge of the construction of the isthmian canal if he wants it. He is in Washington at present. He is going to have a talk with the president as soon as the latter returns from Canton, although it can be stated on the very best authority that Roosevelt is willing to appoint him.

Unconscious From Gas.

Saginaw, Mich., Jan. 29.—George Becker and Clarence Armstrong, two young men of this city, narrowly escaped death Wednesday by asphyxiation. They were found shortly after 7 o'clock in their room on South Jefferson street, unconscious and apparently dead. Doctors finally revived them. A gas jet had accidentally been turned on.

An Odd Nugget of Gold.

There have been many large and oddly shaped gold nuggets found in the United States and elsewhere, but the oddest of them all was that discovered at the Midhas mine, on Sulky gully, near Melbourne, Australia, in 1887. The nugget was flat and almost the exact counterpart in contour of a colossal human hand held open, with the exception of the thumb and forefinger, which were closed together in a manner so as to make it appear that the thumb was holding the finger in place. Its greatest length was 12¼ inches and its greatest breadth 8 inches.

It was of the very purest gold, with but a little of foreign substances adhering, mostly between the "fingers," and weighed 617 ounces. It was found in the northwest main drive of the Midhas mine, 120 feet below the surface of the earth and at a spot only fifty feet from where the famous Lady Brassey nugget was discovered the year before. It weighed fifty-one pounds of pure gold.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, Feb. 2, 1903.

Political attention in Washington during the past week has been centered on the statehood fight in the senate in which Senator Quay has scored several points in the way of legislative jockeying and gained an advantage which now seems to presage an extra session of congress. By one of those subtle moves for which the Pennsylvania senator is famous, he secured the introduction and reference to his own committee of the statehood bill as an amendment to the agricultural and sundry civil appropriation bills. On Saturday he secured the adoption of the measure by the committee as an amendment to the agricultural bill and in that form will be able to secure a vote in the senate, unless the appropriation bill is permitted to fail, which failure would mean an extra session.

Senator Quay said yesterday that as the circumstances were most unusual he considered that he was warranted in resorting to unusual methods. "Personal notice has been served on every senator favorable to statehood," said Mr. Quay, "that the statehood bill would be talked to death. One New England senator told me that he would drop in his tracks debating the measure before he would permit it to become a law. Under these circumstances I consider that I need no excuse for resorting to drastic measures to secure the enactment of the will of the majority of the senate."

Senator Hanna, when seen by your correspondent said, "Wait and see. I am making no predictions except that the statehood bill will not become a law during the 57th congress." Another prominent senator who is opposed to the measure said, "I consider that to permit the statehood bill to become a law as an amendment to an appropriation bill, to which it is in no way germane, would be to establish a most pernicious precedent and if the opponents of the measure find it necessary to cause the failure of the appropriation bills to which it is attached and thus precipitate an extra session of congress, they will not hesitate to do so. It would certainly be their duty." It is the hope, however, of the opposition, to wean away a sufficient number of the democrats who are supporting Mr. Quay to defeat his program.

The house during the past week has devoted itself assiduously to the passage of regular appropriation bills and has sent to the senate the agricultural and Indian bills. Today it will take up the sundry civil bill and will probably spend a large portion of the week in its consideration. Later in the week it will pass the Littlefield anti-trust bill.

The senate committee on foreign relations has ordered the Alaskan and the Colombian isthmian canal treaties favorably reported. Senator Morgan has determined to do all in his power to defeat the latter but as he stands alone in his opposition it is not believed he will be successful. Senator Morgan today told your correspondent that he was certain the Colombian government was not legally authorized and that the credentials of Dr. Herran, the Colombian charge d'affaires, were not worth the paper on which they were written. Senator Cullom, to whom Mr. Morgan's argument was referred, said, "It is not the business of the United States to go into the legality of the governments with which it has occasion to treat. If it did that it would be compelled to spend most of its time investigating the government of the South American countries with which it has relations. It has always been held, in international law, that the action of a de facto government was valid and that is all that concerns this country in the present instance."

The United States has this week been invited by Mexico and China to participate in what, on the surface, appears to be a most important negotiation looking to an international agreement to establish a silver standard on a basis of 32 to 1. The proposals of China and Mexico come in the form of diplomatic notes which the president has forwarded to congress with the recommendation that he be authorized to appoint three commissioners to meet with commissioners of the other nations. The United States is also urged to enlist the sympathy of France and Great Britain, the welfare of whose colonies will interest them in the proposition.

The plan proposed and the ratio suggested is in accordance with the Philippine coinage bill now before the senate and which is expected to pass at this session. This system was recommended for the Philippines by Mr. Conant, the expert employed by the war department to investigate the coinage of the islands, and Secretary Root says of it that it would prevent the further depreciation and fluctuation of silver and prevent the serious losses occasioned the silver using countries thereby."

The president has reluctantly decided that so long as he remains in the White House he will not again attempt any hunting expeditions. He said recently to a friend that there was neither pleasure nor possibility of good luck in a hunting expedition attended by a corps of newspapermen and watched by a score of camera fiends. Mr. Roosevelt is, however, carefully noting the information he is receiving in regard to favorable hunting grounds and says that when he has turned the cares of the nation over to his successor he will have a long, delightful hunt which will leave Ex-President Cleveland's little ducking trips far in the shade.

Washington is enjoying one of the most brilliant social seasons in its history. The White House hospitality is on a large and elaborate scale and senators and members, diplomats and justices as well as the large wealthy, but unofficial contingent in Washington society are outvying each other in the number and extent of their entertainments.

It is regarded as a significant fact that the estimated expenses of the White House for the next fiscal year are placed at $110,264, as against $85,000 last year. It is claimed that the renovated mansion will prove much more expensive to keep up, as a result of polished floors, silver trimmings, etc., and even the laundry expenses are largely increased by the extensive hospitality of the president and Mrs. Roosevelt.

Sick Blood

Feed pale girls on Scott's Emulsion.

We do not need to give all the reasons why Scott's Emulsion restores the strength and flesh and color of good health to those who suffer from sick blood.

The fact that it is the best preparation of Cod Liver Oil, rich in nutrition, full of healthy stimulation is a suggestion as to why it does what it does.

Scott's Emulsion presents Cod Liver Oil at its best, fullest in strength, least in taste.

Young women in their "teens" are permanently cured of the peculiar disease of the blood which shows itself in paleness, weakness and nervousness, by regular treatment with Scott's Emulsion.

It is a true blood food and is naturally adapted to the cure of the blood sickness from which so many young women suffer.

We will be glad to send a sample to any sufferer.

Be sure that this picture in the form of a label is on the wrapper of every bottle of Emulsion you buy.

The Ultimate End of the Watch.

A prominent watch manufacturer is said to be continually deluged with questions as to where all the watches go. This country makes them at the rate of 8,000 a day, and this rate is kept up year in and year out, added to by countless importations.

"I never was able to answer the question," said the manufacturer. "Nobody in the trade ever tries to. We find that the life of a watch is but five years, yet if you will stop fifty men and ask how long they have carried their watches forty-nine of them will say they have only had one watch in their entire lives.

"We cannot explain the disappearance of watches. They do not go into the ash bins. I remember when the New Jersey watch factories closed that in ten years we could not find one of their watches anywhere. They had disappeared off the face of the earth, yet millions had been made. Look at the key watches. Up to some twenty years ago we made nothing else. In that twenty years these millions and millions of key winding watches have disappeared, and the question asked unremittingly, 'What becomes of the watches?' remains unanswered to this day."—Jewelers' Circular-Weekly.

Fine Flour and Teeth.

Why do colored people as a rule have such splendid teeth? Mostly because they have lived on coarse food, which made demands on the teeth. People as a rule now do not want to do any chewing. They demand meat which is so tender that it will melt in the mouth, etc. Nature, prodigal as she is, never bestows anything where it is not used, and the result is that the civilized races are losing their teeth. If the style continues to forbid our teeth to do any grinding, our progeny of, say, 2902 A. D. will be born toothless or with only rudimentary teeth. As individuals we cannot grow good teeth in our heads by eating coarse food. We are beginning to get bad teeth by heredity. But there is almost no tooth or bone forming material in fine white flour, and the avoidance of coarse foods undoubtedly hastens the decaying of our teeth. Perhaps the millers and the dentists are in a secret league to work for mutual interests. Who knows?

Balzac and Black Coffee.

Balzac was addicted to the use of strong black coffee and depended upon it as a nervous stimulant during the hours which he devoted to composition. Its effect he has himself described in these words:

"The coffee falls into your stomach. Immediately everything starts into action. Your ideas begin to move like Grand Army battalions on the battlefield, and the battle opens. Memories arrive at a run, standards flying; the light cavalry of comparisons breaks into a magnificent gallop; the artillery of logic dashes up and unlimbers; thoughts come rushing up as sharpshooters; characters spring up on all sides; the paper becomes covered with ink, for the struggle has begun and ends in torrents of black water like the battle in black powder."

Young Que is Found.—Elmer, the son of S. E. Que, the Gaylord merchant in University hospital, and who mysteriously disappeared from Ann Arbor, has been found in that city. No explanation is given for his action.

Drain Thirteen Miles Long.—J. W. Pearl of Benton Harbor, who has the contract for constructing the Dowagiac river drain, is securing the right of way. The dredges will be started April 1. The drain will be nearly thirteen miles long and about twenty-five feet wide.

Wreckage of the Celtic Found.—Wreckage from the schooner Celtic, lost from the steamer Runnells during a westerly gale on the night of Nov. 29 last, was found on Boom Point, the extreme southeast end of Cockburn island, Lake Superior, by Robert Reid, mail carrier.

Beliefs About the Earth.

Newton, the great Sir Isaac, surmised although he could give no reason for the conclusions he had reached, that in the course of time the earth would become perfectly dry. Others, mostly De Verne, Professor A. L. Hamilton and the younger Lysander, all believed that eventually the earth would be come as dry as the proverbial chip. Even in this day and age the theory has many adherents.

Economy is no disgrace; it is better living on a little than outliving a great deal.

A ludicrous incident which would have been ludicrous, even had it cost the lives it endangered, was recently enacted just within the village border of Caro. Two men were engaged in conveying to the shambles a fat steer. He was mounted after the usual style in such cases—in a death rack on a wagon—and seemed to be viewing his impending fate with stoical indifference, till, entering the corporation, a gang of rude children ran after, cackling and squabbling with each other, and climbing on the wagon, so frightened the steer that he gave a bound and started in to bust the beef combine. A priori, he plunged forward, busting the rack containing his remains, and turning a somersault over the men, landed between the horses, though still anchored by a rope. The team, not relishing the interlopement of the steer, started to run away, but was finally quieted to the tune of "Whoa, Bill! Whoa Bill! What ye tryin' to do, Bill!" and kindred expressions of endearment. With the help of passerby the men got the beef back on the wagon and the procession again took up its solemn march toward the slaughter house.—Detroit Tribune.

Who says thirteen and Friday are unlucky? There were thirteen colonies; there are thirteen bars on our flag; E pluribus unum has thirteen letters; look at a quarter, there are thirteen stars over the eagle, thirteen arrows in his claw; thirteen leaves on the branch on his other claw, and thirteen stars on the other side of the coin. The combination thirteen is repeated thirteen times on our great seal. America was discovered on Friday and the Declaration of Independence was adopted on the same day. Thirteen is unlucky only when you have to put up thirteen cents for a shilling; but who will refuse the baker's dozen of thirteen loaves?—Adrian Times.

Because Theodore T. Grootenhuis, the boy's teacher, chastised his son, Joseph Driscoll, of Wolf Creek, took occasion to visit the district school in Rome township during the session of school to inform the teacher of what he thought of his action in whipping his boy. The language used by Driscoll in expressing himself was too obscene and indecent for the ears of the young pupils, so he was arrested, taken to Adrian and arraigned in the Justice Court. He pleaded not guilty and his trial was set for February 12.—Detroit Free Press.

January 21st, at the Home of her Sister, Mrs. Chas. Bell.

The announcement of the wedding of Mr. Clyde O. Davis, of this city, and Miss Lou E. Walker, of Tecumseh, Mich., which is to occur this evening in Milwaukee, will be a source of genuine surprise to the friends of Mr. Davis in this city, even the most intimate having been kept in ignorance of his intentions to join the ranks of the benedicts. Mr. Davis is traveling representative of the Williamson & Libbey Lumber company through Wisconsin and has a host of friends. His bride is a charming young woman whom he met some two years ago while she was on a visit to her sister, Mrs. C. W. Bell, who resided at the corner of Sterling and Mt. Vernon streets. Mr. and Mrs. Bell have since removed to Milwaukee, 700 Twenty-fourth street, where the marriage will occur this evening. The event will be witnessed by families only of the contracting parties, Rev. L. C. Smith, of Waukesha, formerly of the First Presbyterian church, performing the ceremony. After a wedding tour, Mr. and Mrs. Davis will be at home at 78 Frederick avenue, this city, after February 1. Mr. Davis is a son of Mrs. Clara Davis, this city, and for the past thirteen years has been identified with the Williamson & Libbey lumber interests. CLINTON'S BIG FIRE

A Disastrous Fire Visited Clinton Last Night Destroying

FOUR BUSINESS BLOCKS,

Miss Cullen's and Miss Mettler's Millinery Stores, the Postoffice and the Edrose Hotel.

Fire has at last visited Clinton. It broke out in Miss Cullen's millinery store at 6 o'clock last evening destroying four business buildings and left the people of our northern neighbor well nigh crazed with fright. It looked at one time as if the whole village would be destroyed. A stiff wind was blowing from the west and the fire protection of Clinton consists of a bucket brigade and the good wishes of the prominent citizens.

They telephoned to Tecumseh for help and as far as fighting a fire is concerned without the help of the water works, we are in as bad shape as Clinton. It would take half a day to grease up the Tecumseh fire engine and all the hose they have at the Clinton woolen mills is two inch while the hose at Tecumseh is three inch, so our fire department could not even lend them hose.

Our good neighbors then sent to Adrian for help, securing an engine and hose which were sent to Clinton by special train, going through Tecumseh at 8:00, but arrived in Clinton too late to assist at the fire.

By the prompt work of the old postmaster Clinton citizens were receiving mail as usual after the fire at Little & Pardee's drug store.

Clinton should have adequate fire protection and Tecumseh should either do something with our old fire engine so it could be used or throw it in the river. Our Clinton neighbors were justly annoyed last night that they could get no help from Tecumseh and as long as we have the engine, it should be fixed so it could be used in case of need.

The loss is estimated between $5,000 and $6,000 partially covered by insurance.

MISS HAZEL LUKENS

The Adopted Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Lukens,

DIED FRIDAY AT 10 P. M.

Was Operated on Thursday for Appendicitis.

Miss Hazel Lukens, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Lukens, who was operated on Thursday for appendicitis, passed away Friday evening at 10:40 at her home on Ottawa street.

Last Wednesday Miss Hazel was descending the stairs at the high school and in some way slipped, falling the the whole length of the flight and seriously injuring her internally thus causing appendicitis.

She moved to Tecumseh from Detroit with her parents about five years ago, and was a favorite among her schoolmates here, being loved by all who knew her. The parents have the heartfelt sympathy of the community.

The funeral was held yesterday at 2 o'clock at her late home, Rev. W. F. Jones officiating. The eighth grade attended in a body. The bearers were Messrs. George Adamson, Leon Williamson, Will Lambkin, Stanley Darling, Glenn Tansley and Wade Frost. The honorary bearers were Misses Alma Tansley, Laura Leonard, Lucia Owen, Mable Thompson, of Jackson, Bertha Potter and Hattie Boland.

Wabash Settlement.

Twelve suits brought by Dr. Francis Boccherini, as administrator of the estates of Italians killed in the Wabash wreck at Seneca, Mich., on Thanksgiving eve, 1901, have been ordered discontinued, the Wabash Railroad company paying $750 damages in each case or a total of $9,000. Geo. P. Monaghan was the attorney for the administrator. The damages claimed in these cases aggregated $600,000. The settlement, though, at the amount mentioned, is considered an advantageous one. Under the Michigan law the damages recoverable in each case would not be more than the amount each of the dead men could have earned up to the date of his majority. The average age of those for whose deaths damages were sought in these cases was 18 years and had earned from 40 to 50 cents per day in Italy before coming here. [illegible] working every day, until they attained full age, it was calculated that each would earn about $900, from which must be deducted the cost of living, etc., calculated at $400, and this would leave $500 as the possible damages recoverable. The cost of preparing for trial, contesting the applications for administration at Chicago, taking of testimony in San Francisco and other points in this country and also in Italy, would be heavy and much time would be lost in litigation, as the cases would be carried up on appeal in all probability. All this expense and time have been saved.

There are still about ten claims in the hands of Mr. Monaghan arising out of deaths of Italians in the same wreck, and there is a possibility that they may be settled without suits being entered.—Detroit Free Press.

Aching Joints

In the fingers, toes, arms, and other parts of the body, are joints that are inflamed and swollen by rheumatism—that acid condition of the blood which affects the muscles also.

Sufferers dread to move, especially after sitting or lying long, and their condition is commonly worse in wet weather.

"It has been a long time since we have been without Hood's Sarsaparilla. My father thinks he could not do without it. He has been troubled with rheumatism since he was a boy, and Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine he can take that will enable him to take his place in the field." MISS ADA DOTY, Sidney, Iowa.

The matrimonial market seems to be enjoying a sustantial boom of late. The banner day known was Tuesday of this week, when Clerk Bitz issued seven licenses. This is, so far as records show the largest number ever issued in this county in a single day.—Monroe Democrat.

Last summer Edith Gordon, of Holloway, secured a warrant for the arrest of Robert Ernst, but the young man disappeared. The sheriff lately located him at Cheboygan, and arrived with him Saturday. He was before Justice Treat Monday, and the result was a wedding, instead of a trial.—Adrian Press.

E. W. Freese received word of the death of his uncle, Chas. R. Deming, of Geneseo, Ill., Sunday, at the advanced age of 98 years. Mr. Deming went there in 1858 and took up 1,000 acres of land from the government. He was a highly respected man and one of the oldest if not the oldest Mason in that state.—Clinton Local.

A Trenton young man drifted into the County Clerk's office in Detroit recently with a scrawl of a note. It read: "Wont you please let our daughter Alice marry John. She is only sixteen years old and we hereby give our consent because she won't mind and keeps her pa and me awake till 12 o'clock most every night by sparking so loud."—Wyandotte Republican.

Harry Marion, who works at the wet gig in the finishing room of the woolen mills, met with a painful accident Monday. He slipped on the wet floor near the gig and, reaching out to save himself from falling, caught the second finger of his left hand in the cogs, cutting a deep gash into the bone the whole length of his finger. It was necessary to remove several pieces of the bone.—Clinton Local.

George VanOrsdale, a Hillsdale hotel porter, swallowed a dose of laudanum one day last week. George's intentions were suicidal, but they were dashed by the arrival of a doctor with the pumping apparatus. In addition to the drug, the doctor pumped out a lot of the liquor which had led up to the foolish attempt. VanOrsdale tried it again Wednesday, using morphine, and was successful.—Hudson Post.

The adjusters have finished figuring on the fire which destroyed the Review and Herald printing plant at Battle Creek. Their figures show that the loss was $309,537, making, after deducting the insurance of $200,000, a net loss of $109,537. Although the fire occurred over a month ago, on December 30th, it is still burning, owing to the immense quantity of paper which was stored in the building.—Hudson Gazette.

The Deerfield correspondent to the Detroit Journal says that in the vicinity of Deerfield lives a very prepossessing and ladylike girl 21 years old, who not only owns but manages her own farm. She buys stock and sells it too sometimes making shrewd bargains. She drives her own horses and breaks in colts. In summer time she hires male help but in winter she dons rubber boots and cares for her stock in as able a manner as any man.

A nervous looking man went to a store the other day and sat down for half an hour or so, when a clerk asked if there was anything she could do for him. He said he didn't want anything. She went away, and he sat half an hour longer, when the proprietor went to him and asked if he wanted to be shown anything. "No," said the nervous man, "I just want to sit around. My physician has recommended perfect quiet for me, and says above all things I should avoid being in crowds. Noticing that you did not advertise in the newspaper, I thought that this would be as quiet a place as I could find, so I just dropped in for a few hours of isolation." The merchant picked up a bolt of paper cambric to brain him, but the man went out. He said all he wanted was a quiet life.—Ex.

Tecumseh people endorse them.

Mr. Henry Keyser, retired farmer and capitalist, residence in the southwestern section of Tecumseh, says: "I am thoroughly convinced of the superior merits of this popular remedy, Doan's Kidney Pills. They deserve naught save the highest praise. Before going to C. A. Wright's drug store for a box I had a dull aching pain in my back which had annoyed me for some time and the secretions from the kidneys were unnatural and irregular. To say that I was surprised at the effect is putting it very mildly. In a very short time the trouble disappeared. I never knew a medicine that worked so quickly and satisfactorily."

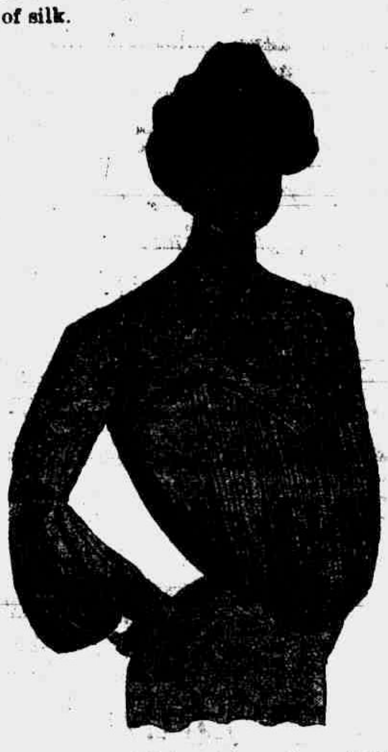
LATEST FASHION NOTES.

An Effective Evening Waist.

Ivory white taffeta is used for this waist with front laid in alternate tuck clusters and stripes of openwork fibre braids, in drop-shoulder style. The fanciful decorations of braid are varied with medallions of chiffon. The back is in tucked effect, and the narrow belt is of silk.



The new shirt-waists are veritable triumphs of the modiste's skill and cunning. Embroidery occupies an important place among the season's decorations, and blouses of white flannel or cashmere are lavishly elaborated in black and white Corticelli silk in a pattern of bow knots and fancy stitches. A tucked yoke that was in pointed outline at the center of the front was the characteristic feature of the shaping of a waist of this order, that was made to accompany a Norfolk suit.

Laugh and Live.

Prince Jerome Napoleon was fond of telling the story of his scheme during the Crimean war by which he kept up the spirits of his men. The French army was losing daily large numbers of men through the ravages of the cholera. Marshal Canrobert sent the order to Prince Jerome that he should move his division to Varna. Jerome issued marching orders and added: "Seek out in every regiment all the actors, comedians, clowns, conjurers and entertainers. I will personally arrange a performance and present prizes to the best entertainer." During the whole of the retreat these performances took place for the edification of the division. Prince Jerome is not famous for any remarkable military triumphs, but this one act must at least be put to his credit, for it was undoubtedly due to this method of cheering up his men that his division could boast a death roll at least three times as small as that of any other. These performances were the forerunner of the now famous Zouave theater in the Crimea.

Lacemaking by Hand.

Making lace by hand is a well developed art in Paraguay. It was taught the natives 200 years ago by the missionaries and has been transmitted from generation to generation till it is now quite general throughout the republic. Some towns are devoted to making a certain kind of lace. In one town of 8,000 or 9,000 inhabitants almost all the women and children and many of the men make lace collarettes, handkerchiefs and ladies' ties. Another town makes lace embroidery and others drawn thread work, such as centerpieces, try mates, teacloths and doilies. The designs used in making the lace are taken from the curious webs of the semitropical spiders that are so numerous there. On this account it is called "nanduti," an Indian name which means spider web.

Brave Men.

Persians in general are not supposed to be the bravest people in the world, but even in Persia the inhabitants of Kashan, a mercantile city, are notorious for their lack of a warlike spirit. Their pusillanimity has passed into a proverb and given rise to many stories. One of the best of these is that when Nadir Shah disbanded his army on its return from India the 30,000 men belonging to Kashan and its sister city of Ispahan applied for an escort of 100 musketeers to see them safely home.

BEST EVER RECORDED.

Is Record of January's Jobbing Business in Cities.

New York, Jan. 31.—Bradstreet's weekly review of trade today says:

Trade developments in January confirm the sanguine expectations and predictions made at the outset of the month. Wholesale and jobbing trade in spring goods, millinery, boots and shoes and hats is improving steadily, January's jobbing business at the leading cities east and west being the best ever recorded in that month. Shipments on orders are larger and earlier than in preceding years. Retail trade reports are hardly so favorable. Unseasonable weather dulls retail distribution in this line, and the usual January clearing sales are attracting less than ordinary attention. Among the industries no sign of flagging activity is noted. Iron and steel production is at its highest point, despite fuel and car shortages, and prices are higher. Activity in lumber is also noted the country over. The general price situation remains strong, corn among the cereals, and cotton among the textiles leading.

The car shortage trouble increases rather than grows better. Smaller than expected movements of grain and lumber to market, of fuel from producing centers to consumers and of general merchandise from wholesalers and jobbers to retailers are reported the country over. Preference is still being given to coal shipments and some railroads are reported refusing all dead freight outside of fuel.

Wheat, including flour, exports for the week ending Jan. 29 aggregate 4,420,065 bu, against 3,538,757 last week, 3,702,368 in this week a year ago and 3,776,000 in 1901. Wheat exports since July 1 aggregate 148,599,622 bu, against 165,346,186 last season and 115,825,646 in 1900.

Corn exports aggregate 2,045,999 bu, against 2,376,683 last week, 427,018 a year ago and 2,487,707 in 1901. For the fiscal year exports are 20,400,700 bu, against 21,861,985 last season and 115,395,254 in 1901.

FORTY-FIVE BILLS

For Private Claims Passed Friday by the House.

Washington, Jan. 31.—Friday was the last private claims day of this congress in the house, and members with bills on the calendar carried everything before them in committee of the whole. Forty-five bills in all were acted on favorably. Many of the claims were old, dating back to the civil war, and a few originated prior to that time. The latter were for balances due for carrying mails in the south when the war broke out. There were several bills to reimburse post masters and internal revenue collectors for stamps lost or stolen. One was to pay the balance on a contract for ice furnished the army hospitals in the Mississippi valley during the war. The amount claimed is $20,000 and is for ice at the rate of 90 cent a hundred pounds. Among the others were bills to pay George C. Ellison, an engineer at the capital in the '70s, $5,000 for the cost of defending himself against the charge of murder; to pay $5,000 to the widow of Samuel Muhleman, one of the victims of the old Ford theater disaster, when that building, in which were employed government clerks, collapsed, and to refund to the customers of W. M. Jacobs of Lancaster, Pa., the amount of the counterfeit stamps purchased from him.

Two Years For Duelling.

Berlin, Jan. 31.—First Lieutenant Werner, von Graewert, son of lieutenant general of that name, who shot Dr. Maye, a lawyer of Flensburg, through the neck, cutting the spinal cord and causing instant death, in a duel fought in the Grunewald forest Jan. 16, has been sentenced by a military court to two years' imprisonment in a fortress. The trial was conducted behind closed doors.

Chief of the Constabulary.

Washington, Jan. 31.—Captain H. T. Allen, Sixth cavalry, Friday was detailed as chief of the Philippine constabulary, with the rank of brigadier-general.

Was to Kill Belgian's King.—A Belgian anarchist named Martin has been arrested in Barcelona. He has confessed that he was selected to kill the king of Belgians, but was prevented from carrying out the deed by being arrested during the strike in Barcelona a year ago.

Wanted Another Wife.

A traveler in Persia tells the following: "My hunthi walks into the veranda. He is an aged man, wrapped in a long black cloak and wearing a green turban, denoting him a seyd, or a descendant of the prophet. He is very polished today. His beard is dyed the brightest orange with henna, and he tells a string of beads while he waits. We plunge into stories of the Caliphat and dictation written from left to right with a reed pen, and presently the reason of his smartness is told. He has a favor to ask. Would it please me to advance him three months' pay in order to buy a wife? He is old and he is poor, yet he has fallen a victim to the moon face and stag eyes of a damsel of fourteen, but her dowry is large. 'Why do you not support your old wife?' I inquired sternly. 'She is crippled and nearly blind. You do not give her sufficient sustenance, and I send many things to her.' 'She is too old,' he replies, with a shrug. 'She is ugly as an afreet. Added thereto she has no money or children, and of what good is an old woman unless she is rich?'"

What Education Will Do.

A railway company was erecting a line of new poles along a highway. One of the men engaged to fill in the dirt and clear up around the poles was an Irishman, new at the business and new to America. He had not got beyond his first pole, says the Philadelphia Times, but stood pondering how to dispose of the dirt which had filled the space now occupied by the pole.

His sense of the fitness of things must have been strong, for he was averse to piling the loose dirt around the base of the pole, as is the custom. A negro wayfarer stopped for a match, and the Irishman asked his advice.

"If I was a-doin' dat job, I'd jus' dig a hole 'bout where you ah standin' and shovel de dirt into it. Much 'blige."

As the negro sauntered away the Irishman scratched his head and murmured:

"Well, it's not to be denied that eddication has been afther doin' a gr-r-eat deal for-r th' neygur-r!"

Preaching and Practice.

W. S. Gilbert on one certain occasion was on a visit to a friend, the owner of a fine English country house. On the morning after his arrival he was chatting with his host before breakfast when he became suddenly aware that family prayers were about to be read. The household filed in, and the distinguished guest knelt down on the spot where he happened to be standing.

Looking up, he caught his host's eye fixed on him with a warning glance, which he, however, failed to read aright. The service began, "Almighty Father, who hast made all men alike" (more telegraphic glances), "rich and poor, gentle and simple"—then, unable to contain himself any longer, the host called out, "Gilbert, you are kneeling among the servants!"

Something that will do You Good.

We know of no way in which we can be of more service to our readers than to tell them of something that will be of real good to them. For this reason we want to acquaint them with what we consider one of the very best remedies on the market for coughs, colds, and that alarming complaint, croup. We refer to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. We have used it with such good results in our family so long that it has become a household necessity. By its prompt use we haven't any doubt but that it has time and again prevented croup. The testimony is given upon our own experience, and we suggest that our readers, especially those who have small children, always keep it in their home as a safeguard against croup.—Camden (S. C.) Justin Whiting Breathes His Last.

St. Clair, Mich., Feb. 2.—After an illness lasting some two weeks, Hon. Justin R. Whiting passed peacefully away at 11 o'clock Saturday morning. Justin Rice Whiting was born in Bath, Steuben county, New York, Feb. 18, 1847, eldest son of Henry and Pamelia Whiting. Two years later his family moved to St. Clair, Mich. He attended the district schools until he was 16, when he took a classical course at the U. of M. Since then his life has been one of steady progression, in both private and public life. In 1879 he was elected mayor of St. Clair. The year 1882 found him elected as state senator by the Greenback party. Subsequently in 1886 he was made a congressman. Three times he was reelected.

Boy Killed by Companion.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 2.—Shot through the heart accidentally by a companion and almost instantly killed was the fate which Charles Kikhoeffel, a 14-year-old Delray lad, met about 5:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon. He had been hunting with two other boys the same age. They were returning to their homes and one of them, it is said, pointed his gun, which was supposed to be empty, at Charles. It was discharged, and the boy reeled back with a Flobert rifle bullet through the heart. He died in a few minutes.

Big Cereal Deal.

Battle Creek, Mich., Feb. 2.—Business circles here were stirred up Sunday morning by the knowledge of one of the biggest financial deals in the history of the city. The Cero Fruto Food company is reorganized by a number of well-known national capitalists, who incorporate for $25,000,000 under New Jersey laws. William P. Williams of Chicago, sub-treasurer of the United States and a heavy stockholder of the Malta Vita Food company, engineered the deal.

OFF ON THE JUNKET.

Fish Committee at Grand Rapids—Main Body Leaves Detroit.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Feb. 2.—This year's legislative fish junket, usually the swellest and swiftest on the biennial list, promises to be unique in the history of the legislature for being exceedingly tame and businesslike.

The party reached here early Sunday morning. After breakfast at the hotel they went to Mill Creek bass hatchery, a few miles out of town. Superintendent Lydell explained he wanted to purchase three more acres at $100 an acre, for three additional ponds; $200 for a bridge and about the same amount to terrace and otherwise improve the side of the hill between the superintendent's residence and the fishery. The committeemen seemed to think the proposed improvements needed.

The junketers left for Paris this morning, and proceed thence to Cadillac, Mackinaw, Sault Ste. Marie, Ishpeming and Marquette. They will meet the big junket at Ishpeming, returning via Chicago.

The fish commission asks for a total of $76,000, about the same amount allowed two years ago.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 2.—The main body of legislative junketers left the Michigan Central depot bound for the northern peninsula at 8:45 o'clock last night, but not in a special train, as their three sleepers and dining car were attached to Michigan Central regular train No. 207, making nine cars in the string. Ninety-one people were in the party.

The train is due at Mackinaw City this morning. Banquets await the party at Newberry and through the mining country. J. S. Monroe will guide the solons through the upper peninsula.

No Fight.

"Did you know that your political antagonist had cast reflections on your truth and veracity?"

Preliminary to the Baptism.

When Bishop Goe of Melbourne was a curate, a famous pugilist in the parish, who went by the name of Jim the Slogger and who had never darkened a church door, called at the parsonage asking him to baptise the baby. Accordingly the bishop repaired to Jim's house, but was surprised on being admitted to see Jim lock the door and pocket the key. "Be you the parson come to sprinkle that kid?" he asked. On the bishop assenting he continued, "You can't sprinkle that kid till you and me has had a fight, parson."

The unfortunate parson protested, but finding protest useless "stood up" to Jim. The battle went for the bishop, and Jim, pulling himself from the floor, muttered, "He's the parson for me." The baptism was proceeded with, and, as the story goes, Jim took to church going from that day.—Pall Mall Gazette.

THE DREYFUS CASE

Reported a Revival Has Been Officially Decided Upon.

A SENSATIONAL REVELATION

It Is Asserted Will Be Made by M. Jaures, a Socialist Deputy—Important Document Reported to Be in Possession of Minister of War.

Paris, Feb. 4.—The Liberte, an anti-governmental organ, states that a revival of the Dreyfus affair has been decided upon officially. M. Jaures, the Socialist deputy, recently asserted, according to the Liberte, that he would shortly find an opportunity to make a sensational revelation in the chamber. This revelation is alleged to consist of a document which a police agent named Tomps recently secured and which is now in the hands of the war minister. The government, says the Liberte, is so convinced of the importance of this document that it desires to reward Tomps with the decoration of the Legion of Honor, but the council of the order has refused its consent. The government hopes to overcome the opposition of the council before the matter comes up in the chamber.

The Liberte does not give the nature of the document, but expresses doubt that it will prove sufficient to upset the verdict of the Rennes courtmartial.

Fought Until Death.

Uniontown, Pa., Feb. 4.—Mark Ward of Fairchance, Pa., is dead, the result according to the allegation of several witnesses, of an attack upon him by Omar Stewart, an old schoolmate and associate from the same town. Both are prominent. The two met here Saturday and clashed. They started out for the borough to settle an old grudge of their school days. The police interfered and separated the pugilists after each had been severely punished. They renewed the fight Saturday evening and again Monday. Ward's opponent got the best of him and fatal effects resulted.

Struck Chicago Hard.

Chicago, Feb. 4.—One of the worst storms of recent years has been raging in this city since early Tuesday morning and has caused much damage to telephone and telegraph wires. The storm commenced with a fall of rain, which later changed to snow, and last night changed back to rain. A number of the outlying street car lines in the suburbs have been badly crippled. The storm has been accompanied by a gale of forty-eight miles an hour. A number of people have been badly injured by falls, the pavements being covered with ice.

Caught Cold Planting Trees.

London, Feb. 4.—Late last night Baron Knollys informed inquirers at Windsor castle that the king's progress was quite satisfactory. An indication that no anxiety is felt regarding the king's condition may be found in the complete absence of inquiries from foreign courts, which was the usual experience on the occasion of the king's previous illness. The king caught a slight cold some days ago. He wore a cumbersome overcoat while planting trees on Monday and the unbuttoning of it to facilitate digging is supposed to have given him a chill.

Re-Admit the Jesuits.

Berlin, Feb. 4.—The German government has decided to re-admit the Jesuits who, since July, 1872, have been excluded from Germany. Chancellor von Buelow, in the reichstag Tuesday said he would use his influence to instruct the Prussian members of the bundesrath to support the repeal of the anti-Jesuit law, so far as to permit individual German and foreign Jesuits to reside in Germany, but not to allow the founding of Jesuit chapters, which the chancellor believed the confederated governments would not accept.

Killed Sweetheart and Himself.

New York, Feb. 4.—R. Bidlich, a waiter, went to the residence of Bernhard Beinecke, president of the Illinois Cattle Feeding company, Tuesday and asked for the housekeeper, a woman named Garlin. When she came to the door Bidlich shot her, the bullet entering her breast. Bidlich then drank carbolic acid and fired two shots into his head. He had been the woman's sweetheart until recently, when they quarreled. Both will die.

Puts Mill Out of Business.—The river at Plainwell is blocked with ice and the flood has carried out the North Main street bridge and compelled the paper mill to shut down.

He's an Unlucky Heir.—Tom Davis pleaded guilty in circuit court at Flint to breaking into a house in Burton. He was given two years in Ionia. He is heir to an estate of $17,000, which is held in trust for him.

Sent to an Insane Asylum.—George Sutfin, the Shepardsville farmer who attempted suicide a week ago, has been committed to the asylum at Kalamazoo. He was determined to put an end to his life.

Gets $150 For Injuries Received.—The Owosso council, deeming the settlement cheaper than defending a suit in court, has decided to pay Hiram Westherbee of Grand Rapids $150 for damages sustained by a fall on a defective walk.

Must Have Money to Burn.—Charles W. Jewell of Bancroft was convicted a few weeks ago of using indecent language in the presence of a female relative. FUMES FROM ACID

Cause the Deaths of Four Milwaukee Firemen.

TEN OTHERS SERIOUSLY ILL

Breathed Them While Fighting Fire in Plant of Schwab Stamp & Seal Co.—Not Overcome Until Hours After the Fire.

Milwaukee, Feb. 5.—Four firemen are dead and ten others are said to be seriously ill from the effects of inhaling the fumes of nitric acid while fighting a fire at the plant of the Schwab Stamp and Seal company Tuesday night. The victims of the disaster were not overcome for many hours after the fire, when, one by one, they succumbed.

A complete list of the dead and seriously injured up to last night is as follows:

The dead: James Foley, chief; Andrew White, captain truck No. 1; Edward Hogan, pipeman; Thomas Droney, pipeman. truckman.

Seriously ill: Thomas Clancy, assistant chief; Peter Lancaster, captain truck No. 2. The following will probably recover: William Meloy, George Hanrahan, William Kennedy, John Linehan, Joseph Nunwash, George Ryan, all truckmen, and Jack J. Hennessey, lieutenant; Daniel McCarthy, truckman.

Assistant Chief Clancy's condition is critical and the physicians who are watching over him cannot determine his chances of living. Captain Peter Lancaster is dying and Truckman Meloy and William Kennedy are seriously ill. The men became ill yesterday and rapidly grew worse. Doctors worked over them, but Captain Lancaster appeared to be dying, and a priest was sent for and the last rites of the Catholic church administered. It is hoped that Meloy and Kennedy could be pulled through.

Later.—Four more of the firemen have yielded to the effects of the nitric acid fumes, but probably will recover. Late last night Assistant Chief Thomas Clancy, Dan McCarthy and Captain Peter Lancaster were said to be still in a very precarious condition.

MURDER IN PRISON.

Negro Kills Cellmate in a Horrible Manner.

Philadelphia, Feb. 5.—James Pratt, a negro, aged 37 years, who was serving a sentence of twenty years for burglary, was murdered in the Eastern penitentiary here yesterday by Cornelius Bush, 21 years old, also colored, sentenced to two years' imprisonment for assault and battery. The murder was committed early Wednesday morning but was not discovered until J. D. Smith, an overseer, carried breakfast to the men, who were cellmates. He found only Bush in the cell and upon investigation discovered the decapitated body of Pratt, wrapped in blankets and sheets, lying in a corner. On a small table the head of the murdered man was found tied up in an old shirt.

Bush when questioned said Pratt and himself had quarreled all Tuesday night about religious matters. Finally Pratt lay down on his bunk and after he had fallen asleep Bush crushed his skull with a stool. Then with a knife that both had used at meal times, he severed his victim's head. After wrapping up the head and body, Bush retired and slept soundly until nearly 7 in the morning.

This is the third brutal murder which has been committed within the penitentiary.

MICHIGAN EDITORS

Given a Good Time by Battle Creek Citizens.

TAKEN TO SEE THE SHOW

Business Session Preceded Evening Entertainment—Interesting Papers Read and Discussed—Two Hundred in Attendance.

Battle Creek, Mich., Feb. 5.—The biggest bunch of free tickets that ever passed the door of the Post theater at a single performance went through last night when over 200 Michigan editors marched in to see the presentation of "The Burgomaster," but all were paid for by local industries and business houses.

This enjoyment followed a business session, presided over by B. J. Lowrey of the Howard City Record, president of the association. Willis J. Abbott, president of the Battle Creek Press club, and editor of the Pilgrim magazine, gave the opening address, and Hon. Perry F. Powers of the Cadillac News and Express, responded in a characteristic speech, in which he declared that Battle Creek figures more in the newspapers than any little city in the United States.

The first paper read, "An Eccentric Experience," by George H. Mitchell of the Birmingham Eccentric, was a comical relation of the founding and career of that paper. The paper was received with appreciative interest by the editors, who knew well the reading between the lines.

W. F. Knox of the Sault Ste. Marie Journal, read a fine paper on circulation, which was discussed by Byron Holt of the Bellevue Gazette, Editor Greening of Monroe, Editor Davison of the Lowell Journal, J. H. Newell of the Coldwater Reporter, F. N. Green of th Olivet Optic, and R. M. Andrews of Menominee.

Frank L. Gibson, editor of the Benton Harbor Blade, spoke on "Rules for running a newspaper," in which he advocated the abolition of the rate card for advertisers, and recommended a fixed basis for varying rates. He also recommended allowing advertisements on the first page of small papers, giving as much free advertising to lodges, churches, etc., as to football games, horse races and other attractions, where the promoters make more money than the church ever makes. He further said the newspaper was not meant to direct public opinion nor to reform the world, and that jollying was better than fault finding.

Exonerates Postmaster Irwin.

Albion, Mich., Feb. 5.—Rumors have been current here for some time that D. M. Ferry & Co. of Detroit had [illegible] from Albion, and that the transactions were made to boom the postoffice here. The stamps, or at least some of them, were purchased by H. K. W. White of this city, who is a director of the big seed company. A signed statement made by the latter to Postoffice Inspector Ketchum was read yesterday to the city mail carriers. It was to the effect that as a resident of Albion, Mr. White felt he had a perfect right to buy stamps here and take them anywhere he pleased. It was brought to the attention of the local force with the idea of showing them that Postmaster Irwin is free from blame in the matter.

Tried to Burn Bronson.

Bronson Mich., Feb. 5.—About 3 o'clock Wednesday morning five incendiary fires were discovered in Bronson, and only prompt measures saved this handsome village from a disastrous conflagration. The first fire discovered was in the sheds of the Baptist church, the second in the sheds at the Catholic church, the third in the hoop factory, and the others in the barn of Mrs. Keyes and an outbuilding at the Baptist parsonage. William Price of this village was arrested and charged with the crime. Standing mute, Justice Ruggles committed him to the county jail to await examination next Monday.

Veterinarians Seek Protection.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 5.—The twenty-first annual session of the Michigan State Veterinary association commenced here Tuesday and continued through yesterday. The fifty members present are principally interested in needed legislation, which the present legislature will be asked to supply. The doctors claim the present protection afforded by the statute covers only the professional title, but the practice is left the prey of anyone who has designs upon it, there being no penalty for practicing, so long as the offender does not meddle with the title.

Nearly Forfeits His Life.

A runaway almost ending fatally, started a horrible ulcer on the leg of J. B. Orner, Franklin Grove, Ill. For four years it defied all doctors and all remedies, but Bucklen's Arnica Salve had no trouble to cure him. Equally good for burns, bruises, skin eruptions and piles. 25c. at C. A. FROM THE ORIENT.

Steamer Empress Brings News of Numerous Fatalities.

Victoria, B. C., Feb. 5.—The steamer Empress of China brings news of a landslide at Nanking, in which 200 Chinese were buried, hundreds of others maimed and scores of river craft sunk. The landslide occurred at the dock while the steamers Perang, Butterfield and Sures Pulk were discharging their cargoes. The killed and injured were mostly spectators. News is also brought of the drowning of fifty workmen by the sinking of a launch in a squall in Kobe harbor on Jan. 9.

Sixty-four miners were burned to death in a fire that occurred on Jan. 17 in Urushubu colliery, Fukuoka Ken, Japan, caused by a miner accidentally igniting a dynamite fuse.

As a result of a combat between 100 fishing smacks off the Japanese coast, forty-five men are reported killed.

The plague is increasing in Tokio.

The steamer Empress of China brings further news of the crisis in northern China. The writers say that the situation is most serious and that in Kwangsu a large army is being raised to proceed against the foreigners, and only the exposure of this movement and the aid it is receiving at Pekin will open the eyes of the statesmen of Great Britain, America and Germany to the danger which threatens foreigners in China. All travelers are being searched and letters opened. Caravans of camels are bringing arms and ammunition and stores of feed and grain to the rebel headquarters.

Bloody Battle at Fez.

London, Feb. 5.—According to a dispatch published in the Morning Leader from Tangier, the Spanish embassy has received news of a still more bloody battle than that which took place Jan. 29. The sultan's troops, numbering 12,000, attacked the pretender's new encampment, treachery and bribery again giving the Shereefian army the advantage. A terrible fight took place around Hamara's person and, according to the latest accounts, continued right up to the gates of Fez, where after losing 2,500 slain, the rebels succeeded eventually in rescuing Hamara.

Fought With Robbers.

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 5.—A desperate battle occurred at 1 o'clock Wednesday morning between a posse headed by Postoffice Inspector S. C. Kile and four robbers in the little postoffice at Huntingburg, Ind., which the men attempted to rob. About seventy shots were fired and it is believed that two of the robbers were shot. However, all four made their escape. The search is still in progress. The fight was the culmination of a six days' chase by Inspector Kile after the robbers, who have, within the past few weeks, entered several postoffices in southern Indiana.

Plague Gaining Ground.

Mazatlan, Mexico, Feb. 5.—There were five deaths Wednesday from plague. The number of persons isolated is 239. The police found in the house of a barber in the plaza Machido the body of a woman who had died of the plague. The corpse had remained in the house several hours. This indicates that the plague is advancing into the center and best built part of the city.

Was Cuban Flag Insulted?

Havana, Feb. 5.—A cablegram has been published here to the effect that the Cuban flag, which was placed over the Hotel de La Paz at Madrid by the Cuban minister, has been taken down by order of the Spanish authorities. The house of representatives passed a resolution asking President Palma to ascertain the facts regarding this alleged incident.

New York Den Raided.

New York, Feb. 5.—About 100 men were caught Wednesday in a raid by the police on an alleged gambling house and pool room in West Thirty-first street. There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

A Night Alarm.

Worse than alarm of fire at night is the brassy cough of croup, which sounds like the children's death knell and it means death unless something is done quickly. Foley's Honey and Tar never fails to give instant relief and quickly cures the worst forms of croup. Mrs P. L. Cordier, of Mannington, Ky., writes, "My three-year-old girl had a severe case of croup; the doctor said she could not live. I got a bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar, the first dose gave quick relief and saved her life. Refuse substitutes. J. J. Orr.

Water is good for a locomotive; try it on man.

A Most Fatal Gift.

Would be the power of foreseeing events. This would destroy hope. A knowledge of the future would unmake happiness. There are, of course, some things about the future we do not know If, for instance, a lack of energy, ambition and loss of appetite shows itself we know it will be followed by serious complaints if not checked. Often liver and kidney trouble follow quickly. In any event Electric Bitters will restore you to health. It strengthens, builds up and invigorates run down systems. Only 50c. Creeds are crutches by which poor, lame humanity can hobble toward God. But it was never intended that they should be used as clubs by Christians with which to break each other's heads.

A Thousand Dollars Thrown Away.

Mr. W. W. Baker, of Plainview, Neb., writes "My wife had lung trouble for over fifteen years. We tried a number of doctors and spent over a thousand dollars without any relief. She was very low and I lost all hope, when a friend suggested trying Foley's Honey and Tar, which I did; and thanks be to this great remedy it saved her life. She is stronger and enjoys better health than she has ever known in ten years. We shall never be without Foley's Honey and Tar and would ask those afflicted to try it." J. J. Orr.

Wealth is not his who gets it, but his who enjoys it.

Foley's Honey and Tar is best for croup and whooping cough, contains no opiates and cures quickly. Careful mothers keep it in the house. J. J. Orr.

CHAPTER IX.

DENTON TURNS LOCOMOTIVE ENGINEER.

DENTON presented an unruffled front.

"Take me to the governor," he said.

"The governor is resting," growled a fellow whose face was a mass of greasy hair. "You will kill him."

"Nonsense! Take me to the governor. If you kill me, he will die."

"Why is that, builder of bridges? Is there a god who avenges the death of Americans?"

"It will need no god to do that now. The case is simply that Neslerov needs better care than you can give him. He is badly injured. It is necessary that he shall be taken to Tomsk at once. I can start within the hour. There will not be another train to the Obi in four days. Do you desire to keep your precious governor here and have him die on your hands?"

"No. Let us see what the governor has to say."

It was a solemn crowd that marched in two columns, with Denton between, to the hut of the village priest, where Neslerov lay.

"Why do you bring him here?" asked the priest. "Heard you not what his excellency said?"

"Hold your peace. Wait till you hear them speak together," was the reply.

Neslerov looked up at his conqueror, and an expression of hatred came into his eyes. Denton made no show of sentiment or compassion.

"I understand you commanded these villagers to kill me," he said, standing at the side of the bed and looking coldly and sternly at his victim. "I just wanted to say before they kill me—which they certainly will do if you insist—that in that case you would probably die here for lack of proper care."

"You cannot help me—you would not," answered Neslerov.

"That is for you to say. I am not a murderer. I had no desire to kill you. You attacked me, and I defended myself. I am going back to Tomsk, provided your savage villagers don't kill me, and I merely came to ask if you would be pleased to go."

"How?" he asked.

"In the same car you came thus far in."

"But how? There is no train due for days."

"I will take you to Tomsk if you promise never again to molest Mr. Gordon or his daughter."

"I promise," said Neslerov. "I will order the villagers to permit you to go."

Denton then went to the car and examined it. He discovered where a flaw in the iron had weakened the couplings.

He was followed at a short distance by several young men, among whom was the boy who had run to tell him that a woman was being roughly handled by Neslerov, and who had taken his horse to shelter. He ordered the boy to bring the horse. Mounting, he was soon out of sight. He did not go far, however. He rode along the track until he reached a siding a short distance from the bridge, where there was an old construction engine.

Denton examined the old bulk. It was fit only for drawing one or two cars. Denton carried water from the river and filled the boiler and built a fire of wood.

Soon after the villagers were surprised to see a wheezy, rickety old engine coming slowly, with a prodigious noise, into view. Denton's horse had no difficulty in keeping up with it.

The old engine was coupled to the car, and then Denton went for Frances.

"The train is ready," he said.

"The train! What train?"

"The train that is to carry you to the Obi, where you will join your father."

"But there is no train!"

"There is a train, and as the steam is up and the track clear I suggest haste. Your father is probably anxious."

She went with him. At the sight of the engine she understood.

"You are a wonderful—you are doing this for me!" she said.

"Yes, but Neslerov will be a passenger."

"And you?"

"Engineer, conductor, guard—all."

He took her to the car and made her comfortable.

Neslerov was carried to the car by the villagers. The backs of two seats were turned down, a bed was made for him, and he lay there quiet and seemingly content.

"Of course, I know that you are seriously wounded," said Denton to him, "and the possibility of your doing any mischief is small, but I want to tell you before we start that if I catch you at any tricks I will kill you as I would a dog."

Neslerov nodded, and Denton went on the engine.

It was an exciting start, though the audience was small. The villagers stared, then laughed as the little old engine puffed and screeched and scraped as it got under way.

But it had a man in charge of it who was accustomed to overcoming difficulties. And the way he made it groan and work would have made glad the heart of the man who had abandoned it on the siding six months before.

In the car was silence. Neslerov was too weak to talk; Frances would not talk to him if he wished. She remained at her end of the car, save to go in mercy to him and offer him water at intervals. At such times he would look up at her with an earnest, inscrutable expression on his face. She would not speak, nor he.

Suddenly at a siding toward which he had been aiming Denton turned the engine to the right and brought the little train to a standstill. They had been on the road sixteen hours and had traveled 210 miles.

Frances and Neslerov both looked up as the train stopped and saw the grimy engineer enter the car.

"There is a village near here," he said, "and just beyond this siding there is a small signal box. I have just visited it, and there is a train coming this way from Tomsk. Undoubtedly, as there is no regular train due, this is a searching party out after Frances Gordon. Now, I have no wish to start an international controversy. What story shall we tell?"

"Tell the truth," said Frances. "It does not as a rule harm any person who is innocent."

"No," said Neslerov; "not as a rule. But we are in a part of the world where customs are different from yours. If you tell the truth, you will never make the world believe you. But you will not understand; I cannot tell you."

"I know what you mean," said Frances scornfully. "You mean that your reputation is so bad that if it were known that you had that car left behind to compel me to marry you everybody will be sure I am your wife. Is that it?"

"Yes; something like that."

"But, then, there is my word," said Denton.

"Your story will be believed by your people, my story by mine," said Neslerov. "Let us each tell what we please. I do not care."

Denton nodded and went back to his engine. But he did not start. The whistle of a speeding locomotive was borne to him by the breeze. It came—one engine and a car, the same as that he was on, but a modern locomotive of American make. Gordon was in the car with some officials from Tomsk.

"Hey! That you, Denton?" he gasped as the grimy bridgebuilder stepped into the car, which was stopped at the side of the construction engine. "My girl and the governor of Tomsk got left behind in a car. Seen"—

"I'm all right," said Frances as she emerged from her car and flew to her father's arms.

"Did Denton save you? What was it? Where is Neslerov?" asked Gordon.

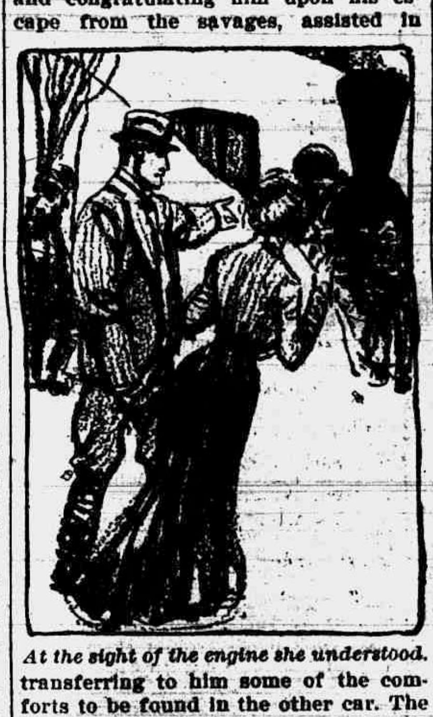
"Oh, he is in there," said Frances coolly. "We've had a lively experience. I thought at one time we'd be killed by some savages. But Mr. Denton and the prince—oh, let's get on; I'm tired out and hungry."

Denton heard and wondered.

In every new experience he had had with Frances Gordon he had been made more and more astonished by the uncertain moods, the whims, the strange turns her caprice would take.

"Hitch on to this train and haul her back to the Obi," said Denton. "If the road doesn't want this engine, I can use it at the Obi bridge."

This attachment was soon made, and Mr. Gordon, after visiting the prince and congratulating him upon his escape from the savages, assisted in transferring to him some of the comforts to be found in the other car. The Russian officials swarmed around him and praised his courage.



At the sight of the engine she understood.

"And that American! He is a brave one too!" they said.

"Yes; he is brave—braver than I," said Neslerov weakly.

The train started back toward Tomsk. It had about ninety miles to go to reach the Obi. During the journey Denton and Frances found themselves side by side in the rear car, with no one near enough to hear their low spoken tones.

"I cannot understand you," said Denton. "You first said tell the truth, then you yourself told the first deliberate lie. Why?"

Frances looked at him coolly.

"Because I thought it over. There was a good deal in what Neslerov said. Then, again, you and my father have work to do, a career to make, money to earn, and with the enmity of Neslerov you would be ruined. I studied it well. It is better as I said it. Let it pass."

"Here we are at Vashlov," he said. "For the time being you are home again."

"Yes," she replied, with the slightest tremor in her voice. "Thanks to you, I am home again—in my temporary home."

CHAPTER X.

JANSKY, SUPERINTENDENT OF POLICE.

NESLEROV lay in his palace in Tomsk, slowly recovering. His heart was filled with rage, and he longed for vengeance.

His closest confidant now was Jansky, who, owing to his meritorious conduct in the apprehension of so great a gang of conspirators as the Paulpoffs, was promoted at the request of Neslerov to a post where he could assist his superior in his plans and ambitions.

He had told Jansky the story of the ride from Moscow, and it was of course colored to suit his purpose. Jansky had received his commission—the first important one since his arrival at Tomsk—to watch the American and find an opportunity to wreak vengeance.

About twenty miles from the city of Tomsk was the village of Tivoloffsky, a small mining town peopled by convicts.

To this town the Paulpoffs had been sent. Vladimir was useful in the mines. With his tremendous strength he could do the work of two, and in his simple obedience to the mandates of his superiors he never uttered a complaint. The old people did menial work, cooking for the convicts who had no families or cleaning in the houses of the officers.

This new life came hardest upon the old people, and it was their sufferings that made Vladimir curse under his breath.

One day Jansky entered the room where Neslerov sat or half reclined.

"Well, what is it? I see you have something to say," said Neslerov.

"I have, your excellency," replied the superintendent of police. "It concerns him—your enemy."

"The American?"

"Yes. I have obeyed your commands—he has been constantly watched. And at last we are in a position to strike."

Neslerov sat up straight.

"What? Tell me at once."

"It is not yet revealed what the man's object is, but he and the Paulpoffs are plotting again."

"The Paulpoffs?"

"They and the American. He has visited them twice. It was overheard that he and Papa Paulpoff had a long conversation about a picture."

Neslerov glanced at a painting that hung on the wall. It was the painting he had taken from the Paulpoffs' house at Perm.

"What can he know about the picture?" asked the governor.

"I do not know. That is, as I said, not yet revealed."

"Jansky," he said, "I know what the object is if you do not. Listen carefully now to what I say. It is quite possible the American has discovered the existence of the original of that picture you see there. It is a small medallion, probably in a locket. It was lost some years ago by a member of my family and bears relation to a great mystery—the mystery of Graslov."

Jansky shut his eyes and seemed to be thinking.

"Jansky, your life and mine depend on your action now. Do you understand?"

"I understand nothing."

"That picture, if it is the one I mean, must be brought to me. The American, if he proves to be interested in it, must know or suspect something I do not wish him to know. There are ways whereby even an American could disappear in Siberia. And, Jansky, Vladimir Paulpoff is a most dangerous plotter even here. He ought to be placed where he can do no more mischief."

"I begin to understand," said Jansky grimly.

He bowed and left the palace and rode toward Tivoloffsky.

Two days passed, during which Jansky watched and kept himself in readiness to act. Then, while Mamma Paulpoff was alone in her hut, she heard an imperative knocking at the door. Papa Paulpoff and Vladimir had just gone to the mine. Denton, the American, had left the hut but a short time before. Mamma Paulpoff had been through so much trouble of late that the slightest sound jarred upon her. She turned whiter still and stepped backward as she saw the dark and forbidding face of Jansky. Behind Jansky were two of the Tomsk police.

"You are Mamma Paulpoff," said Jansky, slipping his foot in the door and working his way inside.

"I am; you know me; I was at Perm," faltered the trembling old woman.

"I am quite well aware that you were at Perm, old woman, and also that conspiring son of yours. It showed the mercy of the czar that you received no worse punishment. This is heaven compared to what you deserved."

"We had done nothing, your excellency."

"What! You still persist in that lie! You were all in the game, and you are still at it, let me tell you."

"It is not so!" wailed the old woman, having visions of horrible punishments of which she had heard.

"Don't tell me," said Jansky, brandishing a whip he carried. The other two did the same, but their whips were heavier.

The old woman crouched against the wall.

"Don't lie to me again," thundered Jansky. "I have been watching you every day since you came to this place. I say you are still conspiring."

"It is not so! I swear it in the name of God!" cried Mamma Paulpoff.

"Let me tell you, it will be worse for you if you do not tell the truth. You are receiving a visitor who is suspected."

"I—a visitor! I know no one!" gasped Mamma Paulpoff.

"Oh, do you not? But you were here when he came. Did he come to see you, your husband or your son?"

"Who—of whom do you speak?" asked the frightened old woman.

"Of whom would I speak save that accursed American? He has twice made attempts upon the life of the governor of Tomsk. Yet the governor in the kindness of his heart has not molested him. But he was warned if a third attempt was made it would go hard with him."

"Ah, it is impossible! He is so good—so kind"—

"Good and kind, eh? In what manner does he display it?"

"Oh, he came—he came"—

The old woman stumbled and floundered. It had been borne in upon her understanding by Papa Paulpoff that on no account must she breathe a word to any person concerning the visit of which Jansky spoke.

"Come, out with it!" stormed Jansky.

"He came—I do not know why he came," murmured the old woman in despair.

"I will tell you. He came to conspire against the life of Neslerov, governor of Tomsk."

"No, no! I swear he did not."

"Good! Then if you know he did not, you must know why he did come here. Out with it, now, if you value your life."

"My life! Ah, you would not harm a helpless old woman!"

For answer Jansky brought his whip down on her bony shoulders.

"Have mercy!" cried the unfortunate.

"Will you tell why the American visited this house?"

"I know not!"

"Take her; tie her thumbs—there, over the door!" he commanded savagely.

His two gallant men needed no further bidding. The aged woman was seized, cords were fastened to her thumbs, and she was placed standing in the doorway Jansky had indicated, with her thumbs hung above her head.

"Tear the rags from her back!"

A rude hand tore away her garments to the waist.

"Now, then, old hag," said Jansky, "understand I have come for the truth and will have it. If you do not give it to me, I will kill you. I will get the truth from Paulpoff, who has more sense than you. Now, what was the business that brought the American here?"

"I know not!" whispered the woman, with a great sob.

"The lash!" roared Jansky.

One of his police swung his heavy whip, and the lash came down across the naked shoulders. A livid mark told the course, and Mamma Paulpoff cried out in agony.

"This must be known!" said Jansky. "Either you or some one must tell. What brought the American here? Was it concerning a picture?"

"I know not!" said the woman.

"The lash! Twice!" ordered Jansky.

A white line and a red one marked the blows of the whip. Mamma Paulpoff screamed in her awful torture. Her limbs grew weaker, and she hung by the cords tied to her thumbs. The thumbs were black.

"You will learn!" said Jansky. "The officers of the czar must take these steps to protect his empire. With the lesson you have had, tell the truth. What brought the American here?"

"I know not!" answered the woman.

"Hell's furies upon her!" said Jansky, almost beside himself. "The lash! Three times!"

"Your arm is weak," said the police officer who had done no whipping. "Let me try."

A smile of horrible cruelty crossed his face as he stepped by the side of the woman. His whip whistled in the air. It fell—once—twice—thrice, and with a scream, her head fell back. Her eyes glazed.

"Hold! Quick! Release her and restore her to consciousness!" ordered Jansky. "She is unconscious and cannot feel our punishment."

They cut her down, laid her on the floor and poured liquor down her throat.

Groans came from her as they worked.

"God, take me from this awful pain!" she murmured.

"She feels again!" said Jansky in savage glee. "String her up!"

Again she was raised and the cords were fastened to her thumbs.

"Now, hag, tell me why the American came here? Was it to kill the governor or to kill the czar?"

"No, I do not know."

"You lie. The charge against him and Vladimir is that they are conspiring to kill both. The American and Vladimir will be taken to the prison at Tomsk and shot. Tell the truth! It will save them and you."

"I know nothing!" said the old woman, remembering her husband's warnings.

"The lash, both of you! Kill the old beast!" yelled Jansky.

"It was but a picture—to take a picture!" cried Mamma Paulpoff in tones that pierced the air.

Her weakness had come too late. Both whips coiled round her shrunken breasts. The withered skin was cut as with a knife. One scream came from her writhing lips, and she was still.

"Cut her down. Leave her," was Jansky's curt remark. He watched them lay the still form upon the floor and then led the way to their horses.

"It was a picture," he muttered. "Then Neslerov was right, and the American is on the trail. Both he and Vladimir must die!"

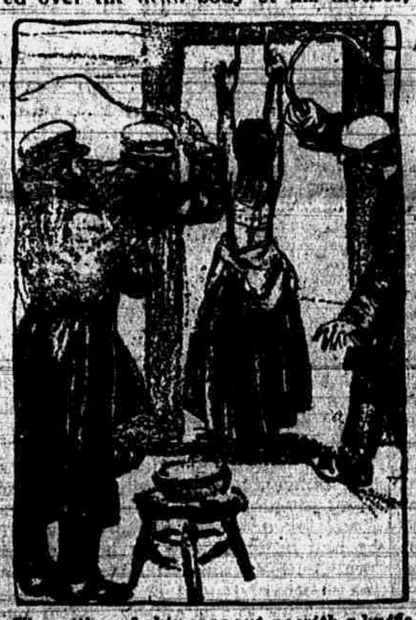
That night Vladimir came home from the mine with Papa Paulpoff. He was the first to step across the threshold.

"My God!" he said. "Who has been here?"

Papa Paulpoff stood stupefied, looking at the upturned face of his wife—dead—bruised—her breast covered with blood.

"The police!" wailed the old man, wringing his hands pitifully. "They have killed Mamma Paulpoff! They will kill you—and me!"

Vladimir's gentle, placid face became distorted with leonine rage. He stooped over the dead body of his mother, touched her blood with the tips of his fingers and wiped them on his own brow.



The withered skin was cut as with a knife.

"If this is Neslerov or the order of the czar," he thundered into the ears of the terror stricken old man, "I will rend them all! From this moment I live for vengeance!"

He brought his clinched fist down on a wooden table and wrecked it completely.

"So will I crush them who have done this thing!" he cried. "So will I smash their hearts!"

While he raged Papa Paulpoff sank by the side of Mamma Paulpoff and wept.

Sick Blood

Feed pale girls on Scott's Emulsion.

We do not need to give all the reasons why Scott's Emulsion restores the strength and flesh and color of good health to those who suffer from sick blood.

The fact that it is the best preparation of Cod Liver Oil, rich in nutrition, full of healthy stimulation is a suggestion as to why it does what it does.

Scott's Emulsion presents Cod Liver Oil at its best, fullest in strength, least in taste.

Young women in their "teens" are permanently cured of the peculiar disease of the blood which shows itself in paleness, weakness and nervousness, by regular treatment with Scott's Emulsion.

It is a true blood food and is naturally adapted to the cure of the blood sickness from which so many young women suffer.

We will be glad to send a sample to any sufferer.

Be sure that this picture in the form of a label is on the wrapper of every bottle of Emulsion you buy.

"The Liberty Belles."

"The Liberty Belles" will be at the New Bradley, Friday, February 13. The much talked of musical comedy, aside from the notoriety brought to it by reason of its unconventional first act, is said to contain much of Harry B. Smith's best music, and in the production, Frank Hennessy has devoted his best energies. In many respects the production is, of course, a novel one. The dormitory scene in the first act showing about twenty-two young women in fluffy night robes and the cooking school in full blast in the second act have attracted much comment, as has also the fact that "The Liberty Belles" is the only organization of its kind that has no chorus in the general accepted meaning of the word, each member of the cast having a speaking and acting part. In the cast are such well known entertainers as Gertrude Millington, Maybelle Adams, Clara Marion, Rita Knight, Jessie Crane, Cora Isham, Vivian Austin, Olive Weathered, Percy Leach, Harry Stuart, J. A. Marlowe, Harry Lyons and others.

At Last.

"All Will Come to Him Who Waits" is an old saying and in the case of the new hotel at Adrian 'tis hoped it will be true. It is said that Dwight Whitney took possession of the old Emery Hotel February 1. Dwight Whitney should know how to keep hotel and at Adrian there is a chance for him to try. There has not been a decent hotel in Adrian since the present generation can remember, and if Whitney now runs a good one it will be a pleasure and benefit to the whole county.

Albert Leslie DeGreen's impersonation of a district school entertainment as given in his lecture on "Amusement among Miscellaneous Muses" is well worth the price of admission for the whole entertainment. Don't fail to hear him at the Presbyterian church Tuesday, February 10th, under the auspices of C. E. society.

AROUND TOWN.

Thoughts About
OLDER TIMES THAN NOW

And the Growth of Our Village in the Last Few Years.

The fire up at Clinton the other night has started everyone talking, not only about fires at Tecumseh but at Clinton. Our Clinton neighbors were very much put out because the Tecumseh fire department did not hitch up and drive immediately to Clinton to help save the town. Of course when they found out that the hose was not the same size and that our engine could not be used they felt better, but at first some hard words were used and the Tecumseh people blamed for not being more ready to help in time of need. But in the meantime the story has been circulated that the woolen mill at Clinton has a large powerful pump always ready to work and that the management of the factory has offered, if the village would put down a water main through the main street and furnish hose and hose cart, to give the village, without cost, water for fire protection. If this report is true, there is no excuse except the stinginess of the village council, for not having good fire protection at Clinton, anyway through the business portion of the village, for the way that Geo. Freese, "By" Randall and "Chuck" Kennedy would yank out a hose cart to put out a fire would be a caution. Wake up, neighbors, before a worse fire comes and makes a bare prairie of our now prosperous sister village.

About three weeks ago on a bright sunshiny day—we have had at least three in the last month—a not-very-well-dressed stranger called at the door of Mrs. Richard Ford. The lady did not like his looks so gave him no pressing invitation to come in or call again. He seemed anxious to find the nearest way to the Quaker mill and, as he was in no hurry to go away, stood idly on the porch. Mrs. F. thought of the old alarm clock, wound it up, let it ring and, after the racket, in a loud tone of voice said, "Is this the marshal? Please come up here at once. There is a tramp at my door and he seems unwilling to go away." Mr. Tramp thought it time to go and flew at once. Mrs. Ford seems to have original and sensible ideas and does nicely without the modern telephone.

Thinking about the fire engine reminds me of when the council bought this same fire engine. It was about in 1875. Either at that time or shortly after the city put up an old fashioned windmill on the lot near where the house of "Nick" Howland now stands and from that a system of wooden pipes run down through town. By this mill water was pumped into a large tank and this tank and the wooden pipes was the system of water works. Several hydrants were put about town and the hose from the engine would tap onto hydrant and when Bob Streach and "Hub" Scott [illegible] they could actually throw water clear over the hotel.

I remember it was a LaFrance engine and there were two representatives of two engine companies here for over two months, this and another concern working the council to sell the machines. For the LaFrance machine came a little chap named LaFrance. He was a nephew I think, of the inventor of the engine. He only had one arm and was a fine cornet player.

At that time Ernie Anderson owned a fine "Klinker" bottom row boat and had it on the Globe pond. Then there were no weeds in the pond as at present and there was fine rowing. Fine summer nights Fred Wood, Dick Anderson Ed Baird, "Chuck" Kennedy and myself would go down to the pond and listen to young LaFrance make echoes with his cornet. Beside being a fine cornet player, he was a bright fellow and good company, sold the engine to the council amid sharp competition and I have often thought since that they must have got a good price for that engine for LaFrance was here a long time and spent plenty of money too.

I am told that today this old LaFrance engine is as good as ever. Why not sell it? The money would build three or four feet of sewer on Chicago street. Then it seems to me only a few days since Wallace Gray watched the village windmill, took care of the village lamps, (kerosene on top of lamp-posts) and went around with oil can on an old green velocipede. Now Tecumseh has a good system of water works, electric lights, the best streets in the state and will before many moons have a good sewer system.

Sometimes it seems like the taxes in Tecumseh were large and, in fact, they are. We have water and lights and good roads and good cross walks and there are only a few people to pay for them.

Another thing, the village has to help pay for the whole township bridge tax which is no small sum, and if Tecumseh was a city like Hudson, it would save from 10 to 35 per cent. on township taxes and with no more cost than at present. Why would not this spring be a good time to think about a city charter and save what we can?

Tragedy Averted.

"Just in the nick of time our little boy was saved," writes Mrs. W. Watkins of Pleasant City, Ohio. Pneumonia had played sad havoc with him and a terrible cough set in besides. Doctors treated him, but he grew worse every day. At length we tried Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and our darling was saved. He's now sound and well." The subject of this sketch was born Feb. 11, 1822 in the northern part of Ireland. In 1831 her parents and family of twelve children, of which she was the youngest, came to America located in the town of Sparta, Livingston county, N. J.

In 1837 she was united in marriage to Thos. Dickson and in the same year moved to Michigan, settling in Tecumseh, which place has known her kindly presence up to the time of her death.

In 1841 she with her husband, united with the First Presbyterian church, of Tecumseh, of which Rev. Jennings was then pastor. By their kindly acts and hearty hospitality their domestic life was one of sunshine and pleasure, until May 6, 1867, when the Angel of Death knocked at their door and summoned the husband to the realms of eternal bliss.

Separated from her life-partner, she devoted the remaining years of her life in working for God and spreading sunshine and comfort into the homes of God's people. Ever ready to aid and give a helping hand to her fellow beings, she ever went to extra effort that some ailing friend might be made happy.

We shall miss her, her accustomed chair will be vacant, the home that has been made bright these past years will have her presence no more. She responded to the call of her Father and left all her earthly cares and troubles, that she might go home and join those gone on before.

"She heard a voice that called to her,
These earthly cares to leave,
As if in answer to that call
She left us here to grieve."

Never again will her voice be heard in the home that has known her so long, but we know she is at rest. She died believing in the true faith. She is not lost to us forever, but simply gone on before, where, in the presence of her maker, all her cares and troubles will be banished.

Church Workers.

Two mischievous girls who are members of a church choir in a country town not far from here, figured recently in a laughable incident, which is quite good enough to bear repeating. In some way, known only to themselves, they became possessed of the subject of the minister's Sunday morning sermon, and thereupon set about selecting songs in harmony with the theme. On Sunday morning they were on hand bright and early, looking innocent enough to deceive a brace of Pinkerton detectives. One of them seated herself at the organ and played "Faint yet Pursuing," which was sung as a voluntary. Then the minister arose, and consulting the list which had been given him, called for number 395. The choir sang, "Almost Persuaded." The minister arose and announced his theme, "Courtship and Marriage," read the lesson and called the next song. The choir sang, "Triumph at Last," and the congregation began to look amused. "After prayer sing number 201," said the minister, and in his petition asked that the spirit of levity, which possessed some of his hearers, be banished. Then the choir sang, "Hasten Lord the Glorious Day," and everybody laughed. Even the minister had difficulty in stifling a smile when the choir struck up, "Behold the Bridegroom Cometh," and the congregation became positively hilarious as the organ pealed out the opening notes of "What Shall the Harvest be?" And throughout, those wicked girls preserved their expression of saintly innocence and afterwards decided that it was "the most peculiar and striking coincidence" they ever heard of.—Ex.

BUDS AND FLOWERS OF HOME LIFE.

Paine's Celery Compound Makes and Keeps the Children Well and Strong.

Mothers Make It the Home Medicine For the Little Ones.

The children, God bless them, are the buds and flowers of our homes. Without their prattle and hearty laughter, our homes would be desolate. They should ever be carefully tended in childhood and youth, if we expect them to ripen into perfect men and women.

In the home and at school, the children have their times of ill health and suffering. We often note the pallid and bloodless cheeks, heavy eyes, nervous movements, and twitchings of limbs and muscles. They complain of headache, drowsiness, weariness, dyspepsia, and indigestion. All such symptoms and ailments mean that the seeds of disease will have a fast and firm hold, unless proper measures are taken to restore a perfect condition of health.

Thousands of wise and prudent parents have made their children happy, healthy, and vigorous by giving them nature's medicine, Paine's Celery Compound. In many severe and complicated cases, Paine's Celery Compound has restored health when the little ones were given up by physicians.

If your dear ones are not as hearty, strong, and rugged as they should be, try the health giving virtues of Paine's Celery Compound. It makes and keeps the children well.

IT WILL COME BACK.

Some Tecumseh Residents Have Learned How to Keep It Away.

Your back may not ache very long,
But the ache will return shortly.
Comes oftener—stays longer,
Unless the kidneys are relieved.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure all kidney ills.

Tecumseh people endorse them.

Mr. Henry Keyser, retired farmer and capitalist, residence in the southwestern section of Tecumseh, says: "I am thoroughly convinced of the superior merits of this popular remedy, Doan's Kidney Pills. They deserve naught save the highest praise. Before going to C. A. Wright's drug store for a box I had a dull aching pain in my back which had annoyed me for some time and the secretions from the kidneys were unnatural and irregular. To say that I was surprised at the effect is putting it very mildly. In a very short time the trouble disappeared. I never knew a medicine that worked so quickly and satisfactorily.

JUNKETERS AT MARQUETTE.

Spent a Busy Day Inspecting and Eating.

Marquette, Mich., Feb. 4.—The legislative junket committee had a busy time at Marquette Tuesday. Senator Burns of Grand Rapids, chairman of the committee on Marquette prison, conducted the party through the prison in the forenoon, and Warden Russell entertained all at dinner in the prison chapel hall. Music was furnished by the convict band. In the afternoon Representative Barnaby of Kent county, chairman of the committee on normal schools, took the legislative party through the normal school building and inspected the work and needs of the institution for the next two years. Last night local citizens gave a banquet to the party in the Hotel Clifton, at which 150 covers were laid and the glad hand extended in a cordial manner. Ex-Senator Gad Smith served as master of ceremonies all day in entertaining his former colleagues of the legislature.

The party left at 11:30 for Houghton, where the college of mines will be inspected today. Houghton citizens will give a banquet to the party tonight.

Senator Doherty of Clare was confined to his berth in the special train all day with an attack of malarial fever.

Cadillac, Mich., Feb. 4.—The fish junketers left here last evening for Sault Ste. Marie. The committees visited the new Harrietta station yesterday, for which $7,800 is asked for maintenance and improvement. The legislators talk favorably for the appropriation. They expect a 5,000,000 output of trout if the amount is allowed. "Pop" Coodell surprised the party by appearing in a new shirt, collar and tie.

Three Attempts at Suicide.

Port Huron, Mich., Feb. 4.—Patience Hughes, a young woman who has led a dissipated life, made three futile attempts to commit suicide yesterday in jail. She was brought in Monday night intoxicated and locked in the woman's department. She entered the bathroom adjoining her cell, turned on and inhaled a quantity of gas, falling to the floor unconscious. Deputies found her just in time to save her life. After being placed in her cell she again entered the bathroom and went to the gas for a second time, but this time tied a towel around her neck, which partially strangled her. With some difficulty she was revived and the officers caught her making a third attempt.

BUTTER SCORING CONTEST.

Diplomas to Be Given, Also a Medal From the Governor.

Agricultural College, Mich., Feb. 5.—The second day of the Dairymen's convention opened Wednesday morning with a speech by H. J. Greer of Dowagiac, on the possibility of curing a soft Michigan cheese at a low temperature. Although it was a difficult matter, still it had been done. He, however, recommended that more scientific methods be used to bring about the desired effect.

Following Mr. Greer came G. B. Horton of Fruit Ridge with an interesting paper on "Testing milk for cheese."

Governor Bliss was in attendance at the afternoon session and occupied a seat on the platform among the speakers. Instructor Michaels of the college gave a report of the committee having the butter scoring contest in hand. The contest will be held every six months in both creamery and dairy butter, and diplomas will be presented to makers receiving first and second decisions.

Governor Bliss made a few remarks relative to the butter scoring contest, and offered to present a gold medal to the winner of each branch of the industry.

Dr. Marshall of the department of bacteriology and hygiene of the college gave a discussion on "Dairy sanitation."

Hon. E. N. Bates of Moline then spoke on the benefits to be gained by the dairymen through a system of state instruction.

STALLED AT ST. IGNACE.

Fish Committee Had Trouble—Other Junketers at Houghton.

St. Ignace, Mich., Feb. 5.—The fisheries committees were stalled all day Wednesday at Mackinaw City by the storm, which veterans there claim was the worst experienced for twenty years. At 5 o'clock in the afternoon the clouds broke away, and the wind died down, so that the start across the straits was begun at 6. The party remained here last night, leaving for the Soo this morning. The plan to join the main body of the junketers has been sadly interfered with, and it will not be possible to meet them before Escanaba is reached, if at all.

Houghton, Mich., Feb. 5.—After a day spent visiting the copper mills and college of mines, the junketers enjoyed the entertainment of the people of Houghton last evening. The program included a banquet at the Douglas and a hockey game between Detroit and Portage Lake. The party leaves today for Ishpeming.

Atwood on Grade Crossings.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 5.—Railroad Commissioner Atwood, while indorsing the policy of his predecessor relative to grade crossings of steam and electric tracks, believes no rigid rule can be applied, but that each case should be determined on its merits. In other words, he says, he sees no reason for refusing to permit a grade crossing where an overhead crossing is absolutely impracticable. For this reason he has decided to permit a grade crossing of the Pere Marquette by the Grand Rapids, Grand Haven & Muskegon in Grand Haven. A personal inspection of the situation convinced him that an overhead crossing was a practical impossibility.

Roadbed Swallowed Up.

Casnovia, Mich., Feb. 5.—A freak of nature that is attracting considerable notice and comment in this vicinity has occurred two miles south and two miles west of this place, on the line between Casnovia and Chester townships. About a year ago the roadbed of the highway began settling. It was first planked, and recently, in order to make it passable, about 100 logs were drawn and placed in the gap and covered with from 300 to 400 yards of dirt. Now the whole bed for about 100 feet, plank, logs and all, has completely disappeared, and at least twenty feet of water occupies the place of the original roadbed.

Marines Died of Black Diphtheria.

Three Rivers, Mich., Feb. 5.—Several months ago J. B. Shoemaker, a brother of Mrs. Clark Reed, of this city, enlisted in the United States marine service, and was assigned to the United States receiving ship Franklin. Mrs. Reed has just received a letter from her brother, in which he says that the black diphtheria had been raging on the vessel, and that out of sixty-seven boys from the vessel who were taken to the hospital ship, all but five had died, he being one of the five survivors.

New Railroad Co. Organized.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 5.—Articles of association were filed Wednesday by the Michigan Shore & Eastern Railway Co., under the general railroad law, with $1,000,000 capital. The line in Michigan runs from Bertrand township, Berrien county, on the Indiana state line to Kalamazoo, and it is the purpose of the new company to absorb the Benton Harbor, Coloma & Paw Paw Lake tram railway and the South Haven & Eastern.

Child Drank Boiling Water.

Lapeer, Mich., Feb. 5.—The 4-year-old child of Alan Van Wagoner caught hold of a tea kettle of boiling water, placed the spout in its mouth and drank some of the contents. The child's mouth, throat and stomach are horribly scalded by water and steam. Little hope is felt for the child's re-

Something that will do You Good

We know of no way in which we can be of more service to our readers than to tell them of something that will be of real good to them. For this reason we want to acquaint them with what we consider one of the very best remedies on the market for coughs, colds, and that alarming complaint, croup. We refer to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. We have used it with such good results in our family so long that it has become a household necessity. By its prompt use we havn't any doubt but that it has time and again prevented croup. The testimony is given upon our own experience, and we suggest that our readers, especially those who have small children, always keep it in their home as a safeguard against croup.—Camden (S. C.) ICE IN YOUR RIVERS

Ice Congests and Stops Commerce—So Uric Acid Makes Rheumatic Pains.

Imagine how your bones would feel if they were bumped and buffeted by a river of floating ice. If you have Rheumatism you know the twinges and spasms of pain in your body.

Uric acid is the cause of it—it floats in your blood like ice in a river, clogging and poisoning your entire system. You cannot be freed from Rheumatism until you dispel the Uric Acid. Athlophoros will dissolve it, and you will note immediate lessening of pain.

Your entire system will feel better, and if you have had kidney trouble or any organic difficulty you will note a marked improvement at once—one bottle will prove if it is helping you, and you will find the dollar to be your best investment if Athlophoros works on you as it does on others. If your druggist doesn't keep it send $1 to The Athlophoros Co., New Haven, Conn. If your case is peculiar, write us about it.

DECLINES HONOR

Roosevelt Will Not Act as Arbiter for the Powers.

HAGUE TRIBUNAL TO DECIDE

Whether Three Allies Shall Be Accorded Preferential Treatment—Bowen Will Sign Protocols at Once—Blockade Will Be Raised.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 7.—President Roosevelt has declined the invitation of the allied powers to arbitrate the question as to whether they shall receive preferential treatment in the settlement of their claims against Venezuela over the other creditor nations. He reached this decision shortly before 4 o'clock Friday afternoon and instructed Secretary Hay to dispatch a note to the British embassy at once, advising the British ambassador to that effect. The matter therefore now will be referred to The Hague tribunal.

This will result in the immediate raising of the blockade. The administration, it is stated in an official quarter, was unwilling to approve the effort of the British government to eliminate Minister Bowen from the negotiations, and moreover the president could not have accepted the invitation of the allies even had he been so disposed, without the consent of the other negotiator, Minister Bowen, and this the allies did not obtain or request in their note of invitation to the president.

Today's preliminaries will be with reference to the signing of the protocol, referring matters to The Hague for arbitration.

In these protocols the conditions precedent to the raising of the blockade will be clearly stated, namely that 30 per cent of the custom receipts of the ports of La Guaira and Porto Cabello are to be set aside by Venezuela for the satisfaction of her creditors and that the question as to whether the allied powers shall receive preferential treatment, or as Great Britain terms it, "separate" treatment, in the settlement shall be referred to The Hague. These protocols also will provide that Venezuela shall pay down to each of the three allied powers £5,500 as an initial cash payment.

Having arranged for the signature of these first protocols, the negotiators will take up the second protocols, which are to cover the manner of adjudicating the claims of the various creditor powers and the means of administration of the customs receipts.

It developed last night that two protocols are to be signed by Mr. Bowen with the Italian ambassador, Signor Mayor des Planches, two with the British ambassador and two with the German minister, Baron Spec von Sternburg. The first protocol in each case will provide for the reference of allies' contention for preferential treatment to The Hague and the raising of the blockade simultaneously with the signing of this convention.

In administration and diplomatic circles, the reference to The Hague is regarded as a victory for Mr. Bowen, as Venezuela thereby is enabled to recover from the stressing effect of the blockade before starting upon the payment of her debts. The finding of The Hague tribunal may not be handed down for some months.

Letter Thief Confessed.

Toledo, O., Feb. 7.—Postoffice Inspectors Moore of Toledo and Burr of Fort Wayne, Ind., yesterday cleared the mystery surrounding the theft of letters in this city during the last few weeks, by arresting and securing a confession from John J. Everett of this city. Everett was a hanger-on at the Union depot, where he committed the theft. The inspectors traced the crime to him by comparing his handwriting with that on an envelope which had been forwarded to Adrian, Mich., enclosing a letter that he had opened.

Turkey Prepares For War.

Constantinople, Feb. 7.—The Turkish government has notified the [illegible] Massodich Steamship company to send in a return of the number of steamers available for use as transports, in view of the possible dispatch of considerable bodies of troops from Anatolia, Asiatic Turkey, to the European provinces of Turkey in connection with the Macedonian revolutionary movement.

Missionaries Left Jan. 12.

Washington, Feb. 7.—In a report to the state department in regard to the tribal war in Morocco, S. R. Gummer, United States consul-general at Tangier, says that Sir Arthur Nicolson, the British minister, has informed him that the American missionaries left Fez with a large caravan on Jan. 12, Sir Arthur having advanced money for their expenses.

Farmer Alleged a Counterfeiter.

Canton, O., Feb. 7.—Nathaniel Miller, a farmer 62 years old, was arrested by federal officials yesterday and taken to Cleveland, charged with counterfeiting silver coins. A counterfeiting outfit was found in a small building on his farm north of this city. Miller denies knowledge of the use of the building. The arrest is considered important.

Killed by a Rolling Log.

Traverse City, Mich., Feb. 7.—Will Bowerman was so badly hurt while loading logs on cars at Summit City Friday that he died in two hours. A log slipped, rolling completely over him. He was 24 years of age and unmarried.

Lad Drowned in Loon Lake.

Milford, Mich., Feb. 7.—Henry Schallkey, aged 16, was drowned in Loon lake, two miles north of Wixom Wednesday. It is supposed he broke through where the ice had recently been cut.

Both Hoped.

"Well, may I hope, then, dearest, that at some time I may have the happiness of making you my wife?"

"Yes, I hope so, I am sure," she replied. "I am tired of suing fellows for breach of promise."

COMMITS SUICIDE

Noted Colombia Revolutionary General, Uribe Uribe.

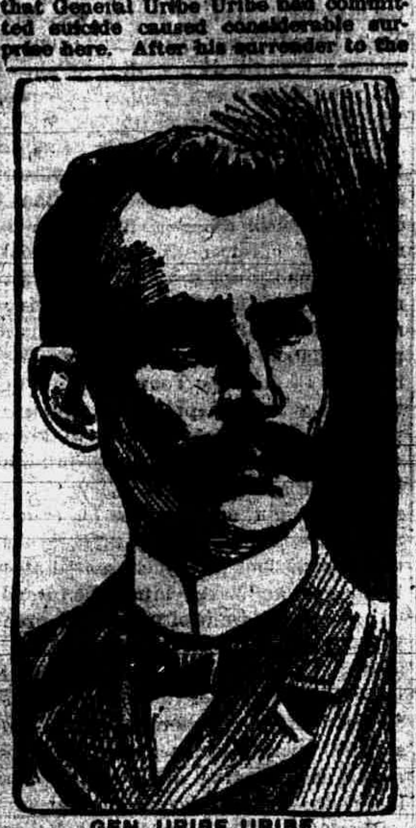
REVOLUTION AGAIN POSSIBLE

In Opposition to Canal Treaty—Uribe's Self-Destruction Shocks Washington Officials—Much Concern Over Possibility of Another Revolution.

Kingston, Jamaica, Feb. 9.—The British steamer Para, which arrived here Sunday from Colon, brings the news of the suicide on Jan. 27 of the former Colombian revolutionary general, Uribe Uribe. General Uribe Uribe published a letter Dec. 12 advising Colombia to await the lapsing of the Panama canal concession in 1904, which would leave the Colombian government a free hand in the matter of the canal.

The reports brought by the Para indicate the possibility of another revolution in opposition to the Panama canal treaty.

Washington, Feb. 9.—The report that General Uribe Uribe had committed suicide caused considerable surprise here. After his surrender to the Colombian authorities he performed valuable services for the Colombian government, inducing various guerilla chieftains to desist in their opposition to the government and to surrender. Subsequently he went to Bogota and was cordially received. He is less than 40 years of age, was brilliant fighter and was a thorn in the side of Colombia.



GEN. URIBE URIBE,
Noted Colombian Revolutionist Leader, Who Committed Suicide.

Colombian officials here also are surprised and grieved at reports of a threatened revolution in Colombia. Dr. Herran, the charge d'affaires of Colombia in Washington, says he can conceive of no reason why there should be a revolutionary movement. He said he cannot realize how it can be on account of the Panama canal negotiations, as the treaty providing for the construction of that waterway has not been ratified by the American senate, much less by the Colombian congress, which has not yet been elected.

Died on His Way Home.

San Francisco, Feb. 9.—Rear Admiral Frank Wildes of the United States navy died suddenly on board the steamer China Friday morning. He was on his way home from China on sick leave when death overtook him. Admiral Wildes had recently been in charge of the fleet in Philippine waters, his services on the station dating from June, 1902. From the first the trying climate seemed to be too much for the officer, under the strain of the continued heat and excessive humidity he constantly lost strength until finally the naval board of survey stepped in and the admiral was condemned as physically unfit for duty and ordered home to recuperate.

Race Riot—Two Negroes Killed.

Macon, Ga., Feb. 9.—The Telegraph's special from Waycross, Ga., says: A race riot occurred at McDonald, in Coffee county, Sunday between two white men on one side and a crowd of negroes on the other, the result being two negroes killed, one mortally wounded and eight others badly wounded, among them three women.

Policeman Kills Comrade.

Bristol, Tenn., Feb. 9.—Policeman Grat Walk shot and instantly killed Policeman Houston Childress of the Bristol, Tenn., police force here Sunday. The shooting resulted from a quarrel. Walk escaped. He was traced to his room, where he had changed his uniform for citizen's clothes.

Coal Famine Danger Past.

Reading, Pa., Feb. 9.—The officials of the Reading railway announce that they have the coal situation so well in hand that all danger from a further fuel famine for this winter is over. During the past week the company brought down 275,000 tons, which is a little more than the weekly average since Jan. 1.

Was a Prominent Editor.

Springfield, O., Feb. 9.—C. M. Nichols, former editor of the Daily Republic, and secretary of the board of trade, died here Sunday at the age of 74 years. He was born in Westfield, N. Y., and has been engaged in newspaper work in this city for almost half a century.

Lightning and Rain.

It is popularly supposed that the sudden downpour which usually follows a bright flash of lightning is in some way caused by the flash. Meteorologists have proved that this is not the case and that, exactly to the contrary, it is not only possible but highly probable that the sudden increased precipitation is the real cause of the flash.

Putting on the Price.

A London woman well known in society opened a curiosity shop. One day a friend came in and left an umbrella which had cost 50 shillings. He returned to find the handle of it in the window labeled "Antique Venetian silver umbrella mounting, 10 guineas."

INDIANS EVICTED

Society Claims Terrible Injustice Done a Little Band.

LAW ROBBED THEM OF HOMES

Cabins Burned and They Were Forced Out Into the Cold—Relief Can Only Come Through Legislature—People Asked to Help.

Hartford, Mich., Feb. 7.—Mrs. Sarah Webb Engle, president for Michigan of the Woman's National Indian association, Friday issued an address, calling attention to an apparent injustice done a little band of Cheboygan Indians. In part she says:

"To the Citizens of the State of Michigan:

"I wish to call your attention to the unfortunate condition of a band of Cheboygan Indians who for over fifty years lived upon a tract of 611 acres of land on the shore of Burt lake, Cheboygan county, Michigan. They purchased this land of the government at $1 25 per acre, and upon the advice of prominent citizens of that vicinity placed the title in the name of the governor of the state in trust for them.

"They lived upon this land as a common reservation, each family tilling as much as it desired and building its own cabin. A government teacher collected venison, furs, potatoes and whatever he could get, under the pretense that he was paying their taxes. After several years he left them and no one came to collect taxes in his stead. They learned later that he never paid taxes for them. From this time on they paid no taxes, believing they were holding their land as a reservation exempt from state taxes.

"About four years ago, by some means their land was assessed, and as they did not pay their taxes it was sold. After legal notice they were evicted on a cold November day, and their cabins, in which they had lived for two generations, were burned down.

"They were obliged to seek shelter from the approaching winter wherever they could; some in cotton tents, some in tar paper cabins rudely constructed, and some in deserted logging camps, where old women and little children suffered with cold and starvation during the long winter.

"Appeals for justice have brought among others some designing scoundrels, who have collected money to defray expenses of legal service, and then they have disappeared as mysteriously as they came.

"The real friends of the Indians, who have undertaken to do something for these unfortunate people, find that the only means of relief is through legislation.

"In view of our past record for fair dealing and justice to the red men, can the citizens of Michigan afford to allow this great injustice now to stand against these unfortunate children of the commonwealth? Will it not cost much more to support a race of paupers than to place in their hands the means of a livelihood and education that will insure good citizenship, means that were theirs by right of ownership, and which have been taken from them by a statute never intended for such people.

"Will you not interest yourself personally in behalf of this unfortunate band?"

Junior Hop a Swell Affair.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Feb. 7.—Six hundred dancers participated in the annual junior hop last night at the University of Michigan gymnasium, university men and brilliantly gowned young ladies. The hop was the most gorgeous ever held at Michigan. From 9 o'clock until long after Saturday morning came the merry round of music and gaiety lasted. Electric bulbs, softly shaded by colored bunting, big arcs high up under the canopied ceiling, and vari-colored calcium lights, all shed a mellow glow over the scene until the whole hop seemed like a bit out of fairyland. Mr. James R. Offield (Phi Kappa Psi), chairman of the reception committee, led the grand march with Miss Grace Hyde of Chicago. Promptly on the hour the march started and took the time-honored form of the block "M."

Safe Blowers Get $380.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Feb. 7.—Safeblowers obtained $380 from the office of North & Coon, wholesale lumber dealers, early Friday morning. An entrance was effected through a rear door with tools obtained from a workshop. The outer door of the vault was blown open. Then followed a similar operation on the safe. Nitroglycerine was used.

Burned to Death.

Bessemer, Mich., Feb. 7.—Jean Marconi and Louis Turcott kept bachelor's house in a dwelling on the shore of Sunday lake, a half mile from Wakefield. They went home from town at midnight, intoxicated, made a fire in the stove and slept in one bed. At 1 a. m. the house was in flames. Marconi slept sound and was burned to death. Turcott managed to get out.

Washington, Feb. 7.—Michigan postmasters were appointed Friday as follows: Richie, Alcona county, E. H. Barber, vice R. T. Hastings, resigned; Rose City, Ogemaw county, Mrs. Mary Buck, vice Charles E. Buck, resigned. Rural free delivery service has been ordered established at Gera, Saginaw county, March 2, with one carrier.

Lansing Youth Missing.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 7.—Charles Moses, aged 16 years, left the Adventist church at the close of service Sunday evening and has not since been seen. His parents believe he has gone out into the cold world to make his fortune.

A Sense of Certainty.

"Is you sho' he loves you?" asked Miss Miami Brown.

"Is I sho'!" rejoined the other pityingly. "Is I sho'! Didn't he refuse a invitation to a dog fight so's he could come a-courtin' las' Wednesday night?" —Washington Star.

Legislative Junketers Return to Lansing and Detroit.

THE PRIMARY SCHOOL FUND

Senator Smith Predicts There Will Be No Change in It—Kerr Reviews the Possibilities of the North—Beet Men Are Encouraged.

Chicago, Feb. 9.—Members of the Michigan legislative party who did not get away on Saturday's trains left for Detroit by the Michigan Central Sunday evening, some of the legislators going direct to Lansing via Jackson, others going to Detroit.

Angus W. Kerr, the newly appointed member of the tax commission, will attend the election of officers of the commission at Lansing today. President Freeman's re-election to the chair seems to be assured.

Governor Bliss, in his biennial message, recommended that a part of the primary school fund, which was growing to such large proportions, be applied on the general expense of the state. Professor Scribner, head of the public schools at Ishpeming, expressed the opinion at the legislative banquet Friday evening that the governor was on the wrong track. Senator Smith of South Lake Linden said in an interview: "I don't think we will change the primary fund arrangement this time."

Senator Moriarty of Crystal Falls has been asked to introduce a bill to bond his township for $50,000 for a new schoolhouse. The senator is also going to look into the taxing of mineral rights reserved by land owners, who dispose of their property by lease. If the mineral rights are worth reserving, he says, the state ought to receive some value for the reservation.

Since the departure of the junketers from Detroit, a week ago, their time has been well taken up with inspections of the several institutions and the hospitality extended them by the northerners.

Relative to the northern peninsula tax commission Kerr said:

"The future of the country depends on its agricultural industries. The iron and the copper of our mines cannot last forever. There are thousands of acres of hardwood, maple and birch and hemlock, and the manufacture of flooring and ceiling material, butter dishes, etc., has already got a good start and will increase. The factory at Hermansville, Menominee, is now doing a good business and the Crystal Falls factory will greatly help this industry. On all these hardwood lands the soil is rich enough for grain growing or the cultivation of crops. We look to the farmer to develop these lands in the future."

Senator Moriarty of Crystal Falls says there is little grain growing so far in the upper peninsula, except a limited quantity of oats and feed for immediate home consumption. Dickinson county is still exporting cedar and spruce pulp wood.

Beet sugar men hope for much from the future. The experiments in beet growing a tthe Chatham branch farm of the Michigan Agricultural college have given them renewed courage, and in Alger, Iron and particularly Menominee counties the beet acreage is fast expanding.

The sadder side of life was seen in the asylum at Newberry, where hundreds of incapacitated human beings with deranged minds were being carefully nursed and tended by the commonwealth, perhaps back to mental health and strength. Far sadder was it though to look upon the bright, intelligent faces of the inmates of Marquette prison, where real genius, perverted, toiled doggedly and hopelessly at some punitive trade. The face of not one out of seven men confined behind those bars would stamp him as a natural criminal.

The college of mines at Houghton is the special pride of the mining men of the north. The students there are workers. Members of the faculty tell with great pleasure that every graduate is employed in his own profession, whether in Michigan or outside of the state. They want more money for equipment and they want a new metallurgical building. The Normal school at Marquette wants to add a $12,000 building to continue the completion of the original plans.

Trouble Over Owosso Bonds.

Owosso, Mich., Feb. 9.—Trouble is here in connection with the disposal of $30,000 of municipal bonds. The Citizens' Savings bank of this city was the purchaser, buying the bonds at par and giving $50 bonus. The bonds, however, are dated Feb. 2, and the money is not needed until June, so there is a loss to the city of $500, as the bonds draw interest from date. The ways and means committee of the council is censured because arrangements were not made to get accrued interest. Because of the exposure of alleged lax methods in handling the city's business, it is said several aldermen will be retired at the coming elections.

Pounded to Death.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Feb. 9.—"Toot" Harris, until recently a resident of Plainwell, Mich., met a horrible death in Kalamazoo Paper Mill No. 1 Saturday. In some way not understood he became caught in the machinery. He was drawn around a shaft and his body pounded again and again on the floor by the rapidly revolving machine. Before it could be stopped life was extinct. The body was horribly mangled.

Robbed Preacher's Home.

Adrian, Mich., Feb. 9.—While Rev. Houseman, pastor of the Emanuel church, and wife were at church Sunday morning a thief pried open the kitchen window and secured $15 in gold and other valuables belonging to Mrs. Houseman, the total loss reaching $150. Police have a clue.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

THE MYSTERY OF GRASLOV.

By Ashley Towne. . . .

THE train from Moscow came snorting and screaming into the station, and among the passengers, mostly officers and convicts or men connected with the railway, were two women. One of these was about fifty years of age, thin and subdued in appearance, and her face bore the marks of suppressed anxiety. The other was scarcely more than a girl—twenty at most—but her carriage was noble, and her entire appearance that of one born to command. Her lovely face and well shaped head rose above a collar of ermine, although it was not winter.

"To the palace of Neslerov, governor of Tomsk," she said to a drosky driver, and she and her companion were soon on the way.

Neslerov was at dinner when a servant announced the Princess Olga.

"What about the Princess Olga?" [illegible] asked.

"The princess is here—[illegible] asked to see your excellency."

"Here! [illegible] Neslerov, here!" rising from [illegible] had improved much in the [illegible] days, and his face wore a calm [illegible] that had not been [illegible] since h[illegible] Denton.

He found [illegible] princess in the reception room.

"Princess [illegible]" he [illegible] kissing her hand. "[illegible] happy circumstance [illegible] you here? And why [illegible] you [illegible] unannounced and unattended?"

"I saw [illegible] to [illegible] my approach," she [illegible] I am not unattended [illegible] servant."

The woman [illegible] looked uncomfortable [illegible] paid her not the least [illegible].

"Well, [illegible] you [illegible], I am pleased to see [illegible]" said the governor. "Your branch [illegible] Neslerov family and mine have [illegible] been too friendly. I am glad that at least one of you has had the grace to begin a reconciliation."

Princess Olga smiled.

"Whatever feeling my branch of the family may have for yours could scarcely be said to interest me," she said. "Remember, I have spent much of my time out of Russia, and—it happened twenty years ago."

Neslerov turned to the door and then stopped.

"You refer to the unfortunate mystery of Graslov," he said soberly. "It was that, I fear, that ruptured the former friendships. Yet I have insisted and proved that our family was not to blame. It was either an accident or was done by our enemies. Pardon me! I was so glad to see you that I forgot that you must be weary after your journey. Let me have you shown your rooms, and I will order dinner for you when you wish."

"Thank you. We are both hungry. I will join you in ten minutes, and Therese will be ready to go to the servants' dining room in that time."

"You have become a regular cosmopolitan," laughed Neslerov. "Your visits to America and London have almost taken away the traces of our Russian habits."

"Some of them could be well dispensed with," she answered.

In response to his summons a servant appeared and conducted the women to their rooms.

"Now, what devilish luck could have brought her here at this time?" said Neslerov to himself. "I must be cautious. But it is so long—she was not born—she can know nothing. But I must be discreet."

"Well, we are here," said the princess to her companion when they were alone. "Now, obey me; let me do the planning. Neslerov must not suspect us. It would ruin all, and there is no telling what he might do. The governor of a province in Siberia is almost supreme."

Her attendant shuddered.

"I lived in dread of Siberia for twenty years!" she said, with a shudder. "And now you have brought me here."

"But not as a convict—as a friend, a woman, like myself, resolved to right a wrong."

The princess was soon ready and joined the governor in the dining room.

"I have just been thinking, Olga," he said, his face wreathed with smiles, "that it is at least three years since we met. Your face has not changed much, but you are now a woman and were then a little girl. You are one of the most beautiful women in Russia."

"Thank you."

"And, I might say, the richest."

"Nearly so. But the wealth brings its responsibilities. It is difficult in Russia to do those things that are just and proper with our wealth."

"I never found it so," said the governor, with a laugh.

"Perhaps," said Olga, "you are not interested in the question. To me it is a burning one. Our nobles have too much wealth and our lower classes have too little opportunity to rise. It is not so in England, France or America."

"You had better leave those questions for older heads, princess. You will become involved with the government before you know. You were not born to waste your beauty and talents in such matters. You were born to be admired, to enjoy your wealth."

"I do enjoy my wealth and do what good a girl can do with it. As to being admired, I meet few from whom admiration seems to come with sincerity."

"Oh, as to that, you cannot expect to find the courtiers at beauty's court all as gruff and outspoken as a drosky driver."

"I have met some who were," she said, laughing pleasantly.

They ate slowly, chatting the while.

"You have not quenched my thirst for knowledge," said the governor. "If I were in St. Petersburg and you did me the honor to ask me to visit you, it would even then surprise me. But that you have come to Tomsk, more than half way across Siberia, to visit me is, to say the least, amazing.

The princess gave her silvery laugh again.

"You are as conceited at any other nobleman I have met. I did not come to see you. I came, first, to ride on the new railway; second, to study the conditions existing in this part of the empire, and, third, to look into this new proposition of the czar to induce peasants to settle in Siberia along the line of the railway. It is a very good idea, [illegible] the country will [illegible] settlers."

"It will cause proper help from the [illegible]" [illegible] replied Neslerov. "I am glad you came to me. We shall have a fine time making our investigations."

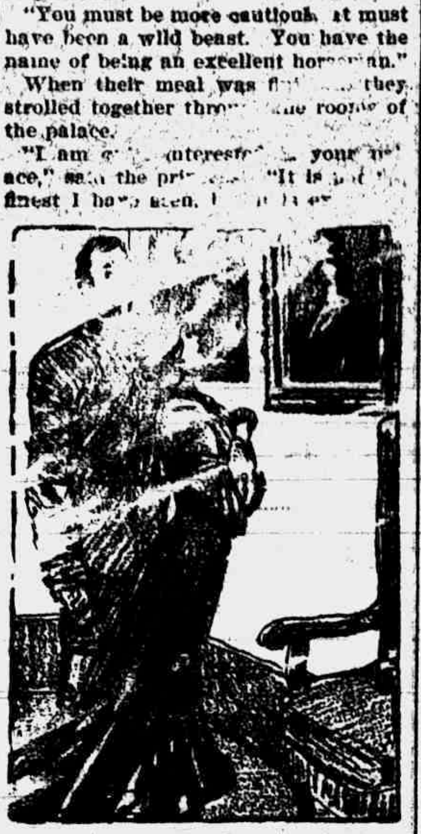
"I notice that you do not seem to have the free use of your arm," said Olga. "Have you been ill or injured?"

"A slight injury. I fell from an unruly horse."

"You must be more cautious. It must have been a wild beast. You have the name of being an excellent horseman."

When their meal was finished they strolled together through the rooms of the palace.

"I am [illegible] interested in your palace," said the princess. "It is [illegible] finest I have seen, [illegible]



"My cousin, whom I have never seen!" she exclaimed.

There are some barbarisms, but I presume you get accustomed to them—in Siberia."

"Yes, in Siberia one gets accustomed to almost anything," he answered.

She continued her inspection with interest and suddenly came to a stop before a painting. Neslerov's face became a shade paler.

"My cousin, whom I have never seen!" she exclaimed, clasping her hands and gazing raptly at the picture Vladimir had painted. "Surely, Nicholas, that must be Princess Alexandra, who married your elder brother."

"I think you are mistaken," said Neslerov. "You surely must have seen Alexandra."

"Yes, when a mere infant. It is only from other portraits that I recognise her. She was very beautiful. Oh, what a terrible sorrow to her! To lose her child, heir to a fine estate and princely title, and then lose her own life, so young, with the horrible mystery still unsolved as to whether she died of grief and a broken heart or by the hand of an enemy. Oh, that mystery of Graslov! Will it ever be solved!"

"I fear not," said Neslerov solemnly.

"I did not know you had this picture," said Olga. "It is much finer than any we have at home. It was done by a master hand."

"It was," assented Neslerov.

The painting had saddened Olga, and she passed on, making no more of her laughing criticisms.

She soon returned to her rooms, where her attendant was awaiting her. The woman's face was pale, and she seemed to be struggling with emotion. Olga stood before her, with a peculiar light in her eyes.

"Therese," she said, "an oil painting of my unfortunate cousin, Princess Alexandra, hangs in Neslerov's own room."

"What!" gasped the woman, starting up. Then, as some strange terror overcame her, she shuddered, and with the whispered cry "We are lost!" she fell to the floor unconscious.

Quaint Court Records.

Among the treasures of the Philadelphia Historical society is the complete record of the "Court Held at Upplandt in Delowar River From 1676 to 1681." This was the court conducted by the Swedes, Dutch and English previous to the granting of the state to Penn and previous to its being named Pennsylvania. The record is quaint. One entry is of "Jan Cornelissen of Amesland, complayning to ye court that his son Erik is bereft of his naturall sences and is turned quyt madd;" whereupon it was ordered that "three or 4 persons bee hired to build a little Blockhouse at Amesland for to put in the sd, madmap." In the suit of Andries Inckhooren against Constable Andries Hemman it appears from the record that:

"The Plt. complains that this Deft. hath pulled him by the Beard and twisted his neck, and desires to know ye reason."

On Oct. 16, 1680, Claes Clam winning an action for slander against Hans Peterss, the punishment meted out to Peterss was that:

"The Deft. not being able to prove what he hath said or any part thereof, the Court ordered that ye Deft. openly shall declare himself a Lyar."

"The" Hague.

Did you ever stop to ask yourself or your knowing friend the meaning of "The" in the place named The Hague? If you are looking for something that will knock the above mentioned knowing friend off his feet, just ask him the significance of the three letters quoted. When he fails to answer the question, tell him that the The as it occurs in the instance cited is simply the anglicized form of the Dutch word "S Gravenhaag" or "S Gravenhaze," either of which in the Dutch language means "the count's hedge" or "the count's grove" or "woods."

Originally the location now occupied by the city of The Hague was the hunting grounds of the counts of Holland. About the year 1240 a palace was built in the grove. Presently a village sprang up around the palace—still it was called "The Count's Hedge" and finally and lastly a large city which in the Dutch language has its original signification, but which in modern parlance has been evoluted into "The Hague."

Intelligence of the Ant.

An interesting demonstration of the intelligence of the ant was made by a student in the biological department of the University of Pennsylvania. The young man constructed a roadway two feet in length of metal and divided it into two parallel paths, separated by a high partition. One of the paths he painted red and the other blue, and at their end, in plain view, he put a morsel of rich cake, says the Philadelphia Record. Then he set an ant at the beginning of the roadway. The ant at once made for the cake over the red path, whereupon the student turned on a lamp under his mechanism and heated the path to an uncomfortable degree. The ant kept on and finally secured the cake, but on its return it must have told itself that it had had a mighty uncomfortable journey. Several hours later the student brought it out again, another morsel of cake being set at the end of the roadway. The ant thought a moment and then started for the cake over the blue path. It remembered that the red one had been hot. To prove still more conclusively that it remembered, the student next blocked up the blue path, whereupon the ant did without the cake rather than venture after it by the red one.

A Young Detective.

There is a ten-year-old boy in Boston whose mother thinks he is destined to become a noted detective. One day he was begging for permission to try his hand at mending a broken umbrella over which his father was working, and at last he was sent out of the room on an errand.

When he returned, his father and mother were talking, and the umbrella had vanished.

"I know where you've put it," he said after a glance around the room. "You've put it in that closet, and"—

"Well, where else should I put it?" demanded the father impatiently. But the mother waited for her boy to finish.

"I know it's there," he said triumphantly, "because whenever you open the closet door that photograph on the end of the bookshelf falls down, and it's down now. And I know it was father put it in, for mother would have stood the picture up again."—Youth's Companion.

Well Pleased.

"I say, Bobby," whispered Fitzgorgeous, "was your sister pleased to learn that I had called upon her?"

"Yes, indeed she was," replied Bobby. "When mother told her that you had called while she was out, she said, 'Thank heaven!'"

ROUND ABOUT US.

Reuben Marshall, one of Hudson's oldest and most highly respected citizens, passed away Wednesday evening after an illness of Brights disease. Deceased was 75 years old.

Ypsilanti has received quite a scare from smallpox. A mail clerk on the Michigan Central railroad died from the disease and another clerk is quarantined at his home in that city. He was summoned from the Whist Club meeting last Wednesday night by the health officer, all who were present at the club meeting have been vaccinated and every precaution is being taken against the disease.

The Ardmoreite is authority for the statement that a woman in Ardmore, I. T., recently gave birth to what the physicians call a regular monstrosity. The physican who attended the woman has a picture which he says, is a facsimile of the child. From the neck down the child is perfect, and the head resembles a toad, says the Kansas City Journal. The eyes stick out and the head had all the others formations to make it resemble a toad.

Brief mention was made last week of the suicide, by hanging, of the Rev. Richard Osborn, at his farm home, about a mile and a half southwest of Hillsdale. Missing her husband, Mrs. Osborn went to the barn and found him suspended by a rope which he had fastened to one of the rafters. His feet were within a few inches of the floor. His neck was not broken and death was a result of strangulation. Mr. Osborn was 82 years of age, and had preached for about fifty years, having been a member of the Christian church since boyhood. He had enjoyed excellent health, and suicide is attributed to an attack of insanity.

MEMOIRS

Of Mrs. Cardiac, a Well Known

SOCIETY LADY

Of the City.

(Being extracts from her diary, 1902-'03.)

SUNDAY—Made John go to the postoffice this morning, although he was much opposed to being routed out. But I told him I simply must have my mail. He brought me five more invitations to card-parties, so that now I have every day and evening this week full. Heard a lovely sermon on "Gambling" by our dear pastor.

MONDAY—Am just tired out. Played progressive whist all the morning at Mrs. Fitz-Jubel's and won second prize—a box of cigars. Mrs. Fitz always has such unique prizes. The first prize was a Bible, but we have a Bible. John is smoking one of the cigars now. He says that he doesn't wonder that Mrs. Fitz-Jubel was glad to get them out of the house. Went from Mrs. Fitz's to Mrs. Doodle's and played progressive cinch until six. Mrs. Doodle actually played, herself, as hard as anybody, and won her own first prize! The old cat! To-night John and I go to the Morrices'.

TUESDAY—Am just tired out. Played progressive euchre until one this morning. Would have won at least second prize if that horrid little Mrs. Stown had not cheated—the most brazen performance I ever witnessed. Such people ought not to be allowed in decent society. Came home cross and disgusted. John won first prize for gentlemen—a red tie—and was so delighted over it that I told him unless he could curb his gambling fever he had better stay away from cards. This morning from ten to twelve I am to be at Mrs. Jones' (progressive cinch), this afternoon at Mrs. Snobbe's (razzle-dazzle, I think), and this evening we are invited to the Hoppleskins' for bridge.

WEDNESDAY—Am just tired out. Mrs. Whoop acted disgracefully toward me at the Joneses' house. She accused me of cheating,—not in so many words, but in manner unmistakable—and was as mad as could be because she did not get a prize. Just as though I was to blame! The first prize was ten hairpins and I offered to give it to her, which rather took her aback. Anyway, I didn't cheat any more than the rest of them. At Mrs. Snobbe's one of the guests, Mrs. Punk, got so mad at her partner over a mistake in playing that she scattered the cards all over the floor. Why will people become so wildly in earnest over a social hand of cards? John did not go with me to the Hoppleskins.' Instead, he went to the club, where I am positive he played poker! I lectured him well, although he was in bed when I got home.

THURSDAY—Am just worn out. Played a new game called "seven-'leven" all yesterday morning at Miss Prude's. The weather was magnificent—clear and brisk—and I much enjoyed my walk of across the street. We played until after two; the curtains were down, and the gas lighted, so that we were very cosy. For the rest of the afternoon I had intended to hear a lecture by Dr. Bigg, before the Woman's Club, upon "The Value of Exercise and Fresh Air," a subject in which I am much interested, but I had been invited to Mrs. Popinjay's; progressive casino. Won a miserable little prize of painted china—and yet Mrs. Popinjay is rich! In the evening was treated very rudely at the Smith's by the Rev. Brummell because I made a wrong play. And he is the man who preached last Sunday on "Gambling"!

FRIDAY—Am tired to death. It was cinch at an ante-breakfast party this morning, 6 to ten; cinch from ten to two at Miss Hews'; cinch from two to six at Mrs. van Coming's; and to-night we are invited to Mr. and Mrs. Wiggle's for high five. The joke of it was that Miss Hews had no prizes, and none of us knew it until we got all through. I tell you, but it was an indignant crowd! The thing was a regular imposition!

SATURDAY—Torn to tatters. Caught Mrs. Truth cheating at bridge yesterday morning, and flatly told her that I did not consider her a fit person to teach my children at Sunday-school. Besides, had it not been for her unfairness I would have got that shaving-mug. However, "cheating never prospers," and she didn't get it either. Was insulted by old Mrs. Tony, who told me to my face that I kept count wrong on purpose! The idea! I'd like to know what she was doing not five minutes before. Played hard the whole afternoon and got only a box of candy. John refused to go to the Buggsbys' in the evening, but finally consented after I had cried and asked him if he intended to make a hermit of me. Had great luck and won a paper-cutter.

SUNDAY—Am just tired out. Shall not go to church today. John has gone for the mail. Yesterday I was at a sunrise euchre party given by Mrs. Riche, at a morning affair of progressive pedro at Mrs. Poor's and at two gatherings in the afternoon—cinch from one to three, and whist from three to six. I brought home one first prize and one consolation prize. We all cheated. In the evening our card club met here, and as we did not finish by midnight we set the clock back two hours. It was my turn to furnish the prizes, of course, and I offered some inexpensive little trinkets that I had on hand. Really, prizes ought to be only a matter of form; one should play merely for the social relaxation.

LITERARY NOTES

SCRIBNER.

Another of the great features which are to distinguish Scribner's Magazine during the current year begins in the February number. "The Presidential Office" by James Ford Rhodes, is the opening article in the series by various authors on The Government of the United States. It is the aim of these papers to show our Government actually in operation; reverting to the past sufficiently to trace the development of of power and responsibility in each department; discussing the present in order to show the machinery of Government as it now works; and looking to the future with its great problems in view, all pressing for solution. Mr. Rhodes, the well-known historian, has had extraordinary opportunities to acquire a knowledge of the manner in which Presidents do their work, and in this article he passes acute comments, but upon Lincoln, Cleveland, McKinley and Roosevelt. His paper is a study of the office, and, in addition, of the impression made upon the office by the personality of the great men who have held it.

LIPPINCOTT.

The prominent feature in Lippincott's Magazine is always a complete novel. That contained in the February number is by Alice Duer Miller, entitled "A Man of His Word." Mrs. Miller, by the way, belongs to a popular New York story-writing family. Both her mother and sister are well-liked contributors to the leading magazines. The motive in "A Man of His Word" is the moral obligation of a member of the Four Hundred to marry a young school-teacher because her mother had saved his life at the expense of her own. Before her death she whispers to her debtor, "Marry my daughter." On this foundation the author has built a tale of compelling interest and infinite diversion.

THE CRITIC.

Although not entirely confined to literary topics, the February issue of The Critic is somewhat more than usually representative of the world of letters. With the exception of Mr. Albert Sterner's appealing pastel of Miss Julia Marlowe, which is especially reproduced in colors, most of the illustrations, as well as the chief articles, touch upon current phases of matters literary. The initial paper is a half-humorous, half-serious contribution from a clever but anonymous author who, in his "Letters to a Literary Aspirant," satirizes the various novels at present affected by the public, the historical novel and the kailyard novel coming in for some delightful parody. It is fondly to be hoped that the writer's second installment may prove as diverting as has the first.

PROFIT

The matter of feed is of tremendous importance to the farmer. Wrong feeding is loss. Right feeding is profit.

The up-to-date farmer knows what to feed his cows to get the most milk, his pigs to get the most pork, his hens to get the most eggs. Science.

But how about the children? Are they fed according to science, a bone food if bones are soft and undeveloped, a flesh and muscle food if they are thin and weak and a blood food if there is anemia?

Scott's Emulsion is a mixed food; the Cod Liver Oil in it makes flesh, blood and muscle, the Lime and Soda make bone and brain. It is the standard scientific food for delicate children.

THE DESIGNER.

Spring's coming is anticipated in The Designer for March, in which toilettes and millinery appropriate for this most beautiful season of the year are becomingly set forth in dainty colors as well as in black and white. Of great practical value are the "Lessons in Millinery," and "Points on Dressmaking," and scarcely less so are "Helps Along the Way," "Etiquette Hints," "In Motherland," "Toilet Table Chat," and "The Kitchen Kingdom." The short stories of this month are "Sisters," by Sarah Norcliff Cleghorn, and "Daisy Welling's Enterprise," by Laura J. Rittenhouse.

REVIEW OF REVIEWS.

The far-reaching reforms in the Irish land system which are to be announced within a month by the British government, and which are only imperfectly understood as yet in England, are authoritatively described in the Review of Reviews for February by Mr. Walter Wellman, the newspaper correspondent, who has recently returned from Ireland, where he made a thorough investigation of the whole subject, and had personal interviews with all the higher officials and government representatives entrusted with the task of emancipating the Emerald Isle from the thralldom of centuries.

MR. AND MRS. B. A. GARLINGHOUSE

From

JACKSON, MICHIGAN,

Arrive at Tecumseh Saturday and Visit B. J. Garlinghouse and Family.

Last Wednesday, February 4, Burt Garlinghouse was married up at Greenville, Mich., and his friends in Tecumseh felt very much hurt that they received no invitations to the wedding and that they did not even know that the time had at last arrived when Burt had any idea of getting married. So that when the time came that Burt came to Tecumseh on Saturday last, the boys met him at the train and showered a little rice and fired a few cannon crackers just to let the people know that Burt had actually come to town and that, no matter how much married he actually was, he could be the same Burt Garlinghouse as of old. With all the row of Saturday afternoon Burt's good nature stayed with him and both Mr. and Mrs. B. A. seem to be pleased with their visit in Tecumseh, Burt's old town.

"The Liberty Belles."

Harry B. Smith's new musical comedy, "The Liberty Belles," which will be presented by a company of well known artists and under the management of Frank Hennessy, will be at the New Bradley Friday evening, Feb. 13. The principals of the company are Gertrude Millington, Maybelle Adams, Percy Leac, Harry Stuart, Rita Knight, Marie Twohey, Harry C. Lyons, Ethel Dean and others. Mr. Smith's new comedy is entirely humorous, and is presented in a prologue and two acts. The scenes represent a dormitory in a young ladies' seminary, the cooking school of "The Liberty Belles," and a hotel in an orange grove in Florida. During the presentation of the piece a great variety of musical numbers will be rendered, written expressly for this production by such well known composers as Aime Lachaume, Reginald DeKoven, Clifton Crawford, L. G. Gottschalk, H. T. McConnell, Alfred E. Aarons and William Accode. The prologue serves to introduce the characters, and leads up to the [illegible] adventures of "The Liberty Belles" that follow.

Special Train.

On Friday, Feb. 13, the management of the New Bradley opera house will run a special train from Manchester and Clinton on account of the "Liberty Belles" comic opera. REBEKAHS

Entertained Friday Evening

AT ADRIAN.

Forty Went Over. A Jolly Time Reported.

Last Friday night about forty members of Tecumseh Rebekah Lodge No. 338 responded to an invitation from the Adrian chapter for the evening. A portion left on the 6:50, but owing to a misunderstanding on the part of Detroit Southern employes, the car in which the lodge people was to be carried over, was left on the siding here and fourteen "Beckies" left also. After much telegraphing and 'phoning, an engine was coupled onto this lone car and this delegation rode into Adrian in state. They were met at the hall with laughter and jeers and then the work proceeded.

The Adrian degree staff initiated Miss Nora Luce and John Anderson in the order with their beautiful ceremonies and Dr. G. O. Wright, Miss Elva Kingsbury and Miss Bessie Brandy gave readings. Short speeches were made by Noble Grand Gray, Vice Grand Gillespie, F. A. McNeil and C. M. Ayers, of the Tecumseh order.

All were then invited to the dining room where a most elegant supper was served. Afterward dancing and a long social hour was indulged in, renewing old acquaintances and making many new ones. At 1 o'clock the Tecumsehites bade "Good night," thanking the hosts and hostesses for a most enjoyable evening and having nothing but praises for the beautiful manner in which their staff gives the work, their beautiful home and the kindly manner in which they entertain their guests.

We heard a man say the other morning that the abbreviation for February—Feb.—means Freeze every body, and that man looked frozen in his ulster. It was apparent that he needed the kind of warmth that stays, the warmth that reaches from head to foot, all over the body. We could have told him from personal knowledge that Hood's Sarsaparilla gives permanent warmth, it invigorates the blood and speeds it along through artery and vein, and really fits men and women, boys and girls, to enjoy cold weather and resist the attacks of disease. It gives the right kind of warmth, stimulates and strengthens at the same time, and all its benefits are lasting. There may be a suggestion in this for you.

Tragedy Averted.

"Just in the nick of time our little boy was saved," writes Mrs. W. Watkins of Pleasant City, Ohio. Pneumonia had played sad havoc with him and a terrible cough set in besides. Pains in the Back
Are symptoms of a weak, torpid or stagnant condition of the kidneys or liver, and are a warning it is extremely hazardous to neglect, so important is a healthy action of these organs.
They are commonly attended by loss of energy, lack of courage, and sometimes by gloomy foreboding and despondency.
"I had pains in my back, could not sleep and when I got up in the morning felt worse than the night before. I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and now I can sleep and get up feeling rested and able to do my work. I attribute my cure entirely to Hood's Sarsaparilla." MRS. J. N. PERRY, care H. S. ROUND ABOUT US.

Elmer Edgar, who lives on a farm between Adrian and Lyons, found the frozen remains of a Swede by name of John Roucht, Saturday evening in his woods. The coroner pronounced it a case of suicide. There was $16.25 found on his person.

Imogene Letcher, the three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs H. R. Letcher, of Hudson, comes about as near being a musical prodigy as possible. She has upward of forty songs memorized and all are the latest and most popular songs. She is the star attraction of all Hudson's social gatherings.

A fire in Jackson last Sunday destroyed the Cheap Store of M. Batt and damaged the stocks of several other stores in the block, including Snow's shoe store and the Malnight skirt factory. Mr. Batt's loss is estimated at $7,000 partly covered by insurance. Loss to the block is estimated at $3,000, insured. The other losses will mount into the thousands.

Walter Rider deceased late of Ann Arbor, leaves an estate of $6,000. He gives and bequeaths to the Christian charities as follows: In Detroit, Mc Gregor Mission, $150; Free Kindergarten $150; Children's Free hospital $100; Newsboys' Home $100; (interest to be used for the next hundred years, then only). If institutions should cease during this time the money should be used for other charitable institutions like the poor commission etc., as officers may decide. He did not say what was to be done with the principal at the end of the 100 years.

Monday afternoon one of the squirrels belonging to the city broke out of the cage in the rear of the station house and escaped, and while several people were trying to capture it, the animal ran down the alley toward Front street and climbed a tree where it was discovered by Lawrence Grassley, foreman of the Record Publishing Co., who immediately procured a gun and shot it. He was arrested for violation of the state game law, on complaint of the city, and taken before Justice Mathews, who assessed him $10 and costs amounting in all to $13.25, which he paid. It is hoped that this will be sufficient warning to others to let the squirrels alone when they are placed in the parks in the spring.—Monroe Democrat.

Humane Agent Ware and Patrolman Oberle took Grace Chio, aged 14, from 1818 Canton avenue yesterday, and sent her to the police station for safe keeping. It was claimed that the girl's environment was anything but what a girl of that tender age should have, and that she had been living a vicious life. The girl's father, William Chio, shot and killed his wife and committed suicide in Adrian, Mich., about three weeks ago, and shortly after that she came here to live with her sister, Mrs. Charles Steinmiller, of 918 Madison avenue. She left there a few days ago and has since been staying at the house on Canton avenue. This morning her uncle, Charles Steinmiller, appeared at police headquarters and arranged to take charge of the girl. She has a small amount of insurance money coming to her, and this morning Mr. Steinmiller was appointed her guardian and will attempt to look after her welfare.—Toledo Blade.

He has had the experience,
He has thoroughly tested the article,
He found it as represented,
He has absolute faith in its merit.

Mr. Chas. Bartholomew, proprietor of the bicycle repair shop in the southeastern section of Tecumseh, says: "Some eighteen years ago the doctors said I had diabetes and that I could not live. I got better but I have been troubled ever since with the kidney secretions, particularly retention of the same which caused me considerable anxiety. I tried all kinds of medicines said to be good for kidney trouble but the annoyance still remained. Finally my attention was called to Doan's Kidney Pills and I got them at C. A. Wright's drug store. They are splendid. They gave me more relief and acted quicker than any remedy I ever used. From my experience I can say they are a valuable remedy and I consistently recommend them."

For sale by all dealers: Price 50 cents per box, Foster-Milburn company, Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

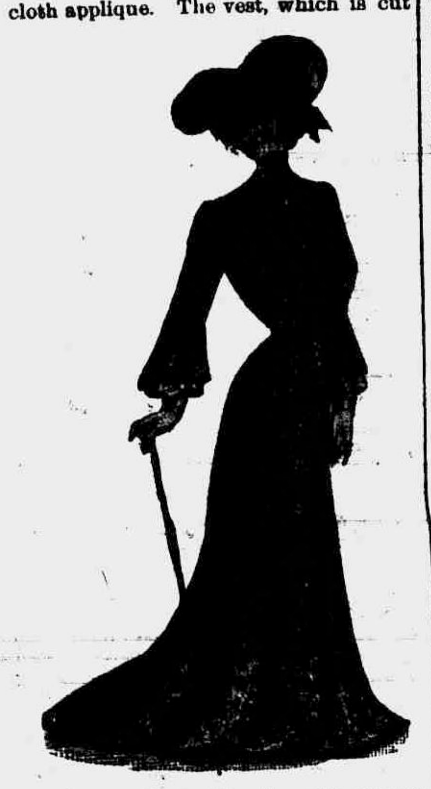
LATEST FASHION NOTES.

A Charming Street Costume.

A charming street costume of tan and brown mixed suiting is here depicted. The jacket and skirt are cut in sections, each section piped with brown velvet and handsomely trimmed with ecru cloth applique. The vest, which is cut with a standing collar, is made of pale biscuit embroidered cloth, and is edged with brown, blue and black gallon. A wide velvet girdle comes around the waist. Particular attention is called to the sleeve which forms a wide flare over a puff of biscuit peau de soie. All machine stitchings must be carefully done, and for this purpose Corticelli stitching silk is usually employed.



No material lasts longer and looks better than a good covert cloth, and for an extra garment to be worn with any kind of a walking costume, there is no more sensible purchase. Very mannish and smart is a three-quarter length coat of this material made with a loose back, fly front, velvet collar and a lining to the waist of satin serge in the next shade darker.

Bet on a Sure Thing.

A broker, telling stories of men in Wall street, said: "Some years ago Jakey Field won pocket money for a week on a fly. He took a fly which had been captured by a piece of sticky paper and transferred it to the ceiling of his office. The fly could not have moved without tearing off its legs. Field leaned back in his chair and watched it. Some one came in and found him gazing upward.

"'Saying your prayers, Field?' asked the visitor.

"'Watching that fly,' he answered. 'It hasn't moved for five minutes.' Then after a moment's silence, 'Say, I'll bet you five that fly doesn't move for three minutes.'

"He won the bet and kept on winning others until some one discovered the trick and posted a sign outside the office door which read, 'Don't bet on the fly.'"—New York Tribune.

Effect of a Tropical Climate.

"The laziest fellers I ever see, not barrin' Thompson there even," said the man with the ginger beard, "was down in Central America. Tell you what I see once. I wandered into a little saloon that one of the greasers kep', and what should I see but a lot of fellers settin' round a table with a lot of dice on it and all of 'em watchin' them dice as if they s'pected them to turn over of theirselves, which, sure enough, they did in a minute. Then I got on to their game. You see, about every three or four minutes they is a earthquake in that country, and them lazy halfbreeds was lettin' the earthquake do the shakin' of the box for 'em. Now, what do you think of that?"

Another Method.

A well known doctor tells of a visit to an old colored man who was convalescing from a severe illness. After expressing his satisfaction at the progress of his patient and assuring the old fellow and his wife that his complete recovery depended only on the exercise of a little caution in the matter of diet he added, with an eye to their small store, that it would be a good thing if she would buy a chicken and prepare the broth.

The old darky's face lit up with the memory of happier days as he eagerly turned and whispered, "It ain't abs'lutely necessary to buy dat chickun." —Philadelphia Ledger.

Fitting the House to the Carpet.

Among the many ideas which the Japanese have copied from western customs and remodeled to suit themselves is the covering of their floors with a special kind of matting. The standard size of a mat is 3 by 6 yards. The custom of using these mats is so general that when building the Japanese architect arranges the size of the rooms to fit the mats, and when renting a house the size of a room is stated as requiring one, two or three mats, as the case may be.

Acting Versus Drawing.

To a group of friends Ellen Terry once said: "Acting is not like drawing. You make a line. If it is wrong, you rub it out at once and make another. With acting that is impossible. There is no altering—it must stand. I often feel as if I must cry to the audience, 'Oh, that is wrong, not as I meant it to be; let me act that part or sentence over again.'"

Two Kinds of Curiosity.

Jailbird—The same thing that brought you here—the desire to poke my nose into other people's business. Only I used generally to go in by way of the basement window.

The First Horse Show.

In the month Shebat, in the second year of King Darius, a man riding a red horse stood among the myrtle trees, and behind him were horses red, sorrel and white. Wasn't that the earliest horse show of which any authentic record still abides?

Brutal Surgery.

The extreme clumsiness and cruelty with which operations were performed even subsequent to the fifteenth century would scarcely be credited had we not authentic descriptions of them by the operators.

Thus Fabricius of Aquapedents (1537-1619), the eminent professor at Padua and preceptor of the immortal Harvey, describes what he considered an improved and easy operation in the following terms: "If it be a movable tumor, I cut it away with a redhot knife that sears as it cuts, but if it be adhered to the chest I cut without bleeding or pain with a wooden or horn knife soaked in aqua fortis, with which, having cut the skin, I dig out the rest with my fingers."

When the surgeons of Edinburgh were incorporated, it was required as a prerequisite that they should be able to read and write, "to know the anatomie, nature and complexion of everie member of humanis body and likeways to know all vaynes of the same, that he may make flewbothemie in due time."

Thirteenth Century Children.

Somebody has unearthed a book written by Bartholomew Anglicus about 1260, of which one of the most amusing chapters is on the children of his day. Of these he writes: "They dread no perils more than beating with a rod, and they love an apple more than gold and make more sorrow and woe for the loss of an apple than for the loss of a heritage. They desire all that they see and pray and ask with voice and with hand. They keep no counsel, but they tell all that they hear and see. Suddenly they laugh and suddenly they weep. Always they cry and jangle and jape; that unneth they be still while they sleep. When they be washed of filth, anon they defile themselves again. When their mother washeth and combeth them, they kick and sprawl and put with feet and with hands and withstand with all their might." All of which sounds very modern and up to date.

Mr. Spurgeon, taking a quiet holiday in the country, was moved to spend his Sunday morning at the little village bethel, where—not, perhaps, greatly to his surprise—he listened to one of his own sermons! At the end of the service the pastor of the Metropolitan tabernacle walked unrecognized into the vestry and thanked the preacher for the edification he had derived from his sermon. Then the flattered preacher did a foolish thing and asked his visitor's name. Mr. Spurgeon was in the best of moods. "My name? Oh, Spurgeon—you may have heard it; I preach a bit in London myself." "My dear brother's face," said Mr. Spurgeon in telling the story, "turned as red as scarlet baize."—St. James Gazette.

"It seemed that nothing short of a miracle could save my little daughter from an untimely death," says City Marshall A. H. Malcolm, of Cherokee, Kan. Something that will do You Good.

We know of no way in which we can be of more service to our readers than to tell them of something that will be of real good to them. For this reason we want to acquaint them with what we consider one of the very best remedies on the market for coughs, colds, and that alarming complaint, croup. We refer to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. We have used it with such good results in our family so long that it has become a household necessity. By its prompt use we havn't any doubt but that it has time and again prevented croup. The testimony is given upon our own experience, and we suggest that our readers, especially those who have small children, always keep it in their home as a safeguard against croup.—Camden (S. C.) A Tailor's Woes.

Pity the Broadway tailor. He has his troubles. Your suit is three sizes too small, yet he made most careful measurements, he swears. Pressed for explanations, he confesses: "Those miserable cutters, plague take 'em! They won't follow my measurements! I can't make 'em do it! I am losing custom all the time because of them. This pair of trousers is 21 at the knee. It should be 18. The book says 18—my measurement. This coat ought to be 40 chest; it's 38. They cut it to suit themselves, leaving me to fight it out with my patrons." "Do you mean to say that you allow hired men to lord it over you in that manner?" he was asked. "Lord, we can't help it. We tailors are the slaves of those fellows. We don't know our lives are our own. I hire new ones every week, but they are all alike." This admission explains the bungling work of some tailors.—New York Press.

New Signals on M. C. R. R.

Jackson, Mich., Feb. 9.—A new system of electric signals went into effect on the Michigan Central railway between Jackson and Marshall Saturday. The chief change is from the present disk signal to an arm signal. One of the new features is the addition of a precautionary signal. Thus the engineer is given two indications of the train conditions ahead. The precautionary signal is about a half mile from the block signal and stands at danger, and clear when it is clear. So before the block signal is visible to the engineer he has the precautionary signal to indicate the state of the block signal. This is expected to be of special value in times of fog and storm. As rapidly as possible the whole M. C. system will have the present disk signals replaced by this new double indication arm system.

Monroe Is Flooded.

Monroe, Mich., Feb. 9.—Saturday night's storm, which struck this city about 7 o'clock, while not as severe as former ones of this winter, was far-reaching in its effects. The river Rasin, which has been hovering around the danger point for the last three days, began to rise rapidly during the night, and, aided by the storm, soon got beyond its banks, and today the river districts are completely inundated. The eastern portions of Elm avenue and Front street, both of which are main thoroughfares, are passable only by boats, and residents of these sections are able to leave their houses only by using boats, which land them at the doors of their homes.

Stabbed Nine Times.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 9.—Stabbed nine times and then brutally pounded until he was senseless was the fate of Frank Motyka, a Polander living at 145 Thirty-first street, early Sunday morning, and as a result Frank Grinkowski, a laborer living at 22 Otis street, and Antonio Skreub, of 86 Goldner avenue, are locked up on suspicion of having been his assailants. The stabbing is the result of a quarrel in which the three men became engaged outside of Meisner's saloon, at Otis and Thirty-first streets. Motyka got decidedly the worst of it and was stabbed and pounded until he sank to the ground.

HURRICANE

Kills a Thousand Persons in the South Sea Islands.

TIDAL WAVE STRUCK THEM

Storm Raged Several Days During Middle of January—French Government Sends Aid—Starvation Threatens Survivors.

San Francisco, Feb. 9.—News of a fearful loss of life in a destructive storm that swept over the South Sea islands last month reached here Sunday by the steamer Mariposa, direct from Tahiti.

The loss of life is estimated at one thousand persons.

On Jan. 13 last a huge tidal wave, accompanied by a terrific hurricane, attacked the Society islands and the Tuomato group with fearful force, causing death and devastation never before equalled in a land of dreaded storms.

The storm raged several days, reaching its maximum strength between Jan. 14 and Jan. 16. From the meager news received at Tahiti up to the time of the sailing of the Mariposa it is estimated that 1,000 of the islanders lost their lives. It is feared that later advices will increase this number.

The first news of the disaster reached Papeta, Tahiti, Jan. 26 by the schooner Elmeo. The captain of the schooner placed the fatalities at 500. The steamer Excelsior arrived at Papeta the following day with 400 destitute survivors. The captain of the Excelsior estimated the total loss of life to be 800. These figures comprised only the deaths on the three islands of Hao, Hikuera and Makokas, whose ordinary population is 1,800. On Hikuera island, whose 1,000 inhabitants were engaged in pearl diving, nearly one-half were drowned. On an adjacent island 100 more were washed out to sea.

Makeno and Hao are depopulated. Conservative estimates at Tahiti place the number of islands visited by the tidal wave and hurricane at eighty. All of them are under the control of the French governor at Tahiti.

The surviving inhabitants are left destitute of food, shelter and clothing, all having been swept away by the storm.

The French government, upon receipt of news of the disaster, took prompt measures to relieve the distressed districts and dispatched two warships with fresh water and provisions. The Italian man-of-war Calabria accompanied the French vessels on their errand of mercy. As the supply of fresh water and provisions was totally exhausted by the storm, it is feared that many lives will be lost before the relief ships can arrive.

As far as is known, eight white people were among the drowned. Included in these were Alexander Brander, N. P. Plunkett of Oakland, T. D. Donnelly, formerly a fireman on the steamship Australia, and the local agent of C. Coppenrath, a merchant of Papeta. Added to this number was an unknown woman, who committed suicide from fright.

As the islands were barely twenty feet above sea level and were not surrounded by coral reefs, it was necessary for all the inhabitants to take to the cocoanut trees when the tidal wave began to cover the land. These trees grow an immense height, many reaching an altitude of 100 feet. All of the lower trees were covered by the raging seas, which swept with pitiless force about and over them. The natives in the taller trees were safe until the cocoanut roots gave way and then they too were swept out into the sea.

The 400 survivors brought by the Excelsior to Papeta gained the ship's side by swimming three and four miles from the tops of the cocoanut trees. The Elmeo, though badly damaged by the storm, also brought off as many persons as could swim to her sides, she, like the Excelsior, being unable to run close to the shores because of the violence of the ocean swells, which continued to run abnormally high for a week after the tidal disturbances.

Chicago Threatened With Strike.

Sleighride Resulted Fatally.

St. Paul, Feb. 9.—A special from Winona says: While a sleighing party of young people from the country were crossing a street car track in this city last night a car, running at top speed, crashed into the sleigh. The party consisted of two men and eight women, and all were injured, two of them so seriously that it is feared they will die.

His Body Found Mutilated.

Cleveland, Feb. 9.—Solomon Spiegelstein, a rag peddler, 40 years old, was found dead in a lower room of his apartments at 132 Orange street Sunday morning, with his head and body crushed and mutilated in a horrible manner. Ignatz Zahn, his roommate, has been arrested by the police and is being held on suspicion.

Our Bones Built Up In Arches.

The principle of the arch may be said to pervade the construction of the human skeleton. The late Professor Owen points this out very clearly, telling us that in man the skeleton is arranged in a series of segments, which follow and articulate with each other in the direction of the axis of the body from above downward.

This principle accounts for the strength and yet comparative lightness of the whole fabric. From the dome of the skull down to the graceful arch of the foot we may trace this succession of bony hoops or arches, which admirably protect the various parts of the nervous and vascular systems of the body. The skull is found to be but a continuation of the backbone, and each of its four segments, the occipital, parietal, frontal and nasal, consists of an upper neural and a lower hemal arch. Similar arched formations prevail throughout the structure of a human skeleton.

A Venice Industry.

Venice owes the accumulation of great wealth from a new industry to one of her natives named Joquin. It was in the year 1656 that he observed that the scales of a fish called the bleakfish possessed the property of giving a milky hue to water. After experimenting with it he discovered that when beads were dipped into it and then dried they assumed the appearance of pearls. This covering, however, was easily worn away, and successive experiments led to the manufacture of hollow glass beads, all blown separately, then polished in revolving cylinders and finally coated inside with the pearly liquid, the latter being protected with wax. This branch of industry is carried on in Venice to this day.

A Sad Awakening.

In one of Theodore Hook's stories the bridegroom, departing with his bride for their honeymoon, is disturbed by a continual tapping on the floor of the post chaise. It begins to bother him exceedingly. "What the deuce is that noise?" at last he mutters. "It is nothing, darling," answers the bride sweetly. "It is only my wooden leg." Only that and nothing more. She had got accustomed to it from long use, but the information put him out exceedingly and caused a coolness which was permanent.

True Happiness.

The best sort of happiness is rarely visible to the multitude. It lies hidden in odd corners and quiet places, and the eager world, which presumably is seeking it, hurries past and never recognizes it, but continues to mistake for it prosperity and riches, noise and laughter, even fame and mere cheap notoriety.—Henry Seton Merriman in "The Vultures."

A French Epitaph.

In a French churchyard is a monument having an epitaph of which the following is a translation: "Here lies Jean Pinto, the Spanish vocalist. When he reached heaven, he united his voice with the voices of the archangels. As soon as he heard him the Deity cried, 'Keep quiet, all you fellows, and let us hear alone the illustrious singer, Jean Pinto!'"

AN ANTI-TRUST BILL

Senator Moriarty Introduces One Into the Senate.

CALLS FOR SUM OF $1,000

For Prosecution of Cases—Sherman Law and Knox Bill Basis of Provision—Scripps Receives Plea For Cheboygan Indian Affair.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 12.—The first real anti-trust measure of the session was introduced in the upper house Wednesday afternoon by Senator Moriarty of Crystal Falls. It is the bill drafted by the National Live Stock association, "to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraint and monopolies and to prohibit the giving or receiving of rebates on the transportation of property."

The bill adapts to trade and commerce within states the Sherman anti-trust law, Attorney-General Knox's anti-trust bill introduced into congress by Representative Jenks of Wisconsin, and includes an appropriation of $10,000 for the prosecution of cases by the state, along the lines of the Hepburn amendment in the United States senate. It is claimed that the enactment of this bill by the various states would solve the trust problem.

The bill makes all unlawful combinations or conspiracies to form combinations, and all unlawful monopolies of any part of the trade or commerce of the state a misdemeanor, and provides for the confiscation of property held by unlawfully formed combinations or monopolies.

Companies, under its provisions, must file each year a statement showing the amount of stock of the company, its market value, a list of its officers, its dividends, the amount of its stock held by other companies, and the amount of stock it holds of other companies. The attorney-general may demand a statement at any time, giving the operations of the concern in detail for the twelve months preceding.

The selling of articles and the carrying of products at a rate less than the market price, "if the product had been sold or carried by any other person than the party to such transaction," is prohibited. Any attempt to force a contract on a purchaser by which he is prevented from reselling, or any attempt to sell under the market price for the purpose of killing competition is also prohibited.

Two violations of the law on the part of any firm makes them liable to be prohibited from doing further business in the state by legal procedure instituted by the attorney-general. Officers of companies are made personally liable for the policies of their concerns, and may be punished by a fine of $5,000 or one year in prison, or both, for violations of the law.

State Treasurer McCoy, through Senator Burns, asks the legislature to relieve him of all responsibility for loss of any part of the $75,000 of state funds deposited in the defunct City Savings bank of Detroit. McCoy holds that he is in no way liable in that Secretary of State Warner and Auditor-General Powers had agreed with him that the bond deposited by the bank as security for the funds deposited in the bank was good.

Senator James E. Scripps has received a communication from H. W. Fairbanks of Chicago, inclosing a circular letter signed by J. E. Armstrong of the same city, making a plea for the Cheboygan Indians who were evicted four years ago from their 611 acres of land on Burt lake, Cheboygan county. The letter urges that some legislative action be taken to restore these lands to the Indians.

Senator Burns would compel all express companies to ship goods direct to destination.

Senator Kelly's bill would exempt all mortgages on real estate from taxation.

Senator Bangham has a bill along the lines of Representative Denby's corporation bill, to make it easier for companies to incorporate in Michigan. He does not, however, propose to take off the limit of $5,000,000 of capitalization.

The house got down to business for a straight two hours and a half Wednesday afternoon, poured in nearly forty new bills and put half a dozen through committee of the whole.

Representative Ferry of Detroit introduced his bill to cut out split tickets in elections all over the state. The bill was supervised by Judge Durfee. The argument advanced in favor of it is that it will prevent confusion and simplify the method of voting.

Representative Neal's bill giving upper peninsula representatives $2 a day extra for expenses was opposed by Representative Lowell, but finally passed, as it does every session.

Appropriation bills introduced ask for $30,000 a year for 1904 and 1905 for maintenance of the school for the blind at Lansing, and $16,000 extra for the construction of a dining-room, kitchen and chapel; $14,000 a year for state and traveling libraries, to be evenly divided; $67,587 for a special building for men at the Kalamazoo asylum; $70,000 for each year for the industrial school for boys, and $4,000 to meet the deficiency this year.

Governor Bliss yesterday presented to the legislature his statement of the work of the advisory board in the matter of pardons for the first two years of his incumbency. He reported 15 pardons, 103 paroles and 33 commutations of sentence, an increase in the last method of granting clemency and a decrease in pardons and paroles.

Charles T. Harvey of Ottawa and Peter White of Marquette addressed the legislators last night on the semi-centenary celebration at the Soo in June. Harvey made a strong plea for a Michigan monument at old Fort Michilimackinac, with an invitation to Canada to send representatives to the laying of the cornerstone.

The Struggle For Office.

Nearly Forfeits His Life.

A runaway almost ending fatally, started a horrible ulcer on the leg of J. B. Orner, Franklin Grove, Ill. For four years it defied all doctors and all remedies. But Bucklen's Arnica Salve had no trouble to cure him. Equally good for burns, bruises, skin eruptions and piles. 25c, at C. A. Wright's drug store.

FOR LEGISLATION

Ten More Bills Presented in Senate and House.

SHORT SESSIONS TUESDAY

Bill Providing For Intermediate Punishment—Vaughan Seeks to Regulate Confinement and Punishment of Infant Criminals.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 11.—The legislators are not going to make good their threats to get down to hard pan right away after their junkets. Each house held a half-hour session Tuesday afternoon and adjourned until this afternoon at 2 o'clock. Just fifteen days are left for the introduction of bills, which are already more numerous than they were at this time last session. A grist of ten was thrown into the hopper in the house yesterday afternoon and nine in the senate, two others being passed by the upper house.

A bill to provide for the indeterminate instead of a fixed sentence for the punishment of criminals was introduced into the senate. Under its regulations every prisoner must serve at least the minimum term for the crime for which he was committed. When a prisoner petitions for parole or complete discharge with the board of control of the prison, where a summary of the trial by which the prisoner was convicted and a record of the prisoner is on file, the advisory board in the matter of pardons is called together to hear the prisoner and the recommendations of the board of control. At least three members of the advisory board must agree before a recommendation for parole or discharge is laid before the governor, who may then act at his discretion.

If the prisoner after parole relapses into criminal ways or gives unmistakable evidence that he is about to again resume life's journey down the primrose path, he may be retaken into custody. If he violates the conditions of his parole he will be liable to serve the maximum term for the crime for which he was first incarcerated, such term to begin when he is retaken into custody and no credit being allowed him for any time previously served. Only prisoners who have first been paroled are to be eligible to complete discharge.

One more bill to regulate the confinement and punishment of infant criminals has been introduced.

Senator Vaughan's measure, introduced in the upper house, specifies that all males of 16 years or under convicted for their first felony, except murder in the first degree, shall be sent to the Michigan reformatory at Ionia. Any ordinary misdemeanor shall entitle them to a sentence of six months. Males over 16 convicted for [illegible] the institutions at Jackson, Marquette or Detroit. A special proviso allows all judges in Detroit to sentence all persons convicted in the municipal courts of Detroit to the house of correction at Detroit.

Senator Woodman, by request of Mrs. Ida Case Watson of Lansing, proposes to institute just one more state officer, with a salary of $2,000 a year and expenses, and holding his appointment under the governor. He would be called the state sanitary commissioner. His main job would be to see that the right men were appointed as "local" sanitary commissioners, and were properly posted in the very latest styles of sanitation and the most up-to-date knowledge pertaining thereto.

One of the bills passed by the senate repeals the act providing for paying publishers $15 for printing the general laws of a session. In Pingree's time it happened that nearly all the state press took advantage of two or three special sessions, with only a few laws to record, to print them in full and collect from the state. That is all gone now.

In the house Tuesday Speaker Carton appointed Representative Eichhorn of St. Clair, Whelan of Ottawa, and Delisle of Wayne a special committee to draft resolutions of condolence on the death of Justin R. Whiting, the late chairman of the Democratic state central committee, and Silas L. Ballantine of Port Huron, who was a member of the last house.

Senator Burns' bill to punish hunters who carelessly wander about laying out men instead of deer, was also passed. It provides that the careless man shall get a maximum of ten years or $1,000 fine.

Will Establish a Town.

Menominee, Mich., Feb. 11.—The L. W. & V. S. company of Menominee, which for over thirty years has conducted extensive logging and lumbering operations in the upper peninsula, its mill at Menominee has decided to embark in the same industry in Louisiana. The company owns 61,000 acres of well-timbered land in the southwestern part of the state, near the town of De Ridder, and it will establish a town of it sown in the heart of its great tract. It is estimated the land contains over 1,000,000 feet of long leaf yellow pine alone.

Fire Destroyed Water Tower.

Chelsea, Mich., Feb. 11.—Fire destroyed Corwin's livery barn, together with three horses and other contents. Two firemen were injured. The city water tower burned, and in falling damaged the M. E. church and a dwelling adjoining was more or less damaged. The city water supply is badly crippled by the loss of the standpipe. Loss several thousand dollars.

A Family Doubly Afflicted.

Chesaning, Mich., Feb. 11.—The 5-year-old son of Mrs. Tom Campbell, who lately moved here from Saginaw, was drowned by falling into an open cistern Monday afternoon and was not found until 10 o'clock at night. His mother died the day previous of typhoid fever.

GERMANY FAILS

Ignores the Agreement and Demands Cash.

OR A LEIN ON REVENUES

Bowen Returns a Tart Reply and Refuses to Yield Receipts of Any Port Prior to Hague Decision—Great Britain and Italy Not Concerned.

Washington, Feb. 12.—Germany has ignored her previous agreement made with Mr. Bowen by Count A. Von Quadt-Wymradt-Isner, her charge d'affaires, and has insisted on a cash payment of $340,000, or a lien on the receipts of one of the Venezuelan ports, until this amount is paid. This information was communicated to Mr. Bowen last night by Baron Spec von Sternberg, the German minister.

Mr. Bowen immediately informed the German minister that he refused to yield the receipts of any port prior to The Hague's decision, saying that would be preferential treatment. As to the cash payment of $340,000 demanded, Mr. Bowen left that matter to the German minister to determine, saying to him that if Germany can afford to make a public confession, and does not stand by agreements signed by its duly accredited diplomats, he (Mr. Bowen) is willing that they shall receive, on the day the protocol is signed, the total amount asked in the original ultimatum. The response has been cabled to the German foreign office.

Great Britain and Italy have renounced any responsibility for the action of Germany and expressed their regret. Through their representatives here they have informed Mr. Bowen that they will stand by all the agreements they have made with him and will not be influenced by the action of Germany. Both the British and Italian protocols provide for a cash payment of £6,500 and for the submission of the question of preferential treatment to The Hague. They contain recommendations for the renewal of all previous treaties of amity and commerce, and the Italian convention has an article providing for the payment of the Italian claims, which already have been adjudicated without further arbitration, after her commission has arbitrated the other claims.

With the exception of the demand for an increased cash payment, the protocol of Germany in all essential respects will conform to that of Great Britain, but will be somewhat more concise. All three protocols, it is understood, will provide for the immediate return of all vessels seized by the blockading ships. It is stated that the action of Germany in asking for $340,000 instead of contenting herself with [illegible] is due to [illegible] of certain steps in the negotiations which had been passed on by Count Quadt before the arrival of Baron von Sternberg. Mr. Bowen holds that Germany is bound by the act of its representative.

U. S. May Lose Danish Isles.

Washington, Feb. 12.—Secretary Hay and Danish Minister Baun have been discussing the approaching termination by limitation of the time allowed for the exchange of ratification of the treaty providing for the cession to the United States of the Danish West Indian islands. There are some slight indications that there has been a change of mind respecting the advisability of consummating the treaty on the part of the Danish government, and if the time limit expires next June without a reconsideration the department will abandon further efforts to secure the islands.

Smoot to the Capital Next Week.

Salt Lake, Utah, Feb. 12.—Senator-elect Reed Smoot of Utah, it is announced, will go to Washington next week. His credentials as senator to succeed Senator Rawlins will then be presented. "The protests against my being seated in the senate will make no difference in my plans," said Mr. Smoot. "I expect to take my seat, and I do not anticipate any serious interference. I see no reason why there should be. Nothing can be brought against me except that I am a member of the Mormon church."

Serious Mine Explosion.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Feb. 12.—A serious explosion occurred Wednesday afternoon at No. 11 colliery, operated by the Lehigh & Wilkesbarre Coal Co., at Plymouth, four miles from this city. Eight men were burned and injured, two of them seriously. From what can be learned, a naked lamp carried by one of the men in the mine at the time ignited a feeder of gas in one of the chambers, which exploded with terrific force, causing havoc for hundreds of yards in what is called the Bennett vein.

Pearson's Resignation Refused.

Washington, Feb. 12.—Superintendent Brownson of the United States naval academy has refused to accept the resignation of Midshipman R. H. Pearson. The young man had his jaw broken as the result of a fight caused by his objection to "running," a mild form of hazing, by his classmates, and evidently feared that the subsequent severe corrective measures applied by the authorities would make him unpopular with his class.

ALASKAN TREATY

Ratified in an Executive Session of the Senate.

GREEK TREATY CONSIDERED

Narrowly Escaped Being Ratified—Senator Cullom Held It Up—Department of Commerce Bill Now Awaits President's Signature.

Washington, Feb. 12.—In an executive session, which lasted only an hour and a half, Wednesday the senate, in addition to confirming a large number of appointments, ratified the Alaskan boundary treaty and came near taking similar action on the commercial treaty with Greece, which was reported by Senator Cullom yesterday from the committee on foreign relations.

The Greek treaty was read through by the clerk and then Senator Cullom asked that the resolution of ratification be acted upon, but Senator Hoar of Massachusetts objected. He said that he desired an opportunity to examine the provision in the treaty concerning consular trials. The principal purpose of the Greek treaty is the regulation of commerce between Greece and the United States.

There was no delay in securing action on the Alaskan treaty, and very little opposition to it was manifested.

The ayes were so much more numerous, however, that the decision of the chair to the effect that ratification had prevailed was not challenged.

All the provisions of the Alaskan boundary treaty except one paragraph from the French portion of the treaty have been published heretofore by the Associated Press. An official translation of this paragraph, which was an extract from the Russian Anglo treaty of 1825, incorporated into the new Alaskan treaty, has been made and is as follows:

"It is moreover agreed that no establishment shall be formed by either of the two parties within the limits which the preceding articles assign to the possessions of the other. Consequently British subjects shall not form any establishment either upon the coast or on the mainland strip, comprised within the limits of the Russian possessions, as they are designated in the two preceding articles; and in like wise, no establishment shall be formed by Russian subjects beyond the said limits."

Mr. Hanna called up the conference report on the department of commerce bill, and it was agreed to without debate. The bill now goes to the president.

The new department of commerce bill passed by congress provides for another cabinet officer and places, under his control the following bureaus, most of them by transfer from other departments: Bureau of corporations, bureau of labor, the lighthouse and steamboat inspection services, the bureaus of navigation and of standards, coast and geodetic service, the immigration service, the shipping commission, bureau of statistics of the treasury department, bureau of foreign commerce of the state department, census bureau and fish commission. By the terms of what is known as the Nelson amendment, authority and power is given the new bureau of corporations to require specified returns from large corporations, and provision is made for publicity as to their affairs to a certain extent.

It is expected that an answer will arrive here today from Germany to the final representations made, and upon the receipt of that answer the signing of the protocols probably will occur. As soon as they are signed orders will be dispatched to the blockading ships for their immediate withdrawal from Venezuelan waters.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

Worse than alarm of fire at night is the brassy cough of croup, which sounds like the children's death knell and it means death unless something is done quickly. CHAPTER XII.

PRINCESS OLGA BEGINS TO ACT.

"NOW, Therese, tell me what you have learned. Why did the fact that the picture of Alexandra hangs upon the wall of Neslerov's room make you faint? You have learned something. Tell me."

Therese was sitting in a chair, her face white and drawn, and in her eyes was a bewildered look.

"It was not so much what I heard, princess, as what I knew and suspected," she answered.

"I know what you know. I suspect what you suspect. Tell me what you heard," she said sternly.

"It was in the serfs' hall," she said in reply to the princess. "I was eating; no one seemed to ask who I was, and they talked as servants do. Vladimir Paulpoff is in danger of his life."

Princess Olga gave a start, but recovered her composure.

"Go on," she said. "Tell me all."

"It seems there is an American—I do not remember what they called him—but he is an American who builds bridges over the rivers for the new railway. He knows Vladimir Paulpoff. He is also a friend of that American girl—you remember—we met at the fair in Moscow?"

"Frances Gordon? I remember her. She gave liberally to the charities. Well?"

"It would seem from what I heard that the governor is in love with her, and that she rejected him. These things are well known among the servants. It seems the American and Neslerov had a fight and Neslerov was injured."

"He told me he fell from a horse. Go on."

"It is believed among the servants that Vladimir is also in love with the American girl and that she is in love with him. And the American—I don't know—but he may be in love with her also."

"Three lovers! She is fortunate—no, I would say most unfortunate. With one true and honorable lover any woman is fortunate, but with three—and one like Neslerov! It is too much."

"You do not seem to suspect where the picture came from."

"Do you mean the oil painting of my cousin, the Princess Alexandra?"

"I mean it. You say it hangs on the wall of Neslerov's room. It is undoubtedly the one painted by Vladimir."

"And when Vladimir and his parents were sent to Siberia Neslerov took the painting?"

"Yes. Vladimir is talented, as you know—at least as I have told you."

"Then Vladimir must be near this place."

Therese shuddered again.

"He is—he is in the dungeons under this palace," she whispered in terror.

A sudden change came over the princess. She walked in agitation to and fro across the room.

"Then Neslerov must suspect that Vladimir holds the key to the mystery of Graslov," she said, stopping again before Therese.

"I do not know what he thinks. The American also is here under a charge of conspiring against the czar."

"Oh, then it becomes clearer. These Americans are shrewd. This one, perhaps, in order to gratify his love of truth, has set himself the task of discovering the truth about Graslov."

"Who knows?" asked Therese. "But how would he know anything about the mystery of Graslov?"

"True, but you say Vladimir and the American girl are in love. Vladimir may have discovered something and told the girl. She may have told the American, who may not be a lover, but a friend. She may have enlisted his efforts in the task of unraveling the mystery."

"It is possible."

"What else did you hear?"

"Nothing; that is all. The American was arrested as he was about to leave for Perm. Vladimir was brought from Tivoloffsky, a small village near here."

"By the orders of Neslerov?"

"It must be, since they are in the dungeons of his palace."

"And that is all you heard?"

"All—everything."

"It is enough to place me upon the right scent. You must not, however, give way to these fits of unconsciousness. Be stronger, be brave."

"It is all very well, princess; but if you had lived for twenty years with the horror of that crime overshadowing you, with a constant fear of the Siberian mines weighing upon you, you would not be calm."

"Poor woman! I appreciate your feelings in the matter. But try to maintain your composure, for one mistake now, the slightest suspicion on the part of Neslerov, may destroy the efforts we have made during the last two years."

"Six months, princess."

"For you, since your husband died. I have been working upon this mystery since I returned from Paris two years ago. If God spares my life, I will avenge the crime that was committed against our branch of the Neslerovs."

That evening the princess met Neslerov in the dining room with no show of emotion. Her smile was as winning and her wit as sharp as ever?

"I have not seen you during the afternoon, fair cousin," said Neslerov. "But I have not forgotten you. I have been gathering the resources of Tomsk to give you a fitting welcome to our city. Tomorrow night there will be a reception and fete here in your honor."

"Tomorrow night? That is quickly done."

"It does not take long to arrange such a thing here. We have so few social pleasures that when the opportunity occurs we grasp it greedily. The officers of the garrison and the head officials, with their families, will attend. You must not expect to see the grandeur of a fete in St. Petersburg or Paris."

"It would weary me," said Olga.

The perfecting arrangements for the fete made Neslerov hurry away, and Olga was soon left to herself. She had resolved upon certain plans, but the activity of the palace in the preparations for the coming festivities seemed destined to balk her. She roamed through the great rooms alone, scanning the faces of those she met, speaking to few, but watchful for the opportunity she craved.

It was nearly midnight when she became discouraged and went to her room. The servants of the palace were still at work arranging the rooms for the dance.

But the princess did not retire. She sat down near a window and waited.

From the ballroom windows the glare of lights spread out upon the surrounding trees and buildings. From below came voices of those who were making ready for the reception.

Therese came in to prepare her mistress for bed.

"Not yet, Therese," said the princess wearily. "I shall not retire."

"You will make yourself ill," said Therese nervously.

"Do not fear—I shall not be ill. But I am not ready for bed. I must wait—and act."

"You will learn nothing tonight."

"It is a night to learn. Leave me alone."

Therese stood a moment watching the princess with a wistful, loving glance, and then she went to her own room.

The princess sat with scarcely a motion for more than two hours. An observer might easily have supposed she had gone to sleep. But suddenly the glare of the lights from the ballroom died away, and the princess rose to her feet.

"It is finished," she said, "and they are weary. Tomorrow night will be a severe one, and they will retire at once. Some one must be on guard—and gold is powerful. Tonight I must learn something."

Still she waited and soon all was silent in the palace.

"I wonder if Neslerov is asleep," she said. "Neslerov! I could almost hate the name, though it is my own. How so cruel and heartless a man became a member of our family I cannot conceive. Even though the relationship is remote, some cousinships removed, I believe, yet I regret that any should exist. No—not now—I am glad; for were he not sufficient relation to warrant my presence in his detestable palace I could not have this opportunity to learn the truth. Oh, Neslerov! Vengeance will be mine—and it will be sweet."

She had incased her feet in light Parisian slippers, and in these she stepped noiselessly from the room. The great bare corridor was dimly lighted and no person could be seen.

While caution was necessary, it was not because Olga feared. She was too powerful herself to fear injury in the palace of Neslerov. If the governor suspected the purpose of her visit, she would be no longer welcome, and the solution she had so long sought would be delayed.

Silently she crept down the great winding stairs into the main hall. This was a wide, high apartment, and from it opened many doors into other apartments. On one side were the offices of the government of the province, on the other the living rooms of the governor's household.

The doors upon the left, leading to the reception room, the governor's room, the great ballroom and the dining room, were closed. Two of those on the right were open. In one room there was a light, and from it came the subdued voices of two men and the odor of tobacco. The other room was dark.

The princess remembered these rooms. She had seen them in her inspection of the palace. That from which came the voices and in which a light was burning was the office of the superintendent of police. The one next to it was a smaller room, connected with the other by a door, which was locked. This small room had been intended for an office, but was now used for the purpose of storing books, records, police material and desks. It was part of the suit allotted to the superintendent of police.

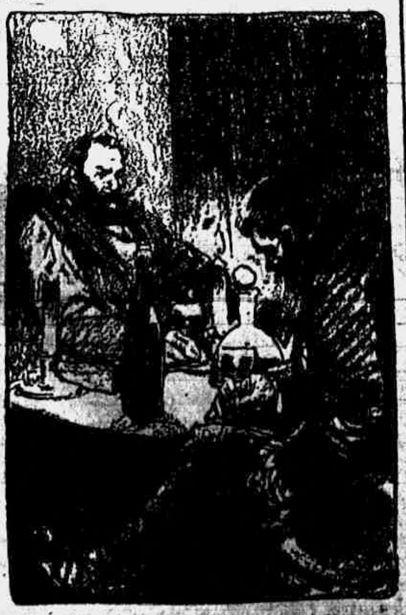
Olga stood in the hall and listened. She heard the name of Paulpoff. With a fluttering heart she darted into the darkened room and took up her position near the closed door between that and the office.

The two speakers sat near that door, with a round table between them, and upon the table was a supply of liquor and cigars.

The work of preparing the palace for the festivities on the following night did not come under the supervision of the police, but all connected with the palace were interested, and these two were the last to retire.

The speakers in that other room were Jansky, superintendent of police, and Inspector Unsgethop.

"The whole thing is a complete mystery to me," said Unsgethop, speaking somewhat thickly, having drunk considerable liquor. "It is a mystery. First we receive one command, then another, and we do not know what to do. The governor is not wont to act thus."



"It is a mystery. First we receive one command, then another."

"You are not the first to have felt the influence of this great mystery," said Jansky. "The governor is discreet."

"Oh, I said a complete mystery. I would not call it a great mystery. That would bring it to the dignity of a celebrated case."

"So it is. It is one of the most celebrated cases in all Russia."

AN OPEN LETTER

From a Friend of the Herald,

COMPLAINING

About Errors in Dates, and Making Criticisms about the Proposed Sewer.

Franklin, Feb. 9, 1903.

Editor HERALD,

DEAR SIR:—I read your paper every week or twice a week and consider it very reliable as a general thing, but last week you was a little off in your Remernisences of "older times than now." You stated that the old system of water works was built in 1875. They never done a thing about water works till '77, and then they didn't seem to have any town carpenters that wanted to tackle the job, and they sent to our town for Uncle Robert Smith and he came down and hewed the timbers for the "new" water tank and it was done right. He lives right here in Tipton now and he'll tell you I am right about it. That was once when your city fathers, or perhaps grandfathers, paid some attention to the knowledge of older people and the town wasn't run by a lot of youngsters as now.

Now about this sewer question, Bro. Stacy. You kind of seem to be on the side of them that are always hollering for improvements. Old things and old times aint good enough for 'em. You've got to stop and think where your improvements is going to lead to. You seemed to be poking fun at them old water works, but it was as much ahead of what went before it as your new sewer will be ahead of the present plan.

There seems to be a few of you fellers that always is keeping the public agitated and keep 'em wanting something better than they've got. Doctor Hause was one of them fellers a good while ago. He was very active, I remember, in trying to have street lamps set on nearly every corner about town. He kept agitating and agitating (jest as you are doing about the sewer) till he got 'em—and it made quite a stir among the tax payers, too.

I remember very well how they pertested, for some of my folks moved to town that year and they helped pertest. You see before that people had got around nights very well without street lamps. The men folks didn't care if it was dark and most of the women carried little lanterns to prayer meeting with 'em—and prayer meeting was where they went mostly for there wa'n't a woman's club in town and as for "Wit and Wisdom," they had enough sight more of it than they've got now, and it was a good deal more general and had not got into the hands of a monopoly (limited) as it has now in your town. Well, the light the Lord made wa'nt good enough and Doc Hause he worked till he got kerosene lamps put up on the street corner. The village council did have respect enough left for nature not to try to run opposition to the moon, so there was a law not to light up when it was full (the moon), but save the kerosene for dark nights. Sometimes the moon was a little late in appearing and in coming home from the shows in the old Merchant's Hall it was sometimes pretty dark, and the folks had to use their lanterns, but everybody had one and didn't mind the trouble and all the school kids were not wearing spectacles as they do now, on account of so much electricity.

Now you see these seemingly harmless movements are sometimes farreachin'. After they got the street lamps, they had to have somebody to to tend 'em, and Wallace Gray and his velocerpede and oil can became a necessity. Then with all that kerosene around there was more danger of fire, and the improvement cranks began agitating (jest as you are doing about the sewer) the water works question—and the only time the council ever was really consistent was when they built a little coop under the water tank to keep their kerosene barrels in. There was your bane and your antidote both on the same lot and both owned by the corporation.

If some of these progressive fellers had been satisfied to let well enough alone, back in '74 or '75, we might still be lighting up our lanterns and going to meeting dark nights instead of pressing a button on the wall to call in the lightning to luminate some card tables. As I said before these things are farreachin' and, before you stir the people up to build this sewer, you better think what it may lead up to. Maybe it will kill all the fish in the River Raisin.

Hoping you wont be offended at my contribution to the Remernisences and my suggestions about your town improvements, I am

Your friend and reguler reader,
J. W. FRANCES.

THE ELECTRIC ROAD

Again Brought Up Before the COMMON COUNCIL

And an Extension of Time Asked.

W. B. Hatch, of Detroit, was before the council again last Monday evening and asked that an extension of time be given for the company to begin building the road from Ann Arbor to Adrian.

The time first given was that the building should begin before the expiration of eighteen months from the giving of the franchise

The eighteen months has now expired and the council has repealed the ordinance on account of the time limit. If it is the intention of the men in charge to go ahead with the road, no doubt Tecumseh will again be glad to grant the ordinance, as this road would be a great advantage to Tecumseh and it cannot come too soon.

A PRETTY DANCE

Given by the Young People at the Armory

LAST NIGHT.

Many Pretty Dresses Added to the Completeness of Detail.

The Valentine party given by the young people at the armory last night was a very successful affair and was largely attended. The hall presented a scene in keeping with the occasion. The blending of pink, green and white bunting afforded a plan of decoration of par excellence. Dropped from the ceiling and side-wall the large festoons of bunting and crepe-paper were literally covered with daintily arranged hearts, in token of the 14th of February.

Setees, sofas and chairs artistically placed throughout the hall, gave to the general scene a very homelike appearance. Curtains were placed before the windows, making a finishing charm to the grandness of the decoration.

In all the dance proved to be as pretty an affair as Tecumseh has had the pleasure to attend for some time. The music was exceptionally fine and was furnished by Messrs. Fred Willetts and John Hensy, of Adrian.

About sixty couples attended the dance and none could betake themselves away until the early hours of morning.

THE SCHOOLS.

Ralph Orr has enrolled in the class in Bookkeeping.

Literature class have commenced the study of American Literature.

English IV class are just completing Burke's Speech on Conciliation with America.

The snow is making much sport for the pupils desiring a confidential talk with Professor Kellogg.

The common question in the High School at the present time is: "Why don't the several classes organize?"

Geometry class are having a general review preparatory to the final examination to be held in Plain Geometry about March 1st.

Like Rip Vanwinkle, the High School reporter, after a prolonged sleep, has awakened to find his pen rusty, his school notes in arrears and school nearly finished. For this state of affairs a humble apology is offered and hopes are advanced that in the future, with the hearty co-operation of all pupils, school notes of unusual interest, both to scholar and parent, will appear in this column.

A New Silo.

John C. Schreder secured a patent a short time ago on a new idea of a Silo. The idea is a good one it would seem, and no doubt, Mr. Schreder will do well with it. The idea is to save expense in the material for building in the first place. It can be built air tight, can be changed and enlarged easily and with no more expense, cannot get loose by standing empty, has the continuous door system and many other advantages. Before ordering a silo built it would be well to see John C. Schreder and he will at once show the full advantages of the new idea.

"Liberty Belles" at the Opera House Tonight.

At the time of going to press there were but a few scattering seats for the "Liberty Belles" entertainment at the opera house tonight. There will be a full house surely, showing that a good show well advertised will always draw a good house the way shows are now run in Tecumseh.

LITERARY NOTES

ATLANTIC MONTHLY.

The leading article in the February Atlantic, George W. Alger's "The Sensational Journalism and the Law," is an admirable discussion of certain insidious tendencies in the effect of much contemporary journalism upon the popular mind. After noting some of the means of legal restraint upon the "yellow" excesses of papers, Mr. Alger passes to consider the deeper and more vital question of the undermining of the sense of justice of the people and the actual perverting of the procedure of the courts which often results from newspaper stories of important civil and criminal trials.

CENTURY.

The only sorrow worth anything in this world is sorrow for others, not hugging our woes to ourselves. For I believe that the really brave and the really great make us forget their scars, all the records of their hurts and wounds. —From "My Old Maid's Corner," The Century, March, 1903.

COSMOPOLITAN.

Seven important men are discussed in the February number of The Cosmopolitan: "The Young Napoleon," by Field-marshal Viscount Wolsey; "Leo Tolstoy: An Interpretation Done in Little," by Elbert Hubbard; August Belmont, by R. H. Graves; Henry M. Whitney, by A. E. MacFarlane; "The Triumphal Tour of Adolf Lorenz," by John Brisben Walker; William Andrews Clark, by H. R. Knapp; and "President McKinley's Tours," by W. W. Price.

An Ancient Foe

To health and happiness is Scrofula—as ugly as ever since time immemorial.

It causes bunches in the neck, disfigures the skin, inflames the mucous membrane, wastes the muscles, weakens the bones, reduces the power of resistance to disease and the capacity for recovery, and develops into consumption.

"A bunch appeared on the left side of my neck. It caused great pain, was lanced, and became a running sore. I went into a general decline. I was persuaded to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and when I had taken six bottles my neck was healed, and I have never had any trouble of the kind since." MRS. K. T. SNYDER, Troy, Ohio.

Hood's Sarsaparilla and Pills

will rid you of it, radically and permanently, as they have rid thousands.

MUCH FUN.

Ladies of the Research Circle Arrange a Delightful Program

TUESDAY EVENING

For the Entertainment of their Lady Friends at Maccabee Hall.

The entertainment given Tuesday evening at the Maccabee Hall by the ladies of the Research Circle, was a financial success, being attended by nearly 200 lady friends of the Circle.

The program opened with a farce "The New Galatea" in which the parts were reversed, Pygmalion being the statue and Galatea the sculptor. This was followed by a cake walk participated in by Margaret Freeman and Bonnie Brown, Howard Wilson and Seymour Orr. They were loudly applauded and for an encore the little ladies gave a clog, which also made a decided hit.

The comedy "The Shakespeare Class" was given by seven members of the circle and proved disastrous to each one, all having to be conveyed to their respective homes in an ambulance.

A recitation was given by Adelaide Putnam and the program closed with a beautiful tableaux, in memory of Lincoln's birthday, the characters represented being Columbia, Christine Wilson; Slavery, Ora Bowen; War, Miss Pierce; and Peace, Anna Wilson

You Will Be Happy If Well.

Paine's Celery Compound

Bestows that Health and Vigor that Makes Living a Pleasure.

If you are sick and out-of-sorts, it is in your power to make yourself healthy, strong, and happy.

There is not the slightest reason why you should go through life feeling sickly, miserable, languid, and melancholic. To be well and strong, means happiness and true joy.

If you are sleepless, rheumatic, neuralgic, dyspeptic, or have the shadows of disease hovering over you; if you are not as bright, energetic, and strong as you were some weeks ago, the use of Paine's Celery Compound will tone up and fortify your whole system, cleanse the blood, correct digestion, sharpen the appetite, and conduce to restful sleep. Thousands once in a half-dead condition owe their present good health to the use of Paine's Celery Compound. Mr. Wm. S. Gibson, of Pleasureville, Ky., who, through sickness and suffering, was brought near the dark grave, writes as follows, regarding his marvelous cure:—

"I have been broken down in health and strength, nervous system shattered, kidneys out of order, had nervous and trembling spells off and on for the last ten years. I have taken three bottles of your Paine's Celery Compound and all of the above-mentioned troubles have left me, and I can now do a good day's work. I go about my business all day long and it don't worry me, and I now feel better than I have in ten years. I have a good appetite, and can eat and get around on foot as active as when I was a boy. My age is 65 years."

ABSOLUTE FAITH.

You Can Depend upon the Word of this Tecumseh Citizen.

He has had the experience,
He has thoroughly tested the article,
He found it as represented,
He has absolute faith in its merit.

Mr. Chas. Bartholomew, proprietor of the bicycle repair shop in the southeastern section of Tecumseh, says: "Some eighteen years ago the doctors said I had diabetes and that I could not live. I got better but I have been troubled ever since with the kidney secretions, particularly retention of the same which caused me considerable anxiety. I tried all kinds of medicines said to be good for kidney trouble but the annoyance still remained. Finally my attention was called to Doan's Kidney Pills and I got them at C. A. Wright's drug store. They are splendid. They gave me more relief and acted quicker than any remedy I ever used. From my experience I can say they are a valuable remedy and I consistently recommend them."

For sale by all dealers: Price 50 cents per box. Foster-Milburn company, Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

WILLIAM R. WILSON.

One of the representative men and successful agriculturists of the township of Ridgeway, has lived in this township a longer time than any other man living here. He was born in Genesee county, N. Y., Dec. 12, 1827, and died Feb. 9, 1903. He was the son of Robt. Wilson, a native of New York, who came of German ancestry, while his mother was of Scotch and Irish.

When a small boy he came to Southern Michigan with his father, team and wagon and $300 in money. They went by canal to Buffalo, thence by lake to Detroit where they loaded all their earthly possessions on the wagon and followed the trail to Lenawee county, stopping at Tecumseh where they remained one year. They then came to Ridgeway township and invested $200 in 160 acres of land, increasing it to 200 acres where they settled and on which William R. lived at the time of his death. This land was obtained from Uncle Sam and the purchase papers were signed by President Jackson. The log house in which he lived gave way to a larger and finer residence, one of the best in the township, and after the death of Robert Wilson, remained the home of the only child until his death.

William R. Wilson was educated at Tecumseh under the tutelage of Prof. Joseph Estabrook when that school was a branch of University. It was a great satisfaction to him to have his two sons, Henry and Eugene, complete their courses at Ypsilanti under this esteemed educator, Joseph Estabrook.

He was united in marriage in Raisin township with Miss Mary A. Kelley May 5th, 1859, and they became the parents of three children. Julia E. was born Dec. 12, 1862, and died Aug. 30, 1864. The wife and two sons survive him. He felt very keenly the loss of the only daughter and many, many times manifested his tender feelings with tears streaming down his face by tender and touching allusions to her departure.

He was honest and upright in all his dealings and impressed this feeling upon all those with whom he came in contact. At different times he was school inspector, township clerk and county insurance adjuster for the Farmers' Mutual of Lenawee county. He was a member of the M. E. church for more than 37 years and, while not demonstrative in his actions, always tried to live a consistent Christian life. He was chorister of the Dutch Reformed and M. E. church and Sunday-school a long time before he became a Christian and his entire service as chorister was about the same time as his membership in the church.

He was beloved by all who knew him and will be greatly missed in his home as well as in the community in which he lived. Those who knew him best can testify that he was a kind and sympathetic husband and father and always manifested the greatest interest in their welfare. A consistent Christian, a kind and loving husband and father has been removed from among us.

The funeral services were conducted from his late home Thursday afternoon at 1 o'clock, Rev. Mott officiating.

See the announcement of Steel Hal 2:16½. It appeals to the breeders of fine general purpose horses. Attention, farmers and breeders of Lenawee county! In our midst is owned Steel Hal 2:16½, a horse the type of which is needed to raise general purpose horses with warm blood in their veins. Steel Hal 2:16½, a beautiful horse weighing about 1300 lbs. with chest and muscles of a horse weighing 2000 lbs. His owner, Chas. Maynard, of the bank of Britton, Britton, Mich., having no time to canvas for patronage, and Steel Hal being a strange horse, it was thought advisable to accept the offer of Tuscola county people who want to lease him for the season of 1903 but the owner has been persuaded to promise that if the people of Lenawee county want him to remain here by sending their name and address on or before Feb. 25, 1903, manifesting their desire to book one or more mares. If enough names can be booked (fees $25.00 to insure) thereby insuring a paying season, he will not send him away. Should he stay here he will go to Holloway, Adrian, Tecumseh, Clinton and Macon. The Voice of Experience.

The bride's mother was visiting her, and together they sat in the sewing room. The bride was fixing the sleeve lining of her husband's overcoat.

"Well, I think that's a neat job," remarked the bride, as she finished her task.

The mother examined it and shook her head solemnly.

"You don't like it?" suggested the bride.

"It's too well done," was the reply.

"Too well done?"

"Yes; it's a tailor's job."

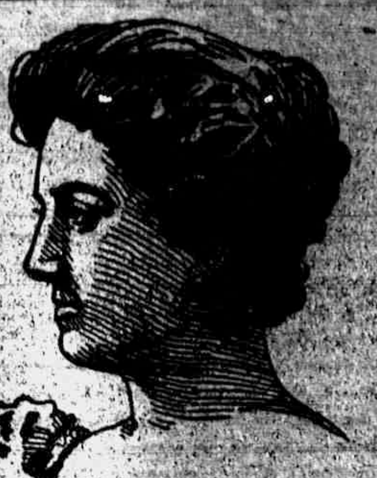
"But if I can do it as well as a tailor"—

"Why, then, of course, you'll have to keep on doing things of that sort. Oh, I know all about it. I tried it myself when I was first married, and later I had to ruin two coats before I could break your father of the habit of bringing everything to me. Just listen to the voice of experience, daughter, and make a bungling job of that, even if you have to tear it all out and do it over again. It's no trouble at all to discourage him now, but it will be a year or so later. It is of the utmost importance that a woman should begin married life right."—Chicago Post.

PRINCESS LUISE DIVORCED.

Royal Heads Will Maintain That She Is Insane.

Dresden, Feb. 12.—The crown prince of Saxony was Wednesday granted a divorce from the former Crown Princess Luise after several doctors had furnished expert testimony in the case. The decree: "The ties of the marriage of the parties are dissolved on account of the adultery of the respondent with M. Giron, a teacher of languages. The blame attaches to the respondent, who is ordered to pay the costs of the proceedings."



CROWN PRINCESS LUISE,
Whose Romantic Episode With M. Giron Finally Terminates In Her Being Divorced.

Although the special court declined to take into account the contention of the former crown princess' lawyers that she was deranged, this theory is fully accepted by King George, Crown Prince Frederick and the Saxon court as the view to be put forth within the kingdom in future, and that reasons of state required the separation.

The same reasons also require that the people shall be brought to believe that the princess acted in an unroyal manner because she was demented. This legend will be nourished until, so far as Saxony is concerned, it will become historic truth. The conduct of the princess is considered by the monarchists to be most destructive to respect for the crown, and they claim that every care must be taken to gloss over her misdeeds.

Something that will do You Good

We know of no way in which we can be of more service to our readers than to tell them of something that will be of real good to them. For this reason we want to acquaint them with what we consider one of the very best remedies on the market for coughs, colds, and that alarming complaint, croup. We refer to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. We have used it with such good results in our family so long that it has become a household necessity. By its prompt use we havn't any doubt but that it has time and again prevented croup. The testimony is given upon our own experience, and we suggest that our readers, especially those who have small children, always keep it in their home as a safeguard against croup.—Camden (S. C.) Detroit, Mich., Feb. 12.—Quiet efforts are being made to back up an effort to get Frank C. Andrews out of Jackson prison. Legislators Handing In Their Bills—De Lisle of Wayne Is Hustling—Upper Peninsula People After Railroad Fare Reduction.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 16.—For a Democrat, Representative De Lisle of Wayne is doing a heap of business in the house. Bonding bills, schoolhouse bills and paving bills follow each other in one long procession. Friday morning his bill bonding Delray for $50,000 for a new schoolhouse went through the house as if greased.

Representative Wallace of Newaygo is going to see that physicians get their fees, even if the public has to pay them. The unique feature of his bill provides that township boards at their annual meetings shall be empowered to take up the bad debt accounts of physicians, carefully examine the same and order compensation for the physician from the public treasury. The bill covers all cases in which patients were "too poor" or "failed to pay."

Representative Richards' joint resolution carries an appropriation of $50,000 for a Michilimackinac monument, and provides for the appointment by the governor of a commission of five to serve without compensation.

The house adjourned Friday until Monday at 8 p. m., after a routine hour session.

The senate could not muster anywhere near a quorum for its 8:30 session Friday morning. Adjournment until Monday next at 9 p. m. was provided for at Thursday's session.

Legislators who took in the upper peninsula junket are handing in bills for the state to pay, averaging about $62.50 for each man. Most of these include items of $5 for sleeping accommodations, $1 for crossing the straits of Mackinaw and $3 per diem for expenses for seven days, making $31, the rest of the bill being made up in mileage. The state is paying these legislators $3 a day for their services, without this $3 "expense" money, and the railroads provided the sleeping accommodation. One legislator presented a bill for eight days' expenses, but it is understood he is willing to take pay for seven. This would make the total cost to the state for the big junket $3,125.

Granting the same rate to the members of the fish junket, the total cost of the minor expedition would approximate $1,000 for fifteen members, or a rough total of $4,000. If the legislators certify to these bills and insist on collecting them there seems to be no way of preventing the expenditure. There are some members of the junketing parties who feel the price is really getting pretty high.

Some of the prominent upper peninsula people are beginning an agitation for a bill to reduce railroad fares in that part of the state from 4 to 3 cents a mile.

Land Commissioner Wildey has a bill to provide for the reforestration of the pine barrens. His plan could only be carried out by the appointment of a host of state agents and special commissioners in different localities, and many of the leading senators are going slow in backing the measure.

The row in Jackson between the board of works and the council will probably be amicably settled in the near future. Representative Jenks, Democrat, has introduced a bill giving the Democratic board of works extraordinary powers over appropriations, providing for the election of aldermen at large and the appointment of a city assessor. The last two provisions Jenks will himself oppose.

The talk among legislators more directly interested in primary election is not very complimentary to Senator Goodell, around whose opposition to the Simons bill those who wish to defeat it will rally. Kent will have its troubles in the house, where Representatives Ladner and Barnaby, from the townships of that county, are openly opposed to the Burns bill.

The committee of the Wayne delegation, consisting of Senator Simons and Representatives Colby, Greusel and De Lisle, labored until Thursday midnight with the Simons bill to make it meet the views of all the Wayne members and prevent any dissension on the floor of the house. Colby, who is chairman of the house elections committee, had the bill reported out Friday morning and ordered printed for the use of the committee.

The only important amendment to the bill to make it satisfactory to the Wayne delegation, Senator Goodell excepted, stipulates that "delegates to state conventions shall not be selected at primary elections."

Senator Cook says unless there is some strenuous kicking from his constituents he will push his bill to give Shiawassee county primary election reform, with the referendum clause attached.

BLOCKS THE WAY

Statehood Bill Is Holding Back Legislation.

MANY APPROPRIATION BILLS

Yet to Be Considered—Only Fourteen More Working Days—Statehood Bill Likely to Be Attached to Postoffice Appropriation Bill.

Washington, Feb. 16.—The senate still finds itself burdened with the statehood bill, and while just as anxious to dispose of it in some way, in order to proceed unimpeded with other business, it is not even as confident of being able to do so as at the beginning of last week. With only fourteen working days of the session left, senators generally feel that the matter must be gotten out of the way.

There are still numerous appropriation bills to be considered. Senator Cullom wants to call up various treaties; Senator Lodge is anxious over the fate of the Philippine bills; Senators Penrose and Fairbanks are clamoring for time for the immigration bill; Senator Aldrich wants his national bank bill considered; Senator McComas is urging the eight-hour bill; Senator Quarles the land entry bill, and Senator Warren his omnibus claims bill. Indeed, there is scarcely a senator who has not some measure which he desires to press, and all feel that the statehood bill may be in the way of consideration.

Senator Quay, moreover, gave notice that he would insist on having the statehood bill taken up promptly after the close of routine morning business each day in order to cut off other measures. All thought of compromise on the statehood matter apparently has been abandoned, and no course except to fight it out now seems open.

It is now quite definitely decided to use the postoffice appropriation bill as the vehicle for carrying the statehood bill, provided the senate shows a willingness to put the measure on one of the appropriation bills.

If the amendment should be carried the statehood fight would be transferred to the postoffice bill, with the resultant danger of an extra session if the fight became protracted.

The chief supporters of the two important treaties now before the senate, the Panama canal treaty and the Cuban reciprocity treaty, are greatly puzzled over the situation. The statehood bill stands squarely across their respective pathways.

The present purpose is not to attempt to take up the Cuban treaty until the Panama treaty is out of the way. Most of the Democratic senators and two or three Republican senators will vote against the Cuban agreement, but if a vote can be reached it is believed that it will be ratified.

VON HOLLEBEN'S RECALL.

Alleged He Used His Official Position For Advertising Purposes.

New York, Feb. 16.—The World today says that from evidence brought out in the United States circuit court, "it appears that Emperor William's sudden and mysterious recall of Baron von Holleben, German ambassador at Washington, closely followed charges that he had used his official position to advertise a certain wine. This wine had been urged in vain by the embassy for use in the christening of the emperor's yacht Meteor by Miss Alice Roosevelt.

"Herbert Limburger, member of the law firm of Hoadley, Lautembach & Johnson, who figured in the litigation in the circuit court at Milwaukee, returned to New York yesterday," says the World, "and says that Count von Quadt, secretary of the German embassy, admitted on cross-examination that Ambassador Holleben had received a letter from the producers of a certain champagne, offering him twenty cases if he would designate that wine for the christening of the Meteor.

"When seen by a reporter at his home, Mr. Limburger gave details of the affair.

"'It is true,' said he, 'that charges were filed last summer against Ambassador von Hollenben with the state department at Washington, accusing him of using his official position to advertise a certain wine, and further accusing him of having sent a wilfully false telegram to the agent at Milwaukee the night after the launching of the Meteor, saying that his wine was used at the christening, when in fact it was not.'"

To Put End to Hazing.

Washington, Feb. 16.—Representative Dick of Ohio has introduced a bill providing that the superintendent of naval academy shall make such rules, subject to the approval of the secretary of navy, as will effectually prevent the practice of hazing at the academy. The bill further provides that any midshipman found guilty of hazing shall be summarily expelled.

Warsaw, Ind., Feb. 16.—Dynamiters attempted to destroy the toll line cables of the Commercial Telephone company in Warsaw Sunday. Pontiac, Mich., Feb. 16.—The Y. M. C. A. convention closed Sunday evening with a rousing farewell meeting at the opera house. An audience of 800 men, which filled the building to its fullest capacity, listened to an address by C. C. Michener.

BLOCKADE RAISED

All Warships Left Venezuelan Ports Sunday.

PEOPLE ARE WILD WITH JOY

Venezuelan Government Immediately Took Military Measures to Crush Revolution—Many Sailing Vessels Await Unloading of Cargoes.

La Guaira, Vez., Feb. 16.—The blockade has been officially raised. The commander of the British cruiser Tribune, the only warship here, sent an officer ashore Sunday morning with the announcement that the Tribune would leave in the afternoon for Trinidad. The populace is wild with joy.

Caracas, Feb. 16.—Since 8 o'clock Saturday morning the Venezuelans were awaiting impatiently the official intimation that the blockade had been raised. Sunday morning the British man-of-war Tribune was still at La Guaira enforcing the blockade and preventing the fishermen from leaving the harbor. At half-past 9 in the morning the government inquired of the United States legation whether it had received any advice and received a reply in the negative.

The government was puzzled until 11 o'clock, when the news reached Caracas that the captain of the Tribune had notified the authorities at La Guaira that the blockade was raised. At 3 o'clock in the afternoon the Tribune left for Trinidad.

The news received from all the Venezuelan ports except Coro and Higuerote is that the foreign warships sailed away Sunday. The government immediately on receiving the news that the blockade had been raised took military measure and sent troops in all directions to crush the revolution without giving the rebels a moment's respite.

Willemstad, Curacao, Feb. 16.—There is great rejoicing among all classes here at the end of the Venezuelan blockade. Many sailing vessels are lying in this port with cargoes for Venezuelan ports, and they will leave today. A number of steamers are loading for the same destination. A great amount of coffee is awaiting transportation from Venezuela to the United States. No one apparently is more glad at the raising of the blockade than those on board the blockading squadron.

NEARLY CAME TO BLOWS.

Jury in Alexander Grave-Robbing Case Failed to Agree.

Indianapolis, Feb. 16.—After being out forty-eight hours, the jury in the case of Dr. J. C. Alexander failed to reach an agreement and was discharged at 10 o'clock Sunday morning. On the final ballots the vote stood [illegible] tion. The attorneys for the state have not decided what they will do.

There were several serious altercations during the consideration of the evidence in the jury room, which came very nearly resulting in blows. Juror Lingenfelter accused Juror White of having come into the case prejudiced against the defendant. Hot words ensued and the matter almost resulted in blows before the interference of others stopped it. This had a disquieting effect on Mr. White, and later in the day he was attacked with heart failure.

The perplexing question in the minds of the jurors, they say, was whether Dr. Alexander had guilty knowledge of the fact that the body of Rose Neidlinger had been unlawfully taken from the grave.

Signed Army Staff Bill.

Washington, Feb. 16.—President Roosevelt late Saturday afternoon signed the army staff bill, and it is now a law. Secretary Root, Secretary Cortelyou and two or three officials of the war department were present at the White House when the president affixed his signature to the measure. All present expressed their gratification that the bill finally had been enacted into law.

SWARM OF VICTIMS

Michigan People Caught By New York Turf Swindlers.

ESTIMATED AT OVER 4000

Dr. Duffield of Dearborn, Mich., Entered Complaint Which Led to Raiding of Offices and Arrest of Promoters—Clergymen Among Victims.

New York, Feb. 16.—On complaint of Samuel P. Duffield of Dearborn, Mich., and other Michigan victims, the police Saturday raided two "get-rich-quick" turf companies. The postal authorities turned the Michigan letters over to the police. The police say a majority of the victims are from the west, largely distributed throughout Michigan. It was on the direct complaint of the Dearborn man that the raids and arrests were made. The places raided were Crawford & Co. and the Reliable Information bureau. Both were operated by the same men. They also published a paper called the Financial Outlook, but most of the pages were taken up with advertisements, showing how easy it is to make money by "playing the horses." These concerns are said to have swindled patrons out of hundreds of thousands of dollars in the past three years.

Information regarding Duffield came from Captain Titus, commanding a precinct, who received the letters from the postoffice authorities. The Duffield letter was merely signed Samuel P. Duffield, Dearborn, Mich. The concerns advertised in various Michigan papers and Captain Titus says there are many sensations in the developments. Prominent men and women, and even clergymen, will be proved to have intentionally done betting on the races by mail. Books in the Crawford & Co.'s office alone show 4,666 victims in Michigan. That state seems to have been the most fertile field for the operations of the turf swindle, other states showing a much smaller number of patrons.

The prisoners are: Henry G. Cartwright, alias Crawford, broker, of Brooklyn; William Treadwell, alias George F. Stone, a broker, of Brooklyn, and Charles E. Goodrich, a clerk, of Manhattan. Cartwright and Treadwell were arrested at 99 Nassau street and Goodrich at 115 Nassau street.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 16.—Dr. Samuel P. Duffield of Dearborn denies that he is one of the 4,666 victims who were bamboozled by an outfit of alleged turf swindlers that were arrested in New York city last Saturday. When informed that it was upon information furnished by himself that three men connected with the Reliable Information bureau and Crawford & Co. were arrested, the doctor was at a loss at first to understand how his name had been connected with the story.

"I have not been defrauded by anybody," said he, "and I do not play the horses."

But upon reflection he remembered that about three months ago or thereabouts he had received one of those circular letters from New York, and, sizing it up at once as a swindle, he wrote a letter to the postmaster-general, inclosing the letter, and expressing the opinion that such proceedings ought to be stopped. Hence the arrests of last Saturday.

Mrs. Burd was present and pitched into Mrs. Sample. Burd rescued her.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

A Night Alarm.

Worse than alarm of fire at night is the brassy cough of croup, which sounds like the children's death knell and it means death unless something is done quickly. Foley's Honey and Tar never fails to give instant relief and quickly cures the worst forms of croup. Mrs. P. L. Cordier of Mannington, Ky., writes: "My three-year-old girl had a severe case of croup; the doctor said she could not live. I got a bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar, the first dose gave quick relief and saved her life. Refuse substitutes. J. J. Orr.

How much the men admire a woman who does not expect a man to be better than men can be.

A Most Fatal Gift.

Would be the power of foreseeing events. This would destroy hope. A knowledge of the future would unmake happiness. There are, of course, some things about the future we do not know If, for instance, a lack of energy, ambition and loss of appetite shows itself we know it will be followed by serious complaints if not checked. Often liver and kidney trouble follow quickly. In any event Electric Bitters will restore you to health. It strengthens, builds up and invigorates run down systems. Only 50c. A Thousand Dollars Thrown Away.

Mr. W. W. Baker, of Plainview, Neb., writes "My wife had long trouble for over fifteen years. We tried a number of doctors and spent over a thousand dollars without any relief. She was very low and I lost all hope, when a friend suggested trying Foley's Honey and Tar, which I did; and thanks be to this great remedy it saved her life. She is stronger and enjoys better health than she has ever known in ten years. We shall never be without Foley's Honey and Tar and would ask those afflicted to try it." J. J. Orr.

THE MYSTERY OF GRASLOV.

By Ashley Towne.

"That is too much! One of the most celebrated cases in all Russia, and they have not been in the dungeons more than three days! The matter could scarcely have gone beyond Tomsk."

"Nevertheless I spoke truly."

"Then there is something about it I do not know. When I reflect, it seems of course that this must be the case. Else why should we receive secret orders to capture—arrest, if you like—an American and a convict already punished and—well, see that they become lost to the world?"

Princess Olga gave a gasp as she heard this.

"There is one thing about it," said Unsgethop, who was now getting drunk enough to be independent and indiscreet, "if something is not done soon I shall wash my hands of it. I don't like the looks of it. Of course, one might kill a blacksmith convict and no inquiry would be made, but that American—that is different."

"Keep quiet for a few days. Have you not seen that the governor has a guest?"

"Yes, a beautiful one."

"That is Princess Olga of the great and powerful Neslerovs. She is distantly related to the governor. And, since you are interested, I will tell you the story as I know it."

"Oh, there is a story, then. I thought so."

"There is a story, and it is one which the governor would not like to have brought into prominence while the princess is here. The elder brother of Neslerov married Alexandra, a cousin of Princess Olga. This was something like twenty-three or twenty-four years ago. No; I think it must be twenty-five or six. Well, they were well mated, those two. Prince Alexis was the heir to the great estate of Graslov and his hereditary title, besides being Prince Neslerov, was Duke of Graslov. A year or so after this happy marriage a son was born to this couple. He was named Alexis, after his father. He was a fine young fellow, so I have heard, and grew sturdily. When he was a year old, or perhaps two, Prince Alexis died. Now, it so happened that the old Duke of Graslov, who was still living, had had a quarrel with Princess Alexandra. Her branch of the family was not friendly to his, and things did not go right, and they quarreled. Just what that had to do with the story I do not know, but I am telling you what everybody in Perm knew at that time.

"At that time Prince Nicholas, now governor of Tomsk, was fifteen years of age, and was the favorite of his father. It was commonly reported that the duke preferred to see his younger son inherit the title and estate rather than have it go to the son of the princess. Anyway, one day, twenty years ago, the young prince, then about three years old, or perhaps less, was drowned in the Kama. At least that is what was said. The boy wandered away from his nurse and walked to the river. Some of his garments were found on the river bank, and it would seem as though the little fellow had intended to follow the example of the boys of the serfs he had seen and was going to take a river bath. However, the body was never found and the poor princess was broken hearted. In a year she, too, died, and at the time her branch of the Neslerovs charged foul play. It was openly said they accused the old duke and Prince Nicholas of having murdered her. It was not proved and was not tried. The two branches remained at feud. The old duke died and Prince Nicholas entered into his inheritance, but he has not used the title, probably out of consideration for the feelings of his relatives.

"Now we come down to the present day. It was openly charged by some of the other Neslerovs that the servants of the house of Graslov were involved, and it was thought at one time that certain others not of the household knew something. Among these was the family of an ironworker, Michael Paulpoff, consisting of himself, his wife and a child. But the Paulpoffs disclaimed all knowledge, and were so stupid and innocent looking that they were dropped from consideration. But it seems that an enmity has long existed in their obscure minds against the governor, and they have been secretly working to fasten the murder of Princess Alexandra upon him. Whether they knew anything at the time or whether some one dying told them, I do not know. Certain it is that they have some knowledge they will use against our governor. They were sent to Siberia and were unable to work at the mystery. But this accursed American came and was interested. He swore he would fasten this murder upon Neslerov because Neslerov had loved that American girl, daughter of Gordon, the engineer. Now you see why the American, Denton, and the powerful young blacksmith were arrested, and why, even though in the dungeons, nothing more can be done until this princess leaves. Neslerov declares he is innocent, but the power and influence of her family, if joined with the efforts of the American and the Paulpoffs, might destroy him. Am I understood?"

"Yes, perfectly. Neslerov is ours, and we are his. We must be loyal. Let the prisoners remain in the dungeons until we are free to act. Then—well, even now we might forget to send them food."

"That, Unsgethop, is the very idea. The princess will dance merrily upon this floor while they starve to death on the one below."

The two police officers chuckled, and Olga, having learned enough, crept back to her room. She was passing through the upper corridor when she was startled by a shadow as of a man.

A young officer in command of the palace guard was making his rounds. He stopped short when he saw the princess; then, discreet as all young officers about the palace were, he saluted and was about to pass on. She stopped him.

"Lieutenant," she said, "this is my room. I wish to speak to you alone."

He hesitated. He knew that she was the Princess Olga. He knew she would not seek his presence for pleasure. He feared the displeasure of Neslerov, but the winning beauty of Olga conquered, and he slipped into her room.

"What is your name?" she asked, her manner turning at once to that of the stern woman of business.

"Michael Dermsky, princess."

"Your position?"

"Lieutenant of the guard."

"How would you like to be a major of cavalry?"

"Major of cavalry! Such a promotion at my age—from a lieutenant?"

"It is possible—even more is possible. But you must obey me."

"You are the Princess Olga, but I must obey the governor of Tomsk."

"Wait," she said, and from a secret receptacle she took a folded paper upon which were a few words and a great seal. She held it for him to read. He dropped to his knees.

"The seal of his majesty the czar!" he said in an awestricken voice. "I obey—command me—I obey."

"Rise. When will you be relieved?"

"Soon."

"Come to me and say nothing to any one."

"I obey; I will be dumb."

Quickly, though she was weary, Olga sat down and wrote a letter. It was scarcely more than finished when the officer returned.

"Is there not a train to Tobolsk this morning?"

"There is. The train your highness came on returns today."

"Take this letter to Tobolsk. Give it into no other hand but that of Count de Muloff, governor general of western Siberia. Do you understand?"

"I do. And if the governor should"—

"Remain at Tobolsk. I have arranged for that in the letter. You need never fear the present governor of Tomsk."

He bowed, placed the letter in his bosom and retired. With a sigh of weariness and of relief the princess threw herself upon her bed and was soon asleep.

CHAPTER XIII.

A TERRIBLE SITUATION.

THE palace of the governor of Tomsk was brilliantly lighted, and carriages crowded the plaza before it. Gayly uniformed officers and fashionably attired ladies passed from them into the spacious rooms. The governor himself was at his best and was proud of the beautiful relative for whom he had given this suddenly arranged reception.

Princess Olga, who had slept much of the day after her wearying experiences of the night before, showed no effects of her exhaustion, but received the guests with that calmness, that queenly style, which was all her own.

The garrison band blared its Russian music, and the atmosphere in the rooms was laden with perfume. It was a strange and motley gathering, but Olga, who had traveled much in strange places, as well as in centers of civilization, looked upon the crowd with complacency.

A colonel of cavalry, with his handsome wife, when they came to greet her was followed by a Cossack chief clad in the barbaric splendor of his rank. A Manchurian mandarin, with a long sword on one side and a short one on the other, wearing his native dress, marched with the crowd, a distinctive figure. He had come to Tomsk to confer for his government with Neslerov concerning the crossing of the border into Manchuria. The new railway brought to Tomsk mighty men from places never before heard of by many who lived in Tomsk.

A Persian prince who had but the day before arrived from Tobolsk, where he had spent a week studying the convict system—a system impossible to his country—added his gorgeousness to the throng.

If Olga was surprised that at so short a notice so great a gathering could be summoned in that Siberian capital, she gave no sign. She accepted the homage as one who was born to it.

Young officers vied with one another to be near her. Grizzled veterans looked at her and smiled, for it made them glad to see so lovely a princess at Tomsk. By far the most distinguished looking man in the throng was the colonel of cavalry, whose wife had long been a semi-invalid. He found time to devote some attention to the princess while his wife rested from the weariness the excitement brought upon her.

Olga, whose travels had given her a clear insight to human character, singled Colonel Barakoff out at once as a man of sterling integrity and a fearless soldier. To him she was extremely gracious, and encouraged him to talk, and he was proud of her attention. When the dancing began, the crowd scattered through the palace, and it was not long before Colonel Barakoff and Olga found themselves sitting in a retired spot with the colonel's wife.

"It is the first time in my experience," said the colonel, "and that has not been a short one, that one of our noble ladies has condescended to visit our capital. And now one of the powerful house of Neslerov is here. It causes wonder that she would forsake the pleasures and gayeties of St. Petersburg for this dismal place."

"I have seen enough of St. Petersburg gayeties to last for a time," answered Olga. "My life is not all spent in pleasure. I am not yet your age, colonel, but I have learned that to be happy and to be contented with oneself one must find some work to do, and do it well."

"You are very young," said the colonel slowly, "and very wealthy to have found that out. I, of course, learned it long ago, but my age is three times yours. You say you have found pleasure in work. Would it be presumptuous to ask what work has found favor in your eyes?"

"Presumptuous? Not at all, colonel. I am always pleased to talk with one who is able to appreciate. I have become thoroughly convinced that there are faults in our social system. I am neither a nihilist nor a socialist, but I do think that the wealthy nobles of Russia are not doing their full duty to those who, it is true, are dependent upon them, but upon whom also they are dependent."

"It is a bold stand for a young woman to take. Men have been sent to Siberia for those sentiments."

"And the sentiment sent me to Siberia, but not under sentence. I have come partly to visit the governor, who is a relative, and, more than that, to study the convict system as worked out under his rule in Tomsk."

The colonel became cautious.

"You will find plenty to study," he answered, "but I fancy you will not proceed rapidly. Our system—well, it is the same, I suppose, as that in vogue at Tobolsk."

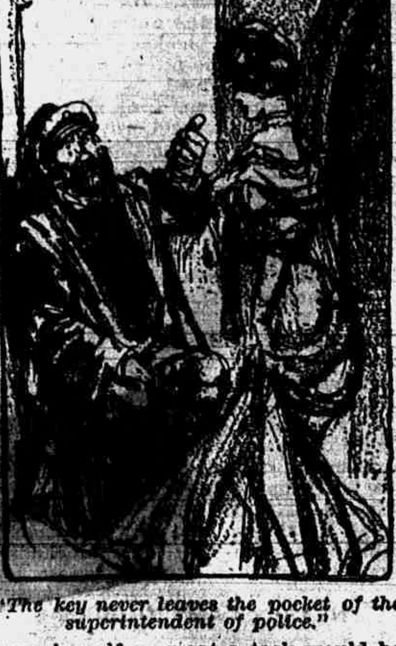
"Perhaps it will prove so. I am acquainted with Count de Muloff, governor general, and I know that, while he is a stern man, he is just. When he can be merciful without lending an apparent aid to the unworthy, he does not hesitate to show leniency. I hope I shall find the same spirit prevailing here."

The colonel smiled grimly.

"Shall you, then, write a book upon the penal system?"

"I may do so, although that is not yet one of my plans. I may tell you in confidence, however, that I have the entire confidence of the czar and that he is interested in the outcome of my studies."

"In my youthful days we did not hear of such things," said the colonel. "A young woman who at your age and with your wealth and position took upon herself so great a task would be sent forthwith to a lonely castle and kept a semiprisoner."



"The key never leaves the pocket of the superintendent of police."

"I fear that some of that same spirit dominates our society today."

"I think it will prevail for a time."

"Where would you advise me to go to study the convict system at its worst?"

"Its worst? Do you not wish to see it at its best?"

"I understand it at its best."

"Well, it is a serious matter to advise, yet if you are working under the protection of the czar we must help you. I should say Tivoloffsky."

"I shall go there. Where are your prisons?"

The colonel rubbed his grizzled mustache.

"We have guardhouses in all settlements."

"Dungeons?"

"Not many dungeons. There are dungeons under this very palace, but they are obsolete. I do not think they have been used in years."

"Then they could be inspected."

"I see no reason why they should not. But that would be for the governor to say. Shall I ask him?"

"No; since they are under his palace I shall have an opportunity later. I suppose they are entered by way of a secret door."

"There was a door at the end of the police offices," replied the colonel. "Of course, being a soldier, I know scarcely anything about them. They are wholly in charge of the police."

"But you formerly had no police in Siberia save the Cossack guards."

"True, but I was not at Tomsk then. I came here from Tobolsk."

Olga spoke then to the colonel's wife, and the subject of the dungeons did not recur.

Neslerov came and presented a young officer, a member of a noble family, and he asked Olga for a waltz. She thanked the colonel, and they did not meet again. The dancing continued till a very late hour, after which there was a supper served with the true Russian prodigality. Olga was becoming weary, but she maintained her usual spirits. She chanced to pass near the governor and heard a young officer speaking.

"Lieutenant Dermsky is not present. Whom will you name as the lieutenant of the palace guard?"

"None will be necessary," answered Neslerov. "Itzig will be at his post. As it is nearly morning, no more will be necessary. Dismiss the guard, take them to the banquet hall and give them supper."

Soon after that Olga found occasion to cross the hall to the offices of police. People were passing to and fro, and no one could think it strange that the princess went where she pleased. She found at the end of the suit of rooms devoted to police affairs a small apartment, the door of which was closed. Turning, to see that Neslerov was not in the hall—she did not care for the guests—she entered. Sitting there in lonely state was a man. He was not particularly agreeable looking and seemed to be of a stupid order.

"Are you not being feasted with the others?" asked the princess.

"No; they forget poor Itzig," was the reply.

"What is your duty here?"

"To guard the door to the passage yonder. Stupid! No one could enter. The key never leaves the pocket of the superintendent of police."

Jansky had been constant in his attendance at the bottle and already showed the effect of his heavy potations.

"You shall not be overlooked," said Olga. "I will send you some refreshments."

She first went to her room and returned to the banquet hall. She ordered one of the servants to open a fresh bottle of wine, which was done. Then a tray was prepared, and she ordered it taken to Itzig. Quickly, without a second's delay, a small vial in her hand was emptied into the wine.

"Take this also," she said.

When she returned to the throne, the guests were leaving. They came in throngs to bid her adieu, and she saw the last one leave. Jansky, Neslerov and the servants were left.

"I am exhausted," said Neslerov. "I feel completely worn out. And you, cousin, must be weary also."

"I am," she answered. "I shall not be long getting to sleep."

"Nor I. I hope you enjoyed your ball."

"Very much. I thank you for the kind attention. And now good night."

"Good night."

"I'm going, but I shall first make a round of inspection," said Jansky. "There being no guard this morning, it will do no harm. It will not be daylight for two hours."

They parted, and Olga went to her room, but not to sleep. Therese was asleep in a chair, waiting for her mistress.

"Therese!" said Olga.

"Oh, pardon me! I was asleep!" said Therese, starting up.

"Hush! I do not wish any one to hear us. I have work for us both to do."

"I am ready. Command me, princess."

"I know, faithful Therese, but this is work that will require all your nerve. Listen. The ball is over and the guests have gone. Chance has favored us tonight. It has enabled me to plot and plan for what we are to do. Neslerov dismissed the guard, and there will be in a short time no one awake in the palace. The superintendent of police carries the key to the dungeons, and he is now half drunk. The door to the dungeons is guarded by a stupid fool named Itzig. I found him at his post, and sent him a bottle of wine and tray of food. Into the wine I poured that vial of toothache medicine I obtained from you. It is enough to make any one sleep for hours. Where Jansky sleeps I do not know; but we must find him. We must wait—it is too soon—but in half an hour it will be safe to descend. Jansky said it would not be daylight for two hours. That will give us an hour and a half to work."

"And that work?"

"To release the American and Vladimir from the dungeons and send them to old Paulpoff to get him to safety. He must not be harmed, for we want his testimony."

"Good!" said Therese, with a shiver. "It is grand—but dangerous."

Olga opened a traveling bag and took therefrom a silver mounted revolver.

"I do not wish to kill," she said; "but if we are discovered there will be trouble, and I must succeed. Come now, for the honor of the Neslerovs and the house of Graslov!"

The princess opened her door and peered into the corridor. The lights were still burning as brightly as during the ball, but no one was in sight.

"Come—all is silent as the grave," she said. "Even if we meet some one, it will not cause suspicion."

She led the way, and Therese, shivering with terror, followed. The great stairway and hall were deserted, but from the little guardroom at the end of the police quarters there came the sound of curses.

"Stupid blockhead!" said the voice of Jansky. "Drunk! Who brought him this bottle of wine?"

With a quick motion Olga whisked Therese into the same room where she had crouched to listen to Jansky and Unsgethop. There came the sound of unsteady footsteps. Jansky, with the unfinished bottle of Itzig's wine in his hand, went drunkenly to his office.

"I'll finish this—then go to bed," he muttered.

He finished it, and it finished him. It was not ten minutes before his own eyes closed in that terrible sleep from which he could not arouse himself until the effect of the drug had passed off.

"Come!" said Olga.

Nervously and quickly she rifled the sleeping man's pockets and found a bunch of keys. Swiftly, then, these two rushed to Itzig's room and, shutting the door, barred it on the inside.

"Now we can work without molestation," said Olga.

She tried several keys in the lock of an iron door that formed part of the rear wall, but without success. Finally she found one that turned the rusty bolt, and the door swung open. This door led into a small passage, in which there were various articles—lanterns, whips, chains and weapons. Olga quickly chose a lantern which showed it had been recently used and lighted it. At the end of the passage was an iron grating forming a door, and this, too, she unlocked with Jansky's keys.

Beyond this was a flight of stone steps leading downward, and then all was darkness. Olga, holding the lantern above her head, led the way down the steps. The stones were cold and damp and slippery as she neared the bottom. The dark atmosphere sent a chill through her, but the brave girl did not falter. Therese came creeping after her, shivering with fear. They did not count the number of steps, but knew there were many. At last they stood on a cold stone floor.

"Now, which way?" she asked, holding the lantern to flash its light as far as possible around her.

She could see that they were in a large chamber from which various passages broke away in every direction.

"We must not linger—to lose time would be to lose the game," she said. "Choose this passage and follow it to the end."

She turned into the nearest passage, and the gleams of the lantern were reflected from slippery walls. As she walked she examined these walls for doors. There were arches that led to other passages and smaller ones that opened into chambers that had evidently been once used for prison cells, for chains were hanging on the walls.

The lantern in Olga's hand flashed its light into every nook and cranny until at last she reached the end of that passage. Making sure Therese was close behind, she turned her steps into another passage, running apparently at right angles with the other. This she traversed in the same way until the very bigness of the place and its silence began to awe her.

The first courage that had led her to the desperate act gradually gave way to the awful gloom and mystery of the place. But in its stead there came a determination not to relinquish the search until she had found the unfortunate victims of Neslerov's hate or proved that they were not there. She walked on, gradually increasing her pace. A door at last greeted her vision—a real door that swung on hinges.

"At last, perhaps," she said.

Perhaps Both.

"I haven't seen your cashier for several days past."

"No; he's gone out of town."

"Ah! Gone for a rest, eh?"

"We haven't found out yet whether he's gone for a rest or to escape it."

Get the Most Out of Your Food

You don't and can't if your stomach is weak. A weak stomach does not digest all that is ordinarily taken into it. It gets tired easily, and what it fails to digest is wasted.

Among the signs of a weak stomach are uneasiness after eating, fits of nervous headache, and disagreeable belching.

"I have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla at different times for stomach troubles, and a run down condition of the system, and have been greatly benefited by its use. I would not be without it in my family. I am troubled especially in summer with weak stomach and nausea and find Hood's Sarsaparilla invaluable." E. B. HICKMAN, W. Chester, Pa.

GIVING TO TECUMSEH

The building or Rather $8,000 to Build it. The Gift will be acted upon at the Next Meeting of the Board.

Several months ago the school board wrote to Andrew Carnegie asking for money to build a library building and one day last week received a reply which gives to Tecumseh $8,000, with which to build a library building. The school board will act on the matter at their next meeting. Certainly this amount will build a beautiful building and Tecumseh is grateful in every way.

QUIET WEDDING.

Miss Mary McIntyre and Mr. Ned Wood

WERE UNITED IN MARRIAGE

At 7:30 at the Bride's Home Thursday Evening in the Presence of Only Immediate Relatives.

Thursday evening about 7:30 a quiet home wedding was celebrated at the home of Mrs. Lydia McIntyre. Her daughter, Miss Mary, being united in marriage to Mr. Ned Wood.

At 7:30 the bridal party entered the parlor and took their place before Rev. W. F. Jones, who spoke the impressive words which made them man and wife.

After the happy couple had received congratulations an elegant wedding supper was served.

Only immediate relatives of the contracting parties witnessed the ceremony. The guests from out of town were, Mr. and Mrs. Charles McIntyre and Will McIntyre, of Dundee.

Mr. Wood is a teamster for the village and has won many friends during his stay in Tecumseh and he has gained for his life partner one of Tecumseh's most promising young ladies.

"LIBERTY BELLES"

At the Bradley Opera House

FRIDAY NIGHT.

A Good House Witnessed the Performance.

Nearly every seat was taken at the New Bradley opera house Friday evening to witness the performance of the musical comedy, "Liberty Belles." The play was bright and cheerful and every one present enjoyed a good evening's amusement.

Some of the spectators thought the price charged for admission a little high for the quality of the entertainment. Perhaps it was but then it must be remembered that Tecumseh is only a small town, and that with companies of this size with the house full, there are not enough seats to be sold to make a large amount of money. In fact it is well to keep in mind that we are getting good shows in Tecumseh this winter and that we have not been obliged to listen to an old-fashioned "rotten" show during the season, so we are really glad to pay a little more than usual for a good evening's entertainment once in a while.

A good load of people came down from Clinton and Manchester on the special.

MRS. J. E. ROWLAND

Lies in a Very Crisical Condition from a

STROKE OF PARALYSIS

This is Her First Attack and Hopes are Advanced for her Recovery.

About ten o'clock this morning Mrs. J. E. Rowland suffered an attack of paralysis. The stroke came so unexpected that her daughter, Miss Etta Rowland who resides with her was wholly unprepared.

Dr. Conklin was hastily summoned and after an examination, found her right side to be completely paralized.

Mrs. Rowland is quite an elderly lady and has never before suffered an attack of paralysis. She was feeling quite well just before the stroke came and the news was quite a shock to her neighbors, who are doing all that kind hands can do.

At the time of this writing the sufferer is in a very critical condition, but hopes are advanced for her recovery.

NO SMALLPOX.

It is Now Certain that there is No Smallpox

IN TECUMSEH

And Very Doubtful if There Even has been a Case of Varioloid.

There was quite an excitement two weeks ago about a case of what some of the doctors called varioloid. It was certainly of mild form at the worst. A Miss Ames, who lives on Ottawa street, was the afflicted one, and it is now discovered that about one year since she had the same breaking out and was fully as sick as at this time. Dr. Maddox, the health officer, quarantined this case.

The Majors family, who live on Maumee street, were also quarantined, but there has been no other case of any kind in Tecumseh and now it is hoped that all is quiet again. In fact, there is much doubt if there has even been a mild case of varioloid. Should there be a case of smallpox in Tecumseh, the HERALD will be the first to let the people know so there used be no fear in the surrounding country.

VALENTINE DAY.

Many Pretty Parties Given to Commemorate the Occasion.

FEBRUARY FOURTEENTH

Celebrated by both Young and Old.

Mr. and Mrs. R. N. Lowe gave a military heart party Saturday evening to about thirty of their friends. The two making the best score of the evening were Mrs. Levi Hayden and P. W. A. Fitzsimmons. The four at Table 3, Mrs. Albert Lawrence, Miss May DeWolfe, C. F. Patterson and F. B. Wood, won the prizes.

The chief feature of the evening was a postoffice of which Chas. Bidwell was postmaster. The guests received many valentines both pretty and comic. Buffet refreshments were served. The dining room was beautifully decorated for the occasion.

* * *

Miss Katherine Anderson delightfully entertained about forty of her lady friends at hearts at her home, corner of Pottawatamie and Pearl streets Saturday afternoon. Mrs. Fred Wood received head prize, winning six games, and Mrs. T. M. Downing second winning five games. The house was beautifully decorated in daffodills. The guests from out of town were Mrs. T. M. Downing, of Pomeroy, O.; Mrs. J. J. Dodds, of Detroit, and Mrs. Chas. Glover, of Coshocton, O.

* * *

Miss Margaret Ferguson entertained her girl friends at a valentine party at her home on West Chicago street Saturday evening. The interior of the house was tastily decorated for the occasion and made an appropriate surrounding in which to group the happy company.

Although no boys were favored with invitations, the hostess still had the interests of her friends in view and made arrangements with a number of those invited to don male attire. This plan was readily agreed to.

The card feature was progressive authors at which Miss Lulu Aylesworth won first prize and Miss Grace Steinhoff the consolation. Dainty refreshments were served after which souvenirs were given.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Levi Hayden and Miss Camilla Mead entertained the Military Pedro Club and a few other friends the last evening at Hayden residence, corner of Union and Logan streets, in a most delightful manner. There were eight tables of guests. Mrs. T. M. Downing of Pomeroy, O., and Bert Hagerman, of New Mexico, were among those who enjoyed their hospitality.

ROUND ABOUT US.

Frank Gibson, who lives east of Britton, was quite badly hurt in a runaway Saturday morning. He was at the feed mill when his team became frightened and threw him out breaking several ribs.

The Raisin River has been on a ramage down in Monroe. An ice jam west of the Lake Shore bridge resulted in a flood that swamped the village for two blocks on each side of the river. The high water threatened to put out the fires at the St Mary's Academy but timely assistance of the city firemen removed danger.

The editor of a neighboring exchange received the following inquiry the other day: "What ails my hens—every morning I find two or three of them lying on their back, toes curled up, never to rise again." The editor replied: "Your hens are dead—the only thing you can do is to manufacture them into chicken salad or bury them."

Fifteen divorce cases on the calendar for the February term of court in Hillsdale county. Think of it, all ye who yearn to wed, and remember that the ties of matrimony are only temporary, and that he or she who wants release from irksome combinations, has only to move to Hillsdale county where divorces are granted with neatness and dispatches.—Hudson Post.

The Kansas man isn't in it any more, especially when it comes to cutting stove wood. We have it from a reliable source that Sam and John Hibbard on last Monday cut 29 cords of wood in 3 1-3 hours. The saw got so hot that each block was set fire and burnt to ashes by the time it dropped. Not only that, but it kept two men busy with forty gallons of water to keep the handles from burning out of the saw—Metamora Record.

A man over near Tecumseh by the name of Moon got married, and that was a change in the moon. In due time his wife presented him with a daughter, that was a new moon, then he went to town and got drunk for joy, that was a full moon. When he started for home he had 25c in his pocket, that was the last quarter. When he got home, his mother-in-law met him at the door with a rolling pin and there was a total eclipse, he also saw stars. —Blissfield Advance.

Evangelist Moorehouse has created a sensation in Coldwater by a public attack on dancing and card-playing Christians. He said: "Dancing is hugging set to music. If I should see anyone hugging my wife as I saw women hugged at a dance at the hotel where I board I would horsewhip him. A young man told me that while he was waltzing with a married woman in this town who is a member of a church, she said to him: 'I can dance better if you hug me tighter.'"—Hudson Post

Richard Lambert, who robbed Rev. Houseman's house in Adrian about a week ago and then fled to Chicago, was brought to Adrian Friday evening by Sheriff Shepherd and placed behind the bars. Lambert refuses to talk and the turnkey at the Chicago police station gives him the credit of being the most obstinate person ever passed through his hands. He was arrainged before Justice [illegible] yesterday. When found he had [illegible] dollars left out of the [illegible] which he stole from the Houseman home.

The old story has started on its rounds again. This time it was Mark Hanna who once gave a banquet in Ohio to fifty farmers. The dessert was to be twenty five watermelons. So the day before the dinner Mr. Hanna had them pulled and poured a pint of Piper Heidsick wine into each melon, then placed them on ice. After the dinner each farmer was given a half of a watermelon. They began tasting them, winked at each other, looked wise, and before the affair was over every farmer was slipping the seeds into his vest pocket.—Ex.

Conductor Dan Ketchum is rather sly and this week it became known that he and his house-keeper, Miss Joanna Bailey were married Dec. 31, 1892, but had kept the matter a secret, for reasons best known to themselves. Dan should remember this is only half fair to his friends, and he has heretofore had the reputation of always exacting full fare from all. The lady has had charge of his home for some time, and it was proper to conductor to the altar. We congratulate both, and hope they may live in prosperity until able to celebrate their silver wedding—for which we will ask for "tickets please."—Adrian Press.

Mr. Jas. Newton lost a fine young steer last Thursday by the falling of an ice covered straw stack. Mr. Newton returned from Onsted Thursday early in the afternoon and discovered that the large straw stack had toppled over and three steers were missing from the number that was in the barn yard. He suspected that they must be under the straw and ice. His son, Charles, was informed and help from the neighborhood soon arrived and two of the steers were taken out alive but the third was killed by the frozen straw. The steer was a young one and Mr. Newton feels thankful that it was not one of the valuable milch cows or work horses which were near at the time of the downfall.—Onsted News.

HEARKEN YE

To the Voice of Tecumseh People.

If you will but listen to your friends and neighbors, they will tell you how the pains and aches of a bad back, the annoyance of urinary troubles, the nervousness, the restlessness that come from kidney ills, can be relieved and cured. Read what one Tecumseh citizen says.

Mr. George Merritt, the well known proprietor of the cigar manufactory, says: "I can testify to the honesty and worth of Doan's Kidney Pills. There is no humbug about them. I was annoyed for some time with a dull aching pain in my back at times quite severe. I heard so much about Doan's Kidney Pills that I procured a box at C. A. Wright's drug store and after taking them a short time I found they were helping me. Finally the pain in my back disappeared entirely. Doan's Kidney Pills are a splendid remedy for all kidney ailments."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents per box. Foster-Milburn company, Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

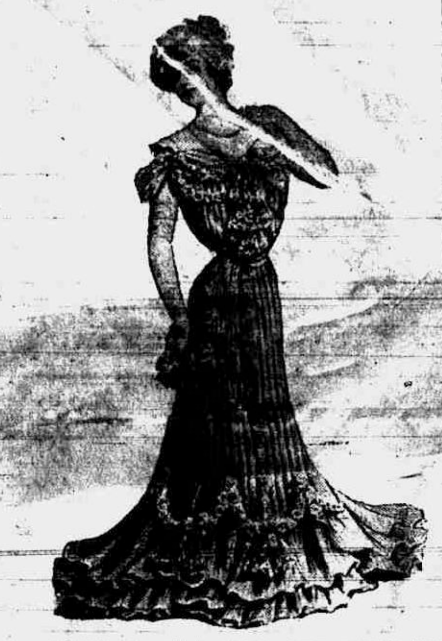
LATEST FASHION NOTES.

A Handsome Ball Gown.

Crepe de Chine, softly draping Louisine and Liberty silks are the preferred fabrics for this season's ball gown, and the dainty robe shown below is therefore of pastel blue crepe de Chine, entirely tucked and trimmed in an attractive manner with handsome silver lace, chiffon rosettes and two flounces around the bottom of the skirt. Corticelli sewing silk being employed in making up the entire gown, which is lined with pale blue taffeta.



White, in all textiles, has never before been so popular as now. For visiting wear, the gown of white broadcloth is par excellence, and in any of the soft, pliable fabrics it is attractive for more ceremonious functions, as are also the satin-faced cloths and crepes de chine and voile in silk. Self-colored or contrasting laces may be introduced with good effect as the main decoration, with touches of delicate colored panne and fancy passementerie ornaments. It is prophesied that fringes, tassels and ball pendants are to be used to an alarming extent. One gown of leaf-green broadcloth that bore a foreign stamp was adorned with unique pearl and lace ornaments of grapes on the corsage, and entredoux of white and black lace formed the charming decoration of both the waist and skirt.

WAS HE MURDERED?

Mystery Surrounds Death of a Man Near Adrian.

Adrian, Mich., Feb. 16.—Local surgeons and Sheriff Shepherd are struggling with a mysterious death, and it may develop another murder has been committed. John Hart, an unmarried farmhand 40 years old, whose home was "where he took off his hat," was found dead in his bed early Sunday morning on a farm rented by Putnam Force, in Madison township.

Putnam Force had been at work cutting wood Saturday and was assisted by his father-in-law, Julius Van Doren, and John Hart, the deceased. At 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon the trio decided to go to Adrian, nearly four miles, to celebrate the close of the week's work. At 10 o'clock a start back home was made, but when half way out, while driving at a rapid gait, the conveyance broke down and all the men were thrown violently out, a wheel being broken.

Force went back to borrow a vehicle of a neighbor. Hart and Van Doren continued home on foot. Force finally caught up with them, and while he put out his horse on reaching home the other men prepared to retire.

The first knowledge that Hart was dead, Force says, was upon entering his room about 5 o'clock Sunday morning he found Hart dead in bed.

Examination disclosed the fact that Hart had a large hole near the back of the head, from which considerable blood had flowed.

General mystery surrounds the case. A coroner's jury was summoned and an inquest will take place Tuesday.

A JUNKET TO JACKSON.

Delegation Inspects the Prison—Convict Addressed Them.

Jackson, Mich., Feb. 14.—The first afternoon train leaving Lansing yesterday carried over half a hundred legislators, who had set out to see the state prison.

The delegation was shown about the prison in the afternoon, after which they faced 700 convicts in the audience room during an entertainment by the convicts. The feature of the chapel experience was an address by an inmate serving a life sentence and who was educated in the prison school. His address was surprisingly brilliant and he joked the legislators in a way they will remember.

Judging from the expressions of legislators who saw the old west wing of the prison, which it is proposed to rebuild, there will be no trouble in passing the necessary appropriation of $147,000 for a new steel block of cells. The old structure has done service since 1846.

Another appropriation of $10,000 is asked for the furnishing of the new dining hall and kitchen, and the construction of a cold storage plant. The building itself is completed, a substantial brick structure, with cement floors, but the full $20,000 granted at the last session of the legislature for this work has been expended. Another $12,000 is asked for general repairs.

Warden Vincent entertained the legislators at lunch last evening. Today is being spent by the committee in examining the shirt-making and other shops and investigating the condition of prison labor.

GRANGE IS GROWING.

Executive Committee Met at Lansing Friday.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 14.—The executive committee of the State Grange met here Friday and arranged to loan the county of Ingham $8,000 for its building fund. The loan will be for five years and will bear 4 per cent interest. The committee also decided to purchase $10,000 of Portland village bonds. The state organization is on easy street.

Master Horton announced that the grange is having a remarkable growth in Michigan. Since the recent meeting of the State Grange in December applications for thirty charters have been received. If this growth is kept up during the year, 1903 will break the record for increase in membership.

During the ensuing fortnight about 180 conferences, designed to awaken enthusiasm and interest in the objects of the order, will be held in this state. Fourteen deputies will conduct these conferences, which are expected to result in great good to the order.

Good Road Makers in Detroit.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 14.—The annual meeting of the American Road Makers and International Good Roads conference, which convened Friday at the Wayne hotel, has thus far brought together over 100 men, prominent in the good roads movement, who have exploited some notable achievements and promulgated many interesting ideas. The system adopted a few years ago in New York state, which has brought about wonderful results, was explained in a masterly manner by William Pierson Judson, deputy state engineer and author of "City Roads and Pavements." Many prominent men throughout the country are in attendance, including Hon. Edward A. Bond, state engineer of New York; Hon. C. C. Bell of Missouri, and Martin Dodge, director of inquiries of Washington. ——— in Michigan was spoken of by ex-Senator H. S. Earle, chairman of the Michigan highway committee, appointed to build sample roads and disseminate instruction.

Y. M. C. A. Feasted at Pontiac.

Pontiac, Mich., Feb. 14.—The big event Friday in the Y. M. C. A. convention was the big banquet given last night in the Methodist church. Covers were laid for 450, and nearly all were filled. The church parlors were prettily decorated in red and white bunting and flowers, and an excellent menu was served. The banquet was a complimentary affair tendered the delegates, members of the local association and their friends being present. T. P. Moody of Newcomb, Endicott & Co., Detroit, acted as toastmaster.

Road Blocked For Half a Day.

Sparta, Mich., Feb. 14.—Fast freight No. 56 on the Pere Marquette, going south, was wrecked three miles north of here at noon Friday, a sand board dropping under the wheels. Several cars were smashed. A wrecking train and crew worked half a day clearing the track and several trains were held up six hours. Nobody was injured. The loss on damaged freight will be heavy.

Pleads Guilty to Embezzlement.

Mason, Mich., Feb. 14.—Ex-County Clerk Woodworth appeared before Justice Lyon Friday, waived examination when arraigned on a charged of embezzling public funds, and was bound over to the March term of circuit court, giving bail in the sum of $1,000. He said: "I purpose to appear at court, plead guilty and take my dose."

Some One Left a Baby.

Howell, Mich., Feb. 14.—When Mr. and Mrs. Henry Helmer returned from the opera house Thursday night they found a baby had been left on a couch in their house. A note informed them it had been born Jan. 26, and asked them to care for it. As they are childless, they will probably keep the infant.

MICHIGAN BRIEFS.

Taken to Coldwater.—Mrs. William Beach of Port Huron, who kidnaped her two children, was forced to turn them over to Deputy Sheriff Davidson for transportation to Coldwater. Judge Graham had ordered the children sent there.

Traverse City Jubilant.—Traverse City is jubilant over a private dispatch received from Congressman Darragh, stating that the committee will report Monday in favor of an appropriation of $40,000 for a government building there.

Insane Woman Fired House.—The farmhouse of Thomas Scott, five miles east of Bad Axe, was destroyed by fire, with all its contents. Mrs. Scott became insane and set fire to the building during the night. The family escaped in their night clothes.

To Oppose Local Acts.—It is announced that the State Grange, through its legislative committee, will stand out for a general primary election law, and will oppose all bills providing for the system of choosing in the various localities until the general bill has been disposed of.

Ancient Decorative Art.

Though it is difficult to say where the decorative value of pottery and of china began to be appreciated, there is little doubt that it originated in the east. Ancient Chinese drawings still in existence show that the process of manufacture has varied but little in the course of the years and that many contrivances claimed as modern European inventions have been known for centuries in the east.

In Chinese official annals, which are said to be perfectly authentic, the invention of porcelain is dated at about 200 years before the Christian era, although Father Entrecolles, residing in China at the commencement of the seventeenth century, dates it long before this, and tells us in a most interesting manner of the great porcelain works of King Te Ching, one of the most ancient and celebrated of the Chinese factories. He says that in his time there were no fewer than 3,000 ovens at work, which gave to the town at night the appearance of one vast furnace with innumerable chimneys.

Knew What She Wrote.

The need of a lead pencil caused a lady who rode in a street car the other day no small embarrassment.

She sat running over her shopping list when suddenly she thought of something to add to it. She looked in her pocketbook and ransacked all its divisions, cardcase and all, but no pencil did she find. Modestly she hesitated about asking her neighbors, but with a quick resolve she finally leaned toward a gentleman seated by her and, holding up her list, said loud enough for those in adjacents seats to hear, "Excuse me, sir, may I borrow your necktie a moment?"

The gentleman's astonishment was expressed in his silent facial contortions until the lady reddened deeply.

"My necktie, madam?" he replied, with arched eyebrows.

"Didn't I say 'pencil?'" she asked. And then everybody, grinning behind newspapers, knew what the lady added to her list.—Exchange.

Two Remarkable Epitaphs.

The two most remarkable epitaphs in the United States are those of Daniel Barrow, formerly of Sacramento, and of Hank Monk, Horace Greeley's stage driver. The former reads as follows: "Here is laid Daniel Barrow, who was born in Sorrow and Borrowed little from nature except his name and his love to mankind and his hatred for redskins. Who was nevertheless a gentleman and a dead shot, who through a long life never killed his man except in self defense or by accident, and who, when he at last went under beneath the bullets of his cowardly enemies in Jeff Morris' saloon, did so in the sure and certain hope of a glorious and everlasting morrow."

Hank Monk's epitaph reads thus: "Sacred to the memory of Hank Monk, the whitest, biggest hearted and best known stage driver in the west, who was kind to all and brought ill to none. He lived in a strange era and was a hero, and the wheels of his coach are now ringing on the golden streets."

Ancient Football.

Philip Stubbes wrote in 1583 in his book on "The Anatomie of Abuses:"

"For as concerning football I protest unto you it may rather be called a freendly kinde of fight than a play of recreation; a bloody and murthering practice than a felowly sporte of pastyme. For dooth not every one lye in waight for his Adversarie, seeking to overthrow him and to picke him on his nose, though it be on hard stones, so that by this meanes sometimes their necks are broken, sometimes their backs, sometimes their legs, sometimes their arms, sometimes one part thrust out of joynt, sometimes another; sometimes the noses gush out with blood, sometimes their eyes start out—fighting, brawling, contention, quarrel picking, murther, homicide and great effusion of blood, as experience dayly teacheth."

Chinese Justice.

The China Times relates an extraordinary case of Chinese "justice."

A Mr. Jen was betrothed to Miss Han and paid his money to the woman's parents. Then he called on the parents to have the contract fulfilled and was told that the promised one was the bride of another.

Having paid his money he considered he was entitled to the girl and went to her husband's house to carry her off, but she was not at home. He then laid his case before the magistrate.

The girl was arrested and sentenced to be "kua-ed," the magistrate arguing, "If you are so wicked at twenty years of age, at the age of eighty you will be a menace to the Celestial empire."

The process of kua-ing is very similar to the ling-chih, or slicing to death punishment.

Cuban Music.

Cubans show a semisavage preference for such music as is made by a sort of band composed of a stamp mill sort of a crank piano, a pair of sugar kettle tomtoms and a man with a horseradish grater called a "giro" and a flat file with which to scrape it, the combined outfit producing a discordant potpourri that might easily dislocate the teeth of any self respecting handsaw. This example of music, as the Cubans fancy it, is even worse than the finger drumming and wire snapping musical murders committed in Tunisian bazaars and Algerian cafes chantantes. The landed but lugubrious Cuban national hymn is best esteemed when performed by one of these bands of inharmonic banditti, and the national dance, that monotonous combination of motions that suggests that the dancer is trying to shoo a flea off the small of his back and also go easy on a stone bruised heel, can only be adequately performed to the music of those African agitators of catgut, rawhide and perforated tin. The truth is the Cubans will have to learn music all over again.

Something that will do You Good

We know of no way in which we can be of more service to our readers than to tell them of something that will be of real good to them. For this reason we want to acquaint them with what we consider one of the very best remedies on the market for coughs, colds, and that alarming complaint, croup. We refer to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. We have used it with such good results in our family so long that it has become a household necessity. By its prompt use we havn't any doubt but that it has time and again prevented croup. The testimony is given upon our own experience, and we suggest that our readers, especially those who have small children, always keep it in their home as a safeguard against croup.—Camden (S. C.) Messenger. For sale by I. J. Orr.

Babies.

A baby is born at every beat of the human heart. That is more than one for every tick of the clock. These "living jewels" (as the poets call babies), "dropped unstained from heaven," take wings and fly back whence they came one for every minute of the day. From Jan. 1 to Dec. 31 between 38,000,000 and 40,000,000 living jewels are dropped into this cold world.

There are more baby girls than boy babies. The proportion of female births to male births is as 100 to 90. So that between 2,000,000 and 3,000,000 more girls are born in the world each year than boys. There is always a surplus of women, and the extra number of girl babies keeps up the supply.

The rate of infant mortality is enormous. In round numbers, 5,000,000 babies never live long enough to talk, 5,000,000 more never have a chance to walk or run and 5,000,000 more never get old enough to go to school.

How a Snake Swallows a Frog.

The method of swallowing is a very simple one, although if the frog be large more than half an hour may be consumed in the process. The two bones of the lower jaw are separate and capable of independent movement; so the reptile loosens its hold upon one side of its jaw and pushing that side forward as far as possible it drives the teeth in again and draws the jaw back to its original position.

The result is that the prey is drawn down by the movement. The process is then repeated by the other half of the jaw, thus inevitably forcing the victim inward. The snake's skin stretches enormously, and the jaw is of course dislocated, but the extensible ligaments hold the bones together.

As Good as a Compass.

The compass plant of Asia Minor, known all along the eastern shores of the Mediterranean and as far east as Arabia and Persia, is mentioned in the Bible, where the prophet refers to "that senseless thing which is more stable than man, inasmuch as it always pointeth in the one direction." It is an annual shrub, much resembling our wild or false indigo, but with all the branches arranged along its stem on the north side. It is of the greatest value to travelers of those regions, who use it with as much assurance of being carried aright as does the seaman his mariner's compass constructed on the latest scientific principles.

Hard Luck.

A Texas man's cotton was eaten by the boll weevil and his corn destroyed by the drought. His only daughter eloped with a vagabond and his son followed the circus. On top of this his wife gave birth to triplets. He committed suicide by the rope and rafter route, and the coroner very properly returned a verdict of justifiable homicide.—Halletsville Herald.

Something Lacking.

Bobby was seven. He was examining with critical eye the new arrival in the family and showing some signs of displeasure with the shiny head and toothless gums.

"Well, Bobby," asked the nurse, "how do you like your new brother?"

"Pretty well," was the answer, "but he's not finished yet."—Brooklyn Life.

Willing to Wait.

"What are you going to do when you get to be a man?" asked the visitor.

The little fellow's face assumed an expression of earnest gravity as he responded, with a voice which was evidently shaken by sad memories of the past, "Whip papa."

Character in the Hat.

"Does the hat reveal character?" said an observant person whose specialty is character reading. "Of course it does.

"The man whose hat fits him exactly and is set square and straight on his head is nearly always an orderly, deliberate man, regular in his habits, but very often commonplace as regards mental attainments.

"Men of large mental powers, thinkers and philosophers, affect hats a trifle too large for them. They are men of large ideas, and their big hats will often be found in conjunction with loose, easy fitting clothes, for in this, as in other matters, the body reflects the mind.

"I distrust equally the man who wears his hat at the back of his head and he who habitually goes about with it tilted to one side. The first is of a candid, easy going type, but apt to be flighty; the latter, with a disposition for sport and frolic, is at the same time often frivolous and conceited. Neither of them, however, will be a coxcomb, like the man whose hat is too small for him, nor 'deep' and crafty, like the wearer of a hat which is always pulled down over the eyes."

Danger In Poisons.

It is lamentable that neither repeated warning nor sad experience seems to have the desired effect of making the ordinary person cautious in the use of poisons. In the last few days three children have died presumably from taking poison that was carelessly left within their reach. One would suppose that such accidents would by this time have become almost impossible, yet they are constantly recurring with a frequency that demands further warning. If parents would learn to keep poisons in a place where they could not be reached by others there would be fewer accidents.

It is the old principle of familiarity breeding contempt. It cannot be too strongly impressed upon every one that the only immunity from danger is through constant care and precaution. It is a lesson that needs to be impressed upon every individual without exception.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

An Old English Superstition.

Attention has been called to the survival of folklore in rural parts of England by evidence given in a stabbing case tried at the Essex assizes. To quicken the healing of the wounds, the knife with which they were inflicted was smeared with grease and laid on the bed of the patient. The purpose served by the application of grease or oil to the knife or to any steel instrument that has inflicted wounds is to prevent it from rusting, for if the steel is allowed to become rusty the wound is supposed to be affected and festering and mortification follow the progress of the rust. Another quaint belief is that the application of an oiled knife is a certain and quick remedy for scalds and burns.

POST OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL REPORTED.

RURAL ROUTE APPROPRIATION TOTALS $12,626,500.

Washington, Feb. 19.—Senator Mason, from the committee on postoffices and postroads, Wednesday reported the postoffice appropriation bill. In addition to the amendment providing for the admission of Oklahoma, Arizona and New Mexico as states, the bill makes changes relating to the conduct of the postoffice department. The statehood amendment is somewhat different from the statehood bill as Arizona is the first of the territories mentioned in the amendment, whereas it is the last mentioned in the bill. The transposition was made to give Arizona the benefit of the first vote in case of a division of the question. Other amendments are as follows:

Increasing the aggregate amount to be paid as salaries to postmasters to the extent of $753,000 and definitely fixing the salary of the postmaster at Chicago at $8,000. There also is a quite general increase of the salaries of assistant postmasters. The appropriation for the purchase and rental of cancelling machines is increased from $190,000 to $310,000. The aggregate appropriation for free delivery service is $19,088,800, an increase of $1,958,850. Authority is given to employ automobiles as well as horses in the postal service, and there is an appropriation of $100,000 for this purpose. Ten division superintendents in the rural free delivery service are allowed, instead of seven, as in the house bill, and the total appropriation for that service is placed at $12,626,500, instead of $9,529,400, as in the house bill.

The salary of the superintendent of railway mail service is increased from $3,500 to $4,500, and that of his chief assistant from $3,000 to $3,500. The appropriation for this service is increased to a total of $11,933,301.

Unique Bill For Athletics.

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 19.—Senator Frawley will introduce today his bill establishing a state "athletic commission" to supervise boxing. Within ten days after the act goes into effect the governor is to appoint three persons to constitute the commission, to serve five years. Any corporation or association desiring to conduct boxing or sparring matches must apply annually to the commissioner for a license; they must own the building in which the matches are to be held, or must have leased it for at least a year. If it is an amateur athletic association, it must be incorporated under the rules of the amateur athletic union of the United States.

Younger to Run a Circus.

Lees Summit, Mo., Feb. 19.—Cole Younger, the pardoned bandit, has confirmed the report that he intends to run a "wild west" show, saying he already has signed a contract with the owner of a show now wintering in Chicago. He said he will be the real owner of the show and that the purchase money has been advanced to him. Younger said he would be manager and treasurer, but stated emphatically that he will not show himself in the arena. He said he is negotiating with Frank James to become arena manager.

Married Where They Met.

Athens, Ga., Feb. 19.—One of the leading social events of the season was the marriage last evening, at the Presbyterian church, of Mr. Oswald Garrison Villard of the New York Evening Post, and Miss Julia Breckenridge Sanford, a beautiful and accomplished young lady of Covington, Ky. It seemed appropriate that the marriage should occur in Athens, as it was in this city, while attending the Southern Educational conference last April, that Mr. Villard first met Miss Sanford.

Darrow Sworn In.

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 19.—Clarence S. Darrow of Chicago was sworn in Wednesday morning as a member of the Illinois house of representatives. Mr. Darrow was elected to the house last November as a public ownership representative, but has been unable to attend the session until now, owing to his engagements before the national arbitration commission in Pennsylvania, as counsel for the United Mine-workers of America.

Hamilton Introduces Bill.

Washington, Feb. 19.—Representative Hamilton of Michigan Wednesday introduced a bill to authorize the governor and secretary of Hawaii to issue bonds of that territory in such sum, not exceeding $500,000, as, together with the money already appropriated by congress, may be sufficient to pay all the judgments growing out of the suppression of the bubonic plague in the territory in 1899 and 1900.

Diamonds Stolen From Church.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 19.—Burglars entered the cathedral of St. Isaac Tuesday night and stole three diamonds valued at $50,000, which they took from the frame of a picture of the Savior.

A JOB FOR NAVIN

BECOMES MEMBER OF PRISON BOARD OF CONTROL.

NEW BILL CREATES BOARD OF ARCHITECT EXAMINERS.

HOUSE GROUND OUT NUMBER OF BILLS WEDNESDAY.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 19.—Thomas J. Navin of Detroit is now a member of the board of control of Jackson state prison, the institution in which he served a term for forgery. His appointment and confirmation, constituting an unprecedented incident in the history of Michigan, occurred Wednesday afternoon.

Governor Bliss executed what his friends are pleased to consider a coup when he announced at noon that he would not send Thomas J. Navin's name to the senate for confirmation as a member of the board of control of the state prison at Jackson before Thursday, and two hours later rushed it in. The trick came as a complete surprise and there was a general stampede for the senate chamber, where things were doing all day.

Navin was confirmed by a vote of 16 to 12, all senators present voting. He succeeds H. S. Holmes of Chelsea for a term of six years, beginning Feb. 15, 1903.

Senator Brown offered a skeleton bill in the upper house yesterday to create a commissioner on telegraphs and telephones, with the same power in his department as is now conferred on the commissioner of railroads.

The appropriation bill for the attorney-general's department, which passed the senate yesterday, increases the usual amount from $6,000 to $8,500. The bill asked for $10,000.

Senator Cook introduced a bill sent him by Dr. Scott Fraser Hodge of Detroit, to prohibit the exhibition of deformed human beings, or of portions of diseased human bodies except for legitimate medical purposes.

The commission microbe is still working. A board of examiners of architects fixes a board of five members of the faculty of the University of Michigan. The board is to elect a secretary, who shall receive a salary of $1,500 per annum. The fee for examination is $15, with an additional license fee of $25 before an architect can do business in the state. The annual fee of $5 is fixed for each architect. All architects living in the state six months before the law goes into effect are exempt from taking the examination.

Senator Lockerby's bill to compel [illegible] of adjoining states is an interchange with Wisconsin upon this matter.

Senator Cannon's bill affecting interurban street railways, seeks to put these railroads under the supervision of the state railroad commissioner. The bill was fathered by Railroad Commissioner Atwood.

Senator Goodell's pawnbroker's bill is to cover cities having 15,000 population and upwards. All pawnbrokers must secure a license from the mayor, paying a yearly fee of $1, and give a bond in the sum of $10,000.

The house was in session nearly four hours Wednesday afternoon, a great portion of the time being taken up with minor local bills, and the rest with the passage of half a dozen bills put through committee of the whole Tuesday. Fifty bills were introduced.

It was Detroit's busy day. A bushel of notices of bills to amend the charter of the city had been distributed by Representative Colby, to prepare the way for the introduction of the new Detroit charter bill.

Michigan Health.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 19.—Reports to the state board of health from representative physicians in active general practice in various parts of the state indicate that influenza, rheumatism, bronchitis, neuralgia and tonsilitis, in the order named, caused the most sickness in Michigan during the week. Meningitis was reported present at 3 places, whooping cough at 25, diphtheria at 43, measles at 52, typhoid fever at 53, scarlet fever at 97, smallpox at 121, and consumption at 173. It is believed that not all cases of consumption are reported, the power of the board to obtain reports of that disease being still questioned.

Merino Sheepmen Meet.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 19.—The fourth annual meeting of the Franco-American Merino Sheep Breeders' association was held in the parlor of the Griswold house yesterday, commencing in the morning at 10 o'clock, with about thirty members present from all parts of the United States. The day was spent in listening to and discussing various papers presented upon the sheep breeding industry, as well as selecting officers and forming another association to work in affiliation with the old one.

James Convicted of Murder.

Muskegon, Mich., Feb. 19.—The jury in the James murder trial, which went out at 6 o'clock Tuesday night, came in at 11:30 Wednesday morning with a verdict of murder in the second degree. The old man took the result without a tremor. The trial has attracted a great deal of attention. Aug. 31, 1902, David James, who is 76 years old, shot his son, John James, who was on his way to Holton, three miles away. The theory of the prosecution was that the assailant came up behind; that John got out of the buggy and was shot in the leg and fell; the murderer coming closer, John put up his hand to ward off the shot, which passed through the palm of his hand and into the temple, killing him.

The Population of the Moon.

There is plenty of authority for believing that there is a man in the moon. In fact, there is authority for believing that there are women and other animals there. Dante declares that Cain was banished to the moon and that he can be seen there at any time. Chaucer declares that the man in the moon was guilty of larceny and that he carries a thorn bush. Shakespeare loads him with thorns and gives him a dog. According to the general version, he was banished there for gathering sticks on Sunday, and the Germans have amplified this theory by giving him a woman who had been caught churning butter on Sunday.

AMERICANS WON

VENEZUELAN SUPREME COURT RENDERS DECISION.

JUDGMENT AMOUNTING TO $700,000 FOR RUDLOFF HEIRS.

BOWEN NOT LIKELY TO GO TO THE HAGUE.

Caracas, Feb. 19.—The supreme court Wednesday rendered its decision in the suit brought by the heirs of Henry Rudloff, an American citizen, against the Venezuelan government for damages for the annulment of a concession given in 1892 to build a market in Caracas. Judgment was given in favor of Rudloff's heirs. Their claim for the large amount of $700,000 to be paid by the Venezuelan government was admitted.

Washington, Feb. 19.—It does not seem at all probable at this time that Mr. Herbert W. Bowen, United States minister to Venezuela, will go to The Hague in connection with the movement to have that tribunal determine whether or not the European allied governments which maintained a blockade of Venezuelan ports shall have preferential treatment in the payment of the claims of their citizens against Venezuela. If Mr. Bowen's pleasure in the matter were consulted the likelihood is that he would participate in the proceedings before The Hague tribunal, but he is not willing to resign his position as minister to Venezuela for that purpose, and the rules of the state department prohibit the granting of more than for sixty days leave of absence in any one year to diplomatic officers.

In Supreme Court.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 18.—The supreme court Tuesday morning disposed of the following cases: Affirmed—Cornelissen vs. Ort, Bray vs. Fletcher, Sherman vs. Spalding, Keys vs. Valley Telephone Co., Cole vs. Auditor-General, Varty vs. Messmore, Bartle vs. Houghton County Street Railway Co., Mahan vs. Michigan Telephone Co. Reversed—Hyde vs. Chadwick, Cornell vs. Whitney, Hintz vs. Michigan Central Railroad Co., McChesney vs. Wilson, Coveney vs. Phiscator, Bullock Manufacturing Co. vs. Sunday Lake Iron Mining Co., Auditor-General vs. Hughitt.

Miners Getting Rich.

Calumet, Mich., Feb. 18.—The stock of the Calumet & Arizona Mining Co., controlled by the Lake Superior people, has gone up nearly $30 per share in the last week. As there are over 100,000 shares, or one-half, of the stock owned in [illegible] copper country towns, the raise in the stock means an increase of about $3,000,000 in the value of the copper country holdings. A large number of miners and common laborers were fortunate enough to get some of the shares, and consequently they are on "easy street" today.

Smith Goes to Manila.

Jackson, Mich., Feb. 18.—Attorney Charles H. Smith, law partner of Congressman-elect Charles E. Townsend, has accepted the appointment to the prosecuting attorneyship of Manila province from Governor-General Taft. Smith says his acceptance is a financial sacrifice, but in view of the unselfish zeal of Governor Taft and his urgent offer, he feels it clearly his duty to accept. He will sail from San Francisco March 3.

Hart's Death Accidental.

Adrian, Mich., Feb. 18.—The coroner's jury in the case of John Hart returned a verdict at 5 o'clock Tuesday afternoon that deceased came to his death as the result of a fall out of his wagon. His companions in the accident had been under a shadow in the minds of many since Hart was found dead in bed, but the whole affair resolves itself into a sound temperance lesson.

Medics Raise Prices.

Port Huron, Mich., Feb. 18.—The members of the St. Clair County Medical association have issued a new bill of fees and there is a radical increase in prices. Operations in particular have taken a decided jump. The same raise in fees will be observed by the various medical associations throughout the state.

Is Unconstitutional.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 18.—Attorney-General Blair has submitted an opinion to the governor to the effect that the joint resolution relieving County Treasurer Charles A. Buhrer of Wayne of responsibility for loss of over $75,000 of state inheritance tax funds by the failure of the City Savings bank of Detroit is unconstitutional.

Three Oaks Man in Trouble.

St. Joseph, Mich., Feb. 18.—Robert Yale of Three Oaks was brought to the county jail Tuesday and will await examination on a charge of having formed a plot to kill a young lady named Bradley of this village.

More Oil at Chatham.

Chatham, Ont., Feb. 18.—A splendid oil well was struck here Monday afternoon on the Doyle farm, in Raleigh township, on concession 9, lot 19, five miles southwest of Chatham. Dr. Hanks of Blenheim is the owner of the well, which is 500 feet deep. Oil is flowing freely and there was some difficulty in capping the well.

A Mysterious Death.

Kansas City, Feb. 19.—Mrs. Lattin, proprietor of the hotel where J. P. Sieger, the Burlington (Kan.) miller died under mysterious circumstances last Wednesday, testified before the coroner's jury yesterday that Sieger told her just before he died that he had been chloroformed and robbed. The city chemist testified that an examination of the man's stomach had disclosed not only powdered glass, as previously reported, but a trace of chloroform.

Mysterious Circumstance.

One was pale and sallow and the other fresh and rosy. Whence the difference? She who is blushing with health uses Dr. King's New Life Pills to maintain it. By gently arousing the lazy organs they compel good digestion and head off constipation. Try them. Only 25c at C. A. Wright's druggist.

PROPS FOR LAWS

State Tax Commission Will Offer Grist of Amendments.

WANT THEIR SALARIES RAISED

Cannon's Bill Providing For Publication of War Records Passed—Developments in Primary Election Fight—Abolish Game Warden's Office.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 18.—The state tax commissioners have a grist of amendments to the tax laws to be presented to the legislature. First of all they want an increase in salary from $2,500 to $5,000 each.

One of the commission's bills will oppose a change in the taxation of vessels to 3 cents per net ton. Michigan's total tonnage is estimated at 194,000, which, at 3 cents, would give $5,820 taxes. The total tax now collected is $72,000. Another bill will prevent the registration of vessels in some inland township, where light valuations can be imposed by supervisors. Registration must be where the principal business is done.

The amendment, which failed two years ago, to extend the time for assessing officers to do their work, is also being pushed. Assessing is now done in April and May. The commission favors January.

Assessment of bank stock where bank is located, instead of where held, is also sought.

Power is to be asked for the commission to cause any county board of review to reassemble and raise valuations of townships in accordance with standards set by the commission.

A bill passed the senate Tuesday afternoon, introduced by Senator Cannon, which appropriates the sum of $20,000 for the publication of a record of the Michigan soldiers who served in the civil war. A volume of the kind was issued by Adjutant-General Robertson of Michigan, who served all through that war, complete in detail and compiled by one who was a scholar as well as a soldier.

Senator Simons' bill for a state sailors and soldiers' monument, to be erected upon the capitol grounds at Lansing, asks for an appropriation of $250,000.

Senator Brown of Lapeer brought in a bill for the regulation of sales of stocks of goods in bulk. He says it is the measure favored by the National Association of Credit Men, and the one this association is requesting other states to enact to give uniform laws upon this subject.

Senator Goodell introduced his bill for the reorganization of the Wayne county poor commission.

Senator Brown sent in a skeleton general election bill.

Developments in the primary election fight have come fast in the last twenty-four hours. Senator Simons now believes his belated Wayne county bill will pass. Senator Weekes says the Kent bill will pass if his colleague, Senator Burns, who introduced it, can be induced to keep quiet. Senators Doherty, Baird, Fuller et al. have partly thrown off the mask and declared against nomination of candidates by direct vote.

The house committee on elections, of which Representative Colby of Detroit is chairman, has decided to make the Colby primary bill, applying to the whole state, a special order for 9 a. m. Thursday, Feb. 26. The committee desires that everybody interested in primary elections should attend that session and listen to the discussion. This is the bill that passed the house and was killed in the senate two years ago.

Representative Combs of Lenawee introduced two bills in the house Tuesday afternoon, by which he proposes to abolish the office of game warden, chief deputy, and all the appendages thereto.

"The investigation made by the special legislative committee of last session," says Combs, "disclosed conditions so rotten that a resolution was passed by the house demanding Chief Deputy Brewster's resignation, which resolution was killed in the senate."

The city corporations committee of the house will give a hearing on Representative Gruesel's proposed constitutional ownership of street railways Thursday, Feb. 26.

President Bardeen of the Michigan Manufacturers' association met with his executive committee here yesterday to confer on some bills he will have introduced to prescribe the powers of railroads relative to sidings, switching charges and insurance contracts.

Senator Doherty says if enough senators can be lined up later in the session to confirm Navin, the governor may send in his name.

The date of the McMillan memorial services has been fixed at April 2.

Albion College Closed.

Albion, Mich., Feb. 18.—College is practically closed, as there are not enough vaccinated students to make it pay to hold classes. Officers served the order at chapel Tuesday morning and said that any unvaccinated student who attended classes would be arrested. The officers visited every room, but no arrests were made.

Brings Suit For $100,000.

Lawton, Mich., Feb. 18.—William Culver, a brakeman on the South Haven & Eastern railroad, who had both limbs cut off last September, while coupling cars in the switchyard, began suit Tuesday through his attorney, L. A. Tabor, to recover $100,000 damages from the railroad company.

State's Answer to M. C. R. R.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 18.—It is possible that the state may file a demurrer in the case of the Michigan Central $6,000,000 suit against the state. There was a conference of legal lights over the form of answer to be made to the declaration of the railroad company here.

Fatally Shot His Wife.

Cleveland, Feb. 16.—Worry over family troubles and loss of employment caused Robert Nelson, a coachman, to fatally shoot his wife, at the latter's home, Saturday evening.

Mr Wheeler got rid of his Rheumatism.

"During the winter of 1898 I was so lame in my joints, in fact all over my body, that I could hardly hobble around, when I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. From the first application I began to get well and was cured and have worked steadily all the year.—R. Wheeler, Northwood, N. Y. For sale by J. J. Orr.

Visit from Clinton Woodmen.

Lenawee Camp of Modern Woodmen enjoyed a visit from the neighboring camp at Clinton last evening. Four candidates, viz., Thos. Russell, Ora McBride, Geo. McNeil and Burt Momiluee, were given the degrees in the mysteries of Woodcraft. The Clinton team did the work in their usual happy manner.

The boys then adjourned to the room across the hall and found tables laden with delicacies, prepared by the ladies, awaiting them. It is needless to say that ample justice was done and a jolly time enjoyed by all.

The Clinton Woodmen who attended were Leman Bailey, James Riley, Jesse Sproull, Clarence Palmer, Will Stevenson, Otis Cole, John Hullett, Ben McCracken, Frank Hard, Art Ogden and Walter Fink.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

Worse than alarm of fire at night is the brassy cough of croup, which sounds like the children's death knell and it means death unless something is done quickly. Cordier, of Mannington, Ky., writes, "My three-year-old girl had a severe case of croup; the doctor said she could not live. I got a bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar, the first dose gave quick relief and saved her life. Refuse substitutes. J. J. Orr.

THE MYSTERY OF GRASLOV.

By Ashley Towne. . . .

She tried her strength against the door, and, though it was not locked, yet she could not open it sufficiently to enter.

"Therese, help me," she said, setting the lantern down upon the floor.

The two placed their shoulders against the door and pushed, and it suddenly opened. Therese was precipitated headlong into the chamber. A rush of foul air almost stifled Olga. There was a peculiar sound, as if Therese had fallen upon a heap of something. She was whimpering in her terror.

Olga seized the lantern and dashed into the chamber. A cry of horror escaped her. She was in what seemed to be an old tomb. At least, there were heaps of bones scattered about, and into one of these poor Therese had pitched headlong.

Olga swung the lantern and, near to the spot where Therese lay, two skeletons hung in chains. One had lost its head, but the other, by reason of being fastened in a peculiar way, had retained its grinning top piece.

Therese was in a dead faint.

Olga was now in a terrible difficulty. She knelt by the side of Therese.

"Oh," she said, "if I had but some water! She will never recover in this place."

Setting the lantern down, she dragged the woman from the place of horrors and laid her down on the cold floor of the passage. Then she swung the door shut.

Again she began working over Therese. Olga saw that she was suffering a severe nervous shock, and the only hope of restoration of her senses was immediate removal from the place.

Swinging her lantern upon her arm, she seized hold of Therese and began dragging her along the passage, going backward in order to exert a greater pull on the unconscious woman.

In some way—she never knew how—she lost her bearings and came suddenly against a great stone pillar which stood in the center of a sort of court, from which passages ran like the spokes of a wheel.

For a moment she stood there half unwilling to believe the truth. Then, as the horrible fact was borne in upon her, she let the shoulders of Therese lie neglected on the floor while she stared helplessly around her. She could not discover the one through which she had come.

She was lost!

CHAPTER XIV.
OUT OF THE CHAINS.

THE horror of the situation was so great that Princess Olga's brain could not accept it all at once.

Not only was she lost, but there was a certainty that if she was rescued she would also be discovered in this act against the rule of Neslerov. Powerful as was her family, she was now absolutely at the mercy of the governor of Tomsk, whom she knew to be merciless. Who could ever know that Princess Olga, the rich and beautiful Neslerov, died in the dungeons under her cousin's palace?

To her vivid imagination already the horrors of starvation loomed up. To lie in that cold, dark place and suffer and slowly waste away, to lose her mind, to rave in madness—all these thoughts burned into her brain. Then, looking at poor Therese, the girl's heart was stirred with pity.

"I am not only a suicide, but I am a murderer as well," she said. "I should not have induced Therese to come."

Therese stirred.

"Ah, Therese! Good Therese! Speak to me, will you not?" pleaded the princess. "You should not have come. It was horrible, that den! And perhaps I brought you here to die."

"I don't want to die!" exclaimed Therese, sitting upright as though the word had acted like an electric shock.

"I do not wish to die either; but we are lost, Therese."

"Lost! How can we be lost? Are we not under the palace?"

"Yes, we are under the palace, but we are nevertheless lost. I have lost the way. See all these passages? I do not know by which one we reached this terrible place."

"We seem to be almost at the center. They cannot all lead to the stairs."

"No, certainly not. And there is little chance of telling which does lead to the stairs. I do not even know in which direction the stairs lie. We are lost, Therese, and will perhaps die here of starvation."

"You must not! You shall not!" exclaimed Therese, made stronger now by the evident need of some one to assist the princess. She did not think so much of herself as she did of Olga.

"There must be a way out and close at hand," said Olga.

The terrible silence acted upon the shaken nerves of poor Therese, and she began to scream hysterically.

"I will not die! Heaven help us both! Help! Help! Help!"

The screams of the distracted woman rang in weird echoes through the caverns.

"The echoes mock me!" she cried. "Is there no one to help?"

"Hark!" said Olga. "I think I heard a voice."

"A voice! I heard a thousand of them—and they are all my own."

"No, but this was not. It was a man's voice. Wait till I call."

The caverns were still.

"Is there any one here?" rang out Olga's clear voice. "We are lost in the passages—two women. Is there any one here?"

"Here, here, here!" came back the echoes.

"I am here—a prisoner!" came an answering cry.

"Here—prisoner—isoner!" came the echoes.

"Where are you?" called Olga.

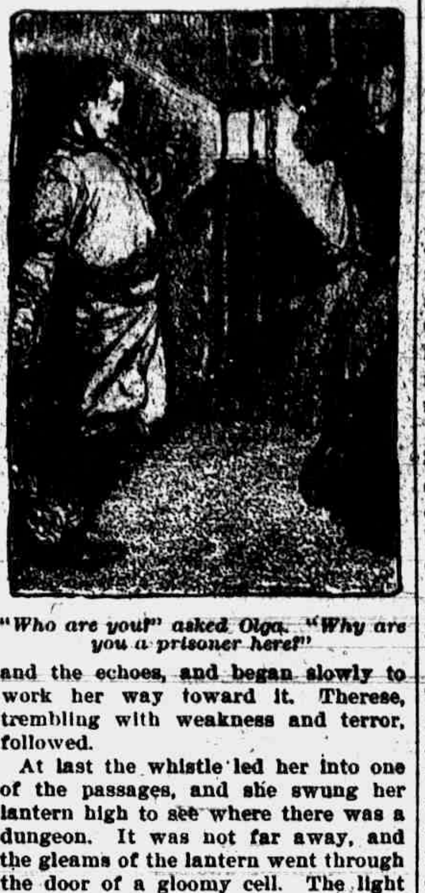
"You—you—you!" echoed the mocking caverns.

"I must be near you—the voices sound not far—follow the sound of my whistle!" came a louder voice.

"Whistle—istle—istle!" came the troubled echoes.

Immediately there began, not far from them, the tune of "The Star Spangled Banner." Olga knew it was an American tune and instinctively realized that the person who was guiding them must be the one who had been trying to solve the mystery of Graslov and had been imprisoned by Jansky.

After a few moments she managed to distinguish between the real sound and the echoes, and began slowly to work her way toward it. Therese, trembling with weakness and terror, followed.



"Who are you?" asked Olga. "Why are you a prisoner here?"

At last the whistle led her into one of the passages, and she swung her lantern high to see where there was a dungeon. It was not far away, and the gleams of the lantern went through the door of a gloomy cell. The light fell upon a man chained to the walls. One chain was around his waist, another held his feet, and each arm was extended and held to the wall by a smaller but stout chain. These chains were built into the wall and their ends locked together.

"Who are you?" asked Olga. "Why are you a prisoner here?"

"My name is Denton," was the reply. "I am an American, and my arrest is an outrage that will not go unpunished."

"It shall not, I promise that, if any of us ever gets out alive."

"But who are you, and what are you doing here?" asked Denton.

"I am a Neslerov and came to liberate you and Vladimir Paulpoff."

In the light of her lantern she could see him stare.

"You a Neslerov! When did you come to Tomsk?"

"Two days ago. The governor is a distant relation of mine. I am here upon a mission that you will understand when I speak—the mystery of Graslov."

"You are trying, you are seeking"—

"I am a cousin of that Princess Neslerov who married the son of the Duke of Graslov. Is that sufficient?"

"It is. Then, if we work together, justice will be done."

"First we must work to get out of here," said Olga. "How were these chains fastened?"

"With a small iron key. It was on a long chain, so I presume it hangs in that passage at the head of the stairs. The stairs are not far from this spot. It was not a long distance when I was brought here."

"It may not be far, but in what direction?"

"There was a stupid kind of fellow down here once after I was brought in. He brought me some food. I watched him and think I can guide you to the stairs. Count three passages to the left from that black stone in the wall."

"Yes; this is the third."

"Now go through that till you reach a heap of rubbish in a little court. I remember the rubbish heap, for I stumbled over it. At this rubbish heap the passage divides, and one lane leads to the left and the other to the right. The one on the right will lead you to the stairs."

"Come, Therese!"

Taking her lantern, Olga again started, carefully following the directions of Denton. She found the rubbish heap and, taking the passage to the right, soon came to the stairs. She left Therese at the foot of the stairs while she crept softly up.

In the guardroom Itzig still lay snoring, and Olga glanced at the door to make sure the bolt had not been disturbed. If a dozen Cossacks had been hammering at the door she would not have faltered now. She searched in the little passage and found a small iron key suspended from a peg by a chain.

"It must be the one," she said, and she seized it and sped below.

"Remain here," she said to Therese, "and if I am lost again you can guide me back to the stairs as the American guided us to him."

She wound her way through the passages and at last reached Denton.

"You are a brave little woman," he said. "I did not think there was a woman like you in the world—except one."

"I suppose you mean Frances Gorton," said the princess.

"What! Do you know her?"

"I met her at the great fair in Moscow. She was very charitable."

While she talked she tried the key. It fitted the locks in the chains and one by one they dropped clanging against the wall, and Denton was free.

"Now, then," she said, "Vladimir Paulpoff is here. Do you know how to find him?"

"No; I do not know where they put him. I know it was not near me, for I have been calling him. I received no answer."

"We cannot remain here in safety much longer," she said. "The daylight will bring activity in the palace. Jansky, superintendent of police, is lying drunk in his office, and Itzig, the guard, is also unconscious. The superintendent will be discovered and there will be an uproar. It will spoil all if we are now discovered."

"We must make haste and find Vladimir," said Denton. "I do not feel that we can leave him. If they discover my absence, they may kill him."

"Find him if you can. If not, I must watch over his welfare till you return."

"Return! From Perm?"

"No. Perm is too far. I have worked to bring the denouement in the palace. I have sent a message to the governor general at Tobolsk. I have with me a woman whose testimony is worth millions. All we need now is what Papa Paulpoff can tell us. You must bring him."

All Stuffed Up

That's the condition of many sufferers from catarrh, especially in the morning. Great difficulty is experienced in clearing the head and throat.

No wonder catarrh causes headache, impairs the taste, smell, and hearing, pollutes the breath, deranges the stomach and affects the appetite.

To cure catarrh, treatment must be constitutional—alterative and tonic.

"I was afflicted with catarrh. I took medicines of different kinds, giving each a fair trial; but gradually grew worse until I could hardly hear, taste or smell. I then concluded to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and after taking five bottles I was cured and have not had any return of the disease since." EUGENE FORBES, Lebanon, Kan.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Cures catarrh—it soothes and strengthens the mucous membrane and builds up the whole system.

Miss Olof Krarer Lectures.

Those who attended the Star Course entertainment Tuesday evening were well paid for coming out on such a cold night. Miss Olof Krarer, the little Esquiman lady, is a delightful entertainer. She gave a history of her life and those of her native country, East Greenland, of which so little is known here, a country with no government, no laws, no written language and no man is greater than another.

Miss Krarer speaks very good English. She received only a small amount of education while among missionaries during her short stay in Iceland. Her home was a snow hut 1,000 miles north of Iceland.

She gave us one of the most interesting and instructive lectures we have had in a long time.

The next entertainment will be on Thursday, Feb. 26. Nellie Peck Saunders and her Grecian Octette Company of eight ladies. Their entertainment will consist of Art tableau, pantomine and song with beautiful stage settings and colored lights. This company carries a full calcium light outfit with an experienced operator.

This entertainment will close the season and will be one of the best given here.

Mrs. Helen Sprague.

Mrs. Helen Sprague, who has been very ill for the past month, passed away Thursday at two o'clock at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Martin Zimmerman. The deceased was 69 years 2 months and 4 days old and died of complication of diseases.

She is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Martin Zimmerman, with whom she has always made her home.

Mrs. Sprague was a devoted member of the Episcopal church and leaves a large circle of friends, which she has gained by her kind and loving disposition, to mourn her loss.

The funeral was held this afternoon at 3:30 at her late home, Rev. C. C. Kemp officiated.

The remains will be taken to Owosso tomorrow morning and she will be buried beside her husband, who died a number of years ago.

The Counterfeiters.

A unique street scene in the Harlem tenement district, with an Italian, his hand organ and the dancing street children is one of the many features of metropolitan life seen in Carl A Haswin's great production of "The Counterfeiters," which comes to the New Bradley Tuesday, Feb. 24. The comedy element predominates the play, there being eight comedy parts in the full cast of seventeen, as well as a long list of singing and dancing specialties. The play is in four acts, brimful of dramatic interest and exciting scenes, all culminating in the sensational raid of the counterfeiters den, a climax which calls forth from seven to ten recalls nightly.

Mr. Ziehr has faithfully performed his duties here for eight years and his many friends congratulate him on his merited advancement. He is confined to his house at present by illness but expects to assume his new duties next week.

Word was received this morning that J. W. Hine suffered a slight stroke of paralysis at the Griswold House in Detroit Wednesday. Hopes are entertained of his recovery but he is a very sick man. WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, Feb. 16, 1903.

The Venezuelan affair has been brought to a satisfactory conclusion and, while Mr. Bowen has secured the most favorable terms for Venezuela that she had a right to expect, Germany has demonstrated to the world that she is a Shylock among nations and that her alliance with Great Britain was made for the sole purpose of collecting her debts regardless of the rights of her allies. Under the terms of the protocols just signed Great Britain and Italy receive $27,500 each as a cash payment and Germany received $347,000, the full amount for her original demand, in monthly payments beginning immediately. In thus demanding her pound of flesh, Germany has outraged the Anglo-Saxon sense of justice and, in the judgment of Minister Bowen, has laid the foundation for the ruin of her trade with the countries of South America. The protocols providing for the settlement of individual claims, the raising of the blockade and the reference to the Hague tribunal of the question of a preferential for those countries which adopted warlike methods were signed late Friday night and immediately orders for the raising of the blockade were issued from the respective capitals. Until such time as the full amount of the claims of the creditor nations are settled 30 per cent. of the custom receipts of LaGuira and Puerto Cabello is to be set aside for that purpose.

Congress has completed the anti-trust program agreed upon between the president and the leaders of both houses and the last anti-trust bill has been signed by the president. The legislation accomplished includes the appropriation of $500,000 for the use of the attorney general in the prosecution of trust cases, the enactment of a law expediting the trial of anti-trust cases in the courts, the enactment of the Elkins bill prohibiting rebates on transportation charges and the creation of a commissioner of corporations in the new department of commerce and labor. The Littlefield bill which passed by the House, is now in the Senate committee on judiciary where it has been considered but without result.

The Alaskan treaty has been ratified by the senate and the president is now considering the personnel of the commission which is to adjudicate the Alaskan boundary dispute. Under the provisions of the treaty there will be three eminent jurists appointed by the United States and three appointed by Great Britain. Within two months from the ratification of the treaty, each side will have to present to the other a copy of its brief and counter cases must be exchanged within two months hereafter. The first meeting of the commission will be held in London as soon as possible and subsequent meetings will be held at such places as may be determined by the commission. A vote of four to two will decide all points of difference but in the event that the commission is evenly divided no change will take place in the existing status of the dispute. Rumor has it that Secretary Root and Senators Lodge and Turner, of Washington, will be appointed commissioners.

The House has passed a bill appropriating $5,600,000 for the completion of the national capitol and the construction of an office building for the use of its members and the measure is certain to receive the approval of the senate. Persons familiar with the Capitol will remember that on the east front the senate and House wings extend 108 feet beyond the center section. The original plans, which were approved by President Fillmore in 1859, provided for the extension of the central portion as far east as the wings and that is the improvement about to be begun. The new space will be used for committee rooms and, following the established custom, that portion on the senate side of the center of the building will be devoted to the senate and the supreme court.

It is expected that the new office building, which will be erected about 500 feet south of the capitol will provide sufficient accommodation for the members of the House to permit of the assignment of a separate office to each of the nearly 400 members of the lower chamber, something they have not enjoyed for many years. The architecture of the office building will conform to that of the capitol and the offices will be elaborately and expensively furnished. From the center of the capitol to the elevators in the new building will extend a tunnel through which will run a miniature electric railway for the accommodation of the members and their friends. The improvements, it is expected, will require two and one-half years for completion and, including the site for the new building and the furnishings, will cost not less than $6,500,000.

The only change in the Statehood situation during the past week has been the addition of the Omnibus bill in the form of a rider to the Postoffice Appropriation bill. As the conferrees of both the senate and House, under whose consideration this measure would naturally come, are all favorable to statehood, Senator Quay regards this as a decided victory. Senator Elkins speaking on the subject today, told your correspondent that he regarded the fight as practically won. He said that the senate would be forced to permit the question to come to a vote and that the statehood supporters were quite strong enough to pass the bill as amended. Senator Hale, on the other hand, expressed grave doubt of the Quay forces having sufficient strength to overrule the chair which, he said, would throw out the amendment on the point of order certain to be raised. Even if they mustered sufficient strength to overrule the chair that will not mean victory, in the opinion of Senator Aldrich, who declares that the senate will debate the bill and precipitate an extra session of congress rather than permit the establishment of such a precedent, as the passage of irrelevant and general legislation as an amendment to an appropriation bill.

An effort was made last week to ratify the Colombian treaty but it failed. Senator Morgan talked for the entire time of the executive session, five hours, and no vote was reached. The next day Senator Quay refused to permit another executive session for the consideration of the treaty. Senator Morgan's opposition to the Colombian treaty is also preventing the ratification of the Cuban treaty and meanwhile certain interests hostile to the convention appear to be gaining strength.

EIGHTY YEARS OLD

Tomorrow, February 21, is

LUCIUS LILLEY'S

Birthday and He is as Well and Hearty Today as Ever, and will No Doubt Live among Us 20 Years Longer.

Seven years ago tomorrow I came back from Illinois, took dinner at the Lilley House and after dinner, when visiting with Mr Lilley, he told me he was 78 years old and that it was his birthday. Each year since I have thought as his birthday came along that he is the best preserved man of his age in Lenawee county and last week, after much persuasion, got his consent to write a little something about him in the HERALD that we may all rejoice with him at his good health and young looks at the age of 80 years. And when we come to realize that he has done business in that same banking room in which is located the Lilley State Bank for forty-eight years, scarcely missing a working day, it is certainly a wonderful record. About the first of my recollection is of seeing Mr. Lilley in the old "Lilley" Bank and such is the memory of most of the business men on the street.

He is one of the oldest, best known and conservative bankers in the state. At the last meeting of the Michigan Bankers' Association he was made a delegate to the National Bankers' Association to be held at New Orleans. He is also a director of the Detroit Trust Co., one of the largest and strongest institutions in the state. His has been an active life and he looks back to wonderful changes.

Sixty years ago he was proprietor of the Weddel House, of Cleveland, Ohio, at that time one of the best known hotels in the west. No railroads or telegraph or electric roads were there at that time.

Fifty-two years ago he was agent for the steamboat line of the Lake Shore Railroad at Cleveland and for many years was in the general ticket office of the same road. That he is able to give active and energetic attention to his farming and banking business at the the age of four score years is both pleasing and wonderful.

Monday afternoon about 4:30 fire was discovered in Dr. G. D. Gibson's livery and feed barn in Adrian. The fire caught in the hay loft and at that time there was a strong wind blowing from the north but by the quick action of the fire department a most disastrous conflagration was averted. There were many buggies and cutters on the second floor which could not be removed on account of the dense smoke and fire. It is understood there were twenty-five tons of hay in the hay loft at that time. The horses, buggies, cutters and harness and every conceivable thing that was movable on the ground floor was taken to a place of safety. The buggies in the second floor were valued at $2,000 and the contents were insured for $1,000 the building was insured for $2,000 the loss is estmated about $3,000.

The officials of the Lake Shore have taken a very decided stand on the temperance rule. A special order has been issued, it is said, which will result in the dismissal of Passenger Conductors Loop, Brown, Myers and Moore. A number of other men, including some of the oldest employes on the road, are also said to be slated. Like other roads, the Lake Shore has a temperance clause in its book of rules, but up to last week very little effort has been made in the way of a literal enforcement. It not only prohibits employes from drinking, but from visiting saloons. It appears that the trouble originated through the agitation by a wife of a conductor who objected to her husband's habit of visiting saloons.—Toledo Blade.

ADRIAN O. E. S.

About One Hundred in Number, Came to Tecumseh on Special Train and were ENTERTAINED BY TECUMSEH LODGE.

Four Candidates were Initiated, the Work being Done by the Visiting Team. A Banquet was Given at the Armory, Covers Laid for 350.

The day having been set apart, Worthy Matron Mrs. S. W. Anderson gave orders for the assembling of the Stars and they came one hundred and more strong. An invitation was extended to Adrian Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, to visit Tecumseh Chapter and exemplify the work of the order. The invitation was accepted by Adrian Chapter and last evening appointed as the time.

The Tecumseh Stars have been preparing for several days to give their Adrian sisters and brothers a royal reception, and by their expressions we judge they were well pleased with the reception they received. A special train was chartered and they arrived here at 6:30 o'clock and were met at the depot by a committee and conducted to the Masonic Temple where their Tecumseh friends were in waiting to receive them.

After a general all around hand shake the Star was opened by Tecumseh Chapter and then the officers of Adrian Chapter were called to their respective stations and exemplified the work of the order on the following candidates: Miss Lena Smith, Miss Luella Williamson, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. S. Field. The work was very finely done in a manner which Adrian Chapter know well how to do.

The work at the Masonic Temple closed at 9:30 when all were escorted to the armory which had been beautifully decorated for the occasion. Under the supervision of Mrs. R. A. Heesen, a banquet was prepared such as the members of Tecumseh Star know well how to serve. Covers for 350 were laid.

During the banquet and following, a very pleasant program was rendered, consisting of music, instrumental and vocal, and recitations, which was appreciated by all present: Miss Helen Anderson, piano and whistling solos; several trios by Miss Raye McKenna, Miss Anna McClure and Mrs. Ella Hodges; vocal solo, Miss Mattie Caldwell; duet, Miss Anna McClure and B. J. Pulver; vocal solos, Miss McKenna and Roscoe Swift, of Adrian; recitations, Miss Ida Moore, of St. Louis, Mo., and Mr. DeGreen, of Addison. All were encored and responded freely. The program closed at 12 o'clock with well chosen words from everybody's friend, the genial Scotchman, W. F. King, worthy patron of Adrian Chapter and past worthy patron of the Order of Eastern Star of Michigan.

Among those present from Adrian were Asa W. Aldrich, Mrs. [illegible] J. HEARKEN YE

To the Voice of Tecumseh People.

If you will but listen to your friends and neighbors, they will tell you how the pains and aches of a bad back, the annoyance of urinary troubles, the nervousness, the restlessness that come from kidney ills, can be relieved and cured. Read what one Tecumseh citizen says:

Mr. George Merritt, the well known proprietor of the cigar manufactory, says: "I can testify to the honesty and worth of Doan's Kidney Pills. There is no humbug about them. I was annoyed for some time with a dull aching pain in my back at times quite severe. I heard so much about Doan's Kidney Pills that I procured a box at C. A. Wright's drug store and after taking them a short time I found they were helping me. Finally the pain in my back disappeared entirely. Doan's Kidney Pills are a splendid remedy for all kidney ailments."

For sale by all dealers: Price 50 cents per box, Foster-Milburn company, Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

BIG FIRE AT PORT HURON.

Fireman Killed—Three Other Men Hurt by Falling Bricks.

Port Huron, Mich., Feb. 19.—Port Huron's worst conflagration in years occurred Tuesday night, resulting in one block being partially wiped out, including the St. Clair hotel and many business houses. One man is killed and three are badly injured as a result of falling walls. The total losses will approximate $175,000; covered by insurance.

The fire started in Lamlein's restaurant shortly before 12 o'clock, and spread with rapidity, although the firemen were confident they had it under control. The fire slowly eat its way south from the restaurant and bakery to Asman's floral store, and broke out in a huge blaze that defied all efforts to check it. The St. Clair hotel adjoined the burning buildings, and it was seen that nothing could stop it.

While the firemen were working in the hotel one of the walls began to crumble, and before the men could reach safety Milton Campbell was caught and crushed to death.

Ex-Patrolman John Martin, John Montgomery and William Dunton were badly crushed by falling brick.

The business places wiped out by the fire are the St. Clair hotel, the second largest and oldest hotel in the city; C. E. Mudford's cigar manufactory, Economist dry goods store, Don McPhee's barber shop, Asman Floral company, C. Lamlein, confectioner and baker.

Student Killed Himself.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Feb. 19.—Orlo G. Pepper, a freshman dental student of the university, shot himself through the brain Wednesday afternoon, dying instantly. He had passed in all his studies and had no known cause for his act. A letter was found bidding good-bye to his widowed mother and adding, "I am insane." Pepper had been reading a treatise on suicide, and the belief is that he deliberately undertook suicide to prove himself insane and maintain the test theory that sane men are afraid to murder themselves.

A Woman of Nerve.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Feb. 19.—A big St. Bernard dog became affected with rabies yesterday and, running away from home, terrorized the neighborhood. Mrs. Linkfield, the owner, putting on her street clothing, went in pursuit, easily following his trail in the snow. When she found the animal, in spite of his growling and snapping, she fastened a rope around his neck and led him home and locked him in the woodshed, where he was killed by the poundmaster. Mrs. Lingfield's clothing was torn by the frantic beast, but she was not injured.

Charged With Embezzlement.

Benton Harbor, Mich., Feb. 19.—Melvin Chambers, local agent for the Singer Sewing Machine company, was arrested yesterday on a charge of embezzlement. The warrant, which is sworn out by Joseph H. Baker of Grand Rapids, state agent, charges Chambers with converting $1,073 of the company's money to his own use. Chambers made no comment when arrested.

West Michigan Fair.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Feb. 19.—The annual meeting of the West Michigan State Fair association was held Wednesday afternoon and reports rendered show a cash balance of $11,256 in the treasury. The following officers were elected: President, William H. Anderson; vice-president, L. J. Rindge; secretary, Charles A. Finch; treasurer, Clay H. Hollister. The dates for the next fair are Sept. 14 to 19.

Found In a Snowdrift.

Lapeer, Mich., Feb. 19.—Workmen going home at 6 o'clock last night found the insensible form of a young man named Lorrey in a snowdrift, two blocks from Main street, where he had fallen helpless some time in the afternoon. He was almost dead, but under the care given him at a nearby house it is thought he will recover.

Cattle Killed Him.

Bronson, Mich., Feb. 19.—J. H. Russell, a prominent farmer near Bronson, was fatally injured by stampeding cattle in the Chicago stock yards and died Tuesday morning. He was 61 years old and leaves a widow, two sons and two daughters.

Riches From England.

Dexter, Mich., Feb. 19.—Judge Harriman of Ann Arbor, as attorney for Mrs. Emma Jobson of Dexter, has received a decision from England whereby his client receives the life use of £3,000 from the estate of a sister-in-law.

New Building Necessary.

Washington, Feb. 19.—Representative Mercer of Nebraska, chairman of the house committee on public buildings and grounds, conferred Wednesday with Secretary Cortelyou concerning a building for the new department of commerce and labor. The necessity for such a building is urgent, as the department will be one of the largest in the government. Figures have been prepared showing in detail the amount of space that will be necessary, which indicate that a suitable building is not available at present in the city.

Why Teak Wood Is Durable.

The teak, which has passed into proverb as the best material for shipbuilding, is superior to all other woods from the fact that it contains an essential oil which prevents spikes and nails driven into it from rusting. This property is not possessed by any other wood in the world and furnishes an explanation of the fact that ships built of teak are practically indestructible. Some have been known to last for 150 years, and when broken up their beams were as sound as when first put together.

A South African Animal.

There is a curious looking animal in South Africa that looks for all the world like a piece of toast with four legs, a head and a tail. It resembles a pussy cat about the forehead and ears, but its nose is distinctly that of a rat, while its tail is not very dissimilar to that of a fox. This strange animal is called the aardwolf and doubtless dwells in South Africa, because, judged by his looks, he would not be admitted into good animal society anywhere else.

My Hair

"I had a very severe sickness that took off all my hair. I purchased a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor and it brought all my hair back again."
W. D. Quinn, Marseilles, Ill.

One thing is certain,—Ayer's Hair Vigor makes the hair grow. This is because it is a hair food. It feeds the hair and the hair grows, that's all there is to it. It stops falling of the hair, too, and always restores color to gray hair.

Something that will do You Good

We know of no way in which we can be of more service to our readers than to tell them of something that will be of real good to them. For this reason we want to acquaint them with what we consider one of the very best remedies on the market for coughs, colds, and that alarming complaint, croup. We refer to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. We have used it with such good results in our family so long that it has become a household necessity. By its prompt use we havn't any doubt but that it has time and again prevented croup. The testimony is given upon our own experience, and we suggest that our readers, especially those who have small children, always keep it in their home as a safeguard against croup.—Camden (S. C.) Messenger. For sale by J. J. Orr.

Why He Desired a Cannon.

It is related that an Indian chief once approached General Crook and wanted to borrow a cannon.

"Do you expect me to loan you a cannon with which to kill my soldiers?" the old veteran inquired.

"No," the chief replied; "kill soldiers with a club. Want cannon to kill cowboys."

Rev. Kooiker, of the Reformed church, has received a unanimous call from the Reformed church at Centerville, Mich. Mr. Kooiker told his people last Sunday that it would take two or three weeks before he could decide whether or not to accept it.

Attention, farmers and breeders of Lenawee county! In our midst is owned Steel Hal 2:16¼, a horse the type of which is needed to raise general purpose horses with warm blood in their veins. Steel Hal 2:16¼, a beautiful horse weighing about 1300 lbs. with chest and muscles of a horse weighing 2000 lbs. His owner, Chas. Maynard, of the bank of Britton, Britton, Mich. having no time to canvas for patronage and Steel Hal being a strange horse it was thought advisable to accept the offer of Tuscola county people who want to lease him for the season of 1903 but the owner has been persuaded to promise that if the people of Lenawee county want him to remain here by sending their name and address on or before Feb. 25, 1903, manifesting their desire to book one or more mares. If enough names can be booked (fees $25 to insure) thereby insuring a paying season, he will not send him away. Should he stay here he will go to Holloway, Adrian, Tecumseh, Clinton and Macon. Remember Steel Hal 2:16¼ is closely related to the best ones: Star Pointer 1:59¼, Hal Dillard 2:04, Direct Hal 1:04, etc. Some of this speed will come out somewhere. Attend to this at once.

Shock After Burns.

Shock, which is always present in severe burns, requires the administration of stimulants. The amount of shock or collapse after any bad injury or sudden fright differs with the character of individuals. Some succumb to it much more readily than others. When serious, the temperature drops below normal, the face is pale, pinched and anxious, the pulse slow and feeble, the body bathed in a cold perspiration. Sometimes there is shivering. Sometimes the mind wanders. Place the patient at once in a horizontal position, the head slightly raised. Administer stimulants, alcoholic or aromatic vinegar. If whisky or brandy is used, give from a teaspoonful to a tablespoonful of hot water every ten minutes until five or six doses have been taken. Surround the body and legs inside the thighs and under the armpits with hot water bags, hot stones—anything to give warmth—but take care not to burn your patient. If the injury is to the head, follow the same treatment, but omit the alcoholic stimulant.

COURAGE OF AMERICANS

By Not Giving In to Rheumatism They Find Relief from Pain.

Americans do not sit down and cry over their troubles, but look around for a way out; that was the way Athlophoros was created—to drive the Uric acid from the blood—the cause of Rheumatism.

Uric acid in the blood is likened to floating ice in a river—we all know how ice congests commerce and retards progress—Uric acid is the same—it prevents proper circulation of the blood, besides poisoning it, and brings on complications with the stomach, kidneys and heart.

Many people think they have Dyspepsia, Bright's Disease and Heart Trouble, whereas once rid of the Uric acid they are freed from all, as well as their Rheumatism. Athlophoros goes to the seat of the trouble and quickly forces out the Uric acid—improvement is noted at once and the cure is sure—one bottle will prove if you are being helped—it only costs you the price of one bottle to test it—All druggists sell it—if not, send $1 to The Athlophoros Co., New Haven, Conn. Don't sit still and suffer.

Animal Sense Perceptions.

In the course of an article on animal sense perceptions, in which special attention is directed to savorous or offensive odors as a means of protection, the editor of the Zoologist warns his readers against regarding animal etiology too much from the human standpoint. Because animals cannot speak we must not assume that they have no modes of communication; it is by no means certain that the ordinary explanation of "warning colors" is the true one, while the evil smell of the durian fruit does not render it distasteful either to the orang or to man himself.

Curiosity.

"What did that lady have the screen across one part of the room for, ma?" asked little Harry, who had been making a call with his mother.

"I suppose she had something there she didn't want seen," replied his mother.

"And was that the reason, ma, that when you thought she wasn't looking you peeped behind it?"

Complimentary.

"Gentlemen," said a judge addressing the jury in a recent Irish case reported in Law Notes, "you have heard the evidence. The indictment says the prisoner was arrested for stealing a pig. The offense seems to be becoming a common one. The time has come when it must be put a stop to; otherwise, gentlemen, none of you will be safe."

WHERE HE FELL

Monument Unveiled Sunday to Late Gen. Lawton.

LADRONES ARE ACTIVE AGAIN

Force Under General San Miguel Captured Bands of Constabulary and Disarmed Them—Several of Constabulary Made Dash For Freedom.

Manila, Feb. 23.—Two hundred troops and hundreds of veterans participated Sunday in the unveiling of the monument marking the spot where General Lawton was killed at San Mateo. General Davis and others made speeches eulogizing General Lawton.

A force of Ladrones under General San Miguel reappeared in Rizal province Saturday. They avoided an engagement with the main force in the south, but captured three small detachments of constabulary. The enemy surrounded the town of Cainata and Taytay, eleven miles east of Manila, Saturday and captured thirty scouts and ten men of the constabulary, whom they disarmed and set free.

Sunday Inspector McIlwaine, at the head of ten constabulary, was surprised and captured near Montalban, sixteen miles northeast of Manila. The Ladrones promised to release them if the constabulary would surrender their arms. While they were conferring on this point McIlwaine made a dash for liberty and he and all the constabulary effected their escape.

When the news of the reappearance of General San Miguel's force reached Manila, reinforcements of scouts and constabulary were hurried into the Rizal province. General Allen and Colonel Scott went to Antipolo and assumed command of the forces there. They met with small detachments of the enemy and a few skirmishes took place. They were, however, unable to locate the main body of Ladrones.

It is said that General San Miguel's force consists of 300 men, armed and uniformed. He claims the insurgent leadership and fights under the Katipunan flag.

According to news from Albay, Luzon, a force of Ladrones attacked a small detachment of constabulary Friday. The constabulary retreated, but killed eleven of the enemy. Two of the constabulary were killed.

RIOTS AT SOUTH BEND

Striking Employes Attacked Railroad Powerhouse.

South Bend, Ind., Feb. 23.—An attempt was made by a mob of 150 men to wreck the powerhouse of the Indiana Railway company and do injury to the employes Sunday. Seven men were at the powerhouse when the attack was made. One, the watchman, named Deitrich, was thrown bodily through a window and seriously injured. J. A. Ovitt and M. L. Lester were badly bruised by brickbats, stones and clubs.

The attack was planned for a time when it was thought the police could not reach the scene in force, but a detail reached the place in time to effect several arrests. Among those arrested are two ex-employes of the company, who went on strike. They will be charged with conspiracy, riot and assault with intent to kill. Considerable damage was done to property.

Relief For Snowbound Trains.

St. Johns, N. B., Feb. 23.—Relief parties with food Sunday reached the trains which are snowbound in the interior and supplied them with provisions. The nearest train was freed in the afternoon and started backward for St. Johns. The relief train is forcing its way forward, trying to clear the track to enable the other two blocked trains to move east also. It is impossible to say when they will be released, as the drifts are very heavy.

Murdered by His Son.

New Orleans, Feb. 23.—Peter Farrell, one of the leading local Democratic politicians and state coal guager, was shot and killed by his eldest son, Edward, Sunday. The family claims that in a fit of ungovernable temper Farrell attempted to kill Edward and George, his eldest boys, for misconduct, and Edward wrested the pistol from him and fired three shots into his father's heart. The boy surrendered.

He Had Dead Woman's Watch.

Cleveland, Feb. 23.—Joseph Corwin, a railroad man of Toledo, was arrested last night and is held in connection with the murder of Maggie Snedegar a few days ago. A watch that was identified as belonging to the murdered woman was found in Corwin's pocket by the police. He was arrested in the vicinity where the alleged murder occurred.

Demands For Reforms Presented.

Constantinople, Feb. 23.—The Austrian and Russian ambassadors presented Saturday to the grand vizier identical memoranda embodying the demands for reform in Macedonia. They afterwards acquainted the foreign minister of the step taken. This course was adopted to give the proceedings a semi-official character.

Four Persons Drowned.

Tallahassee, Fla., Feb. 23.—Three white children and a negro man were drowned in the Flat woods Saturday night, south of Tallahassee. Jefferson Johnson and his wife, parents of the children, were saved. The family were in a wagon and in the darkness the team lost the road and got into deep water.

WANTS THAT MONEY

Germany Demands Immediate Payment of Amount Stipulated.

BOWEN REPLIES IN NEGATIVE

Says Money Will Be Forthcoming on March 15, When It Will Be Paid to German Representative at Caracas—Other Protocol Being Prepared.

Washington, Feb. 23.—The German government, through its representative here, Baron Speck von Sternberg, has made a request of Mr. Bowen for the immediate payment of the $5,500 which it was stipulated in the protocol signed on Feb. 13, should be paid within thirty days from that date, as a preliminary to the raising of the blockade against Venezuelan ports and the agreement to send the question of preferential treatment of the blockading nation to The Hague for determination. Mr. Bowen promptly declined to accede to the request, but informed Baron Sternberg that, as provided in the protocol, the money would be paid to the German representative at Caracas thirty days from Feb. 13, which would be on the 15th of March.

The reason that animated the German government in making the request is not disclosed here, nor is Mr. Bowen aware of it. The matter, however, has some significance, perhaps, in view of the fact that the ships taken by the Germans during the blockade have not yet been returned to Venezuela.

During Sunday Mr. Bowen had calls from the French ambassador, M. Jusserand, the Spanish minister, Senor Ojeda, and the Belgian minister, Baron Moncheur, in regard to the protocols that are in preparation for the settlement of the claims of the citizens of their countries against Venezuela.

London, Feb. 23.—The correspondent of the Standard at Brussels telegraphs that the protocol between Belgium and Venezuela will be signed this week. Belgium, says the correspondent, has obtained full satisfaction. The Belgian claimants will receive $2,500,000 after the Anglo-German claims have been paid.

War College Cornerstone Laid.

Washington, Feb. 23.—In the presence of an assemblage of distinguished people, including the president of the United States, members of the cabinet and of congress, justices of the supreme court, representatives of foreign powers, and others eminent in the life of the nation, the cornerstone of the army war college was laid here Saturday with impressive military and Masonic ceremonies. The occasion was rendered especially notable and interesting by addresses delivered by President Roosevelt, Secretary of War Root and Major-General Young, president of the war college. The site selected for the new building is on the reservation of the Washington barracks, at the foot of Four and a Half street.

Bailey, Barnum's Partner, Dead.

New York, Feb. 23.—George F. Bailey, who was famous as a circus man and was a rival and then the partner of P. T. Barnum, is dead at the age of 84 years. Death was due to paralysis. The body was taken to Danbury, Conn., for burial. Mr. Bailey is accredited by showmen with being the originator of the "Cardiff giant" and the "Colorado mummy." George F. Bailey has been confounded frequently with James Bailey, Barnum's late partner. They were not related. James Bailey went into partnership with Barnum about twenty years ago. George F. Bailey and Mr. Barnum had parted their business relations then.

Hotel Deveaux Burned.

Toledo, Feb. 23.—The Hotel Deveaux, corner of St. Clair and Jefferson streets, was almost completely destroyed by fire last evening. The fire was discovered by one of the guests on the third floor and had gained quite a little headway. An alarm was turned in at once, but by the time the department had arrived the flames had spread to the second and fourth floors. The guests were notified and all left the building in safety, many taking their personal effects with them. The cause of fire is unknown. The loss will amount to $60,000, with $50,000 insurance.

Burned Alive In Coke Oven.

Connellsville, Pa., Feb. 23.—Mary Kohland, aged 11 years, met a horrible death last night by being burned alive in a coke oven. The little girl, in running down the hill above the ovens, fell and rolled into one of the hot ovens. Men at work nearby broke into the oven and secured the body, but it was burned to a crisp, hardly the semblance of a human form being left.

IT QCEERS THEM

Jurys Unable to Tell Whether Diseases Are Dangerous.

ACCORDING TO THE LAW

Is Necessary in Order to Grant Removal Permits—State Board of Health Want Law Requiring Publication of "Dangerous Diseases."

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 23.—The state registration law requires that "in deaths from dangerous communicable diseases, burial or removal permits shall be granted by the registrar only in accordance with the rules of the local board of health and of the state board of health relating thereto."

Secretary Baker of the state board says that frequent requests are received for instructions relating to said rules, but that the matter is not on a thoroughly satisfactory basis at present and authoritative instructions can not always be given. He submits that it should not be required, as is now the case, when suit is brought to enforce any one of the statutes in which the term "disease dangerous to the public health" is used, that a jury entirely without medical knowledge should be expected to decide whether or not a particular disease belongs to this class.

Neither, in his opinion and that of the state board, should it be possible for a board of supervisors to do as was done in one county—practically attempt to put a stop to the legitimate work of local boards of health for the restriction of certain dangerous communicable diseases, because of a resolution by the supervisors not to pay bills for the case of indigent persons sick with those diseases.

In view of this condition of affairs the state board of health urges the legislature to enact a law directing it to publish each year a list of diseases "dangerous to the public health," and authorizing all officials and persons to recognize such lists and govern themselves accordingly.

State Legislators Put Forty-two Bills Friday.

AN EDUCATION MEASURE

Provides For the Creation of a Normal School in Each County—Teaches Art of Teaching Free—Conducted by County Officials.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 21.—Four bills introduced in the senate and thirty-eight in the house, where some local measures were also passed, was the result of the week-end session of the legislature Friday.

Among the more prominent bills introduced was an education measure of Lenawee, providing for county normal training schools. The first section reads:

"Upon the application of the board of education of a district in a county not having a state normal school within its borders, the state superintendent of public instruction may * * * grant permission to establish * * * a county normal training school for the purpose of giving free instruction in the principles of education and methods of teaching to residents of the county."

The bill provides that the county normal board shall consist of the superintendent of public instruction, the county school commissioner and the superintendent of schools in the district in which the normal training class has been established.

Certificates issued for a one-year course allow the holder to teach for three years in any school employing not more than two teachers in that county. Certificates issued on a two-year course allow the holder to teach for five years in any school in the county classes below the tenth grade, except in cities which certificate their teachers.

The bill provides a state appropriation to the amount of $250 for each teacher employed in the school, the total amount for any county being limited to $1,000 a year. The county is to foot the rest of the bill.

St. Louis World's Fair Representative Ferris, who is lobbying for the St. Louis commission bill, is reported to be out with a petition for legislators to sign asking that he be appointed secretary of the commission. The bill has not yet passed and promises to have some hard sledding. William A. Hurst of Detroit is also working in the interests of the appropriation. He is also a candidate for secretary, but has not yet sprung any petition.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

The young people claim they didn't hear or see the train until it struck the horse. Miss Meyer claims that she could reach the engine with her hand from the buggy. The horse had to be killed immediately which caused the loss of Mr. Schwab to be one hundred twenty-five dollars besides the damage on buggy and harness which he was offered a couple of weeks before.—Saline Observer.

THE MYSTERY OF GRASLOV.

By Ashley Towne. . . .

"I will."

He tried to find some clew to the place where Vladimir was incarcerated, but there was nothing to guide him.

"I cannot find him, and I believe he is safer than you will be if Neslerov traps you here. Neslerov nor I will ever get out alive. We must leave him."

"Then come, and may God give him his protection till we can give him justice!"

They hurried to the stairs. The door was relocked, the iron key hung in its accustomed place and the door to the guardroom unbolted. The halls were still lighted by the brilliant lamps of the fete, though daylight was coming on. But there was no one stirring.

"Quick!" said Olga. "Let us understand each other. Therese, who is here as my attendant, is the widow of a servant of the Graslov household—loyal to the old duke. She is willing to tell the truth. Has Paulpoff spoken?"

"Yes. He told me all, and I was about to start for Perm with the portrait of Princess Alexandra when I was arrested by Jansky and brought here."

"And now you are free! Why did you take this interest in the mystery of Graslov?"

"Because," he answered after a slight pause, "Miss Gordon, whom I have known for a long time, loves Vladimir, and I think Vladimir loves her."

"Ah," she exclaimed, peering at him closely, "and for her—for her sake—you wanted to publish—the truth?"

"Yes, and for his sake also."

"Then he is not the only one who loves her, this American girl," she said.

His face became flushed, but he did not answer.

"Now go," she said. "Find Paulpoff and bring him here. You know where he is."

"He is still in the hut at Tivoloffsky, if Jansky has not spirited him away."

"Then look for him there, and if he is gone the governor general will help us find him. Oh, I wish De Muloff would come!"

She sped into Jansky's room and replaced the keys in his pocket. Then, returning, she said:

"God bless you! Help me establish the truth, and the gratitude of the Neslerovs will be yours."

"You may count on me," he answered as he passed through the palace door. "I will bring old Paulpoff to tell the truth."

CHAPTER XV.

NESLEROV KNOWS HIS PERIL.

ABOUT the time Governor Neslerov was rousing himself from a deep slumber which had not refreshed him after the ball, Jansky, superintendent of police, was groaning and muttering in his own efforts to wake up. He knew he was awake, but the effect of the heavy drug was still upon him. Itzig, however, having succumbed to a lesser quantity than was taken by Jansky, was sooner awake and had been relieved by the day guard and gone to his own quarters. The first question Neslerov asked was for Princess Olga. When he learned that she was still sleeping, he went to see Jansky.

"What is the matter with you?" he asked. "You seem to be ill."

"I do feel rather ill," said Jansky. "I don't know when I felt like this."

"You were drunk; that's all. You were drunk when I left you. Did you drink any more?"

"Yes; in making the round of inspection I discovered Itzig asleep and a bottle of wine half gone. I drank the rest."

"Itzig asleep! At his post! And this danger near us?"

"Pooh! The girl suspects nothing. A girl of her age, even though she be a princess, could not dissemble so well. I tell you Olga suspects nothing."

"Then why is she here?"

"Well, she is eccentric, as you know, and it is quite possible that she would like to be the wife of the governor of Tomsk."

Neslerov laughed.

"She would like to kill him, rather."

"Even so, she does not suspect."

"But this thing of Itzig being asleep at his post—we must examine into it."

"The poor devil wanted his share in the festivities, I suppose. We must not deal too severely with him. He certainly did not steal the wine. Some one must have given it to him."

"Who? I must find that out. But, since he has been asleep, you had better examine the prisoners."

"They are there all right. How could they be otherwise."

"But you know what it means to me if they escape."

"Escape! I will stake my head they cannot escape. Why, to pass out from the dungeons they must open the iron gate and the door of the guardroom. See, here is the key to the guardroom door."

"Still," said Neslerov hesitatingly, "I wish you would make an examination."

"Oh, if your excellency wishes it, I will do so gladly. But I promise you they are there."

Jansky was still stupid from the drugged wine, but he knew what he was doing. He went to the guardroom and unlocked the door leading to the dungeons. In the passage he obtained a lantern and passed through the iron gate. He went down the stairs and through the passages, which he knew well, to the dungeon. He entered and stood horror stricken at the empty chains hanging on the wall. With fear in his heart he crept back to the stairs, glancing nervously around him, for he knew the strength of the American. Neslerov, to whom he went, looked in surprise at the ashen face.

"Curses upon us all!" said Jansky hoarsely. "They are gone!"

Jansky looked sheepishly at the governor, and Neslerov looked at Jansky like an angry wolf.

"Gone! Both prisoners gone!" cried the governor. "Is this true?"

"Unfortunately—the thing I thought impossible is a fact."

Neslerov's face was white.

"I thought—you told me—they were both in chains!" he said, his voice strained and tense.

"I did, and it was true. With my own hands I chained them. The American was in the dungeon at the first landing and Paulpoff was down in the lower cellar. With my own hands I chained them, and I hold the key to the door. The key to the chains still hangs where I placed it. This is a miracle. The men must be devils in human form."

"The American is something like a devil," said Neslerov grimly, "but I doubt if he has supernatural powers. If those chains have been loosened, Jansky, some human agent has done it, and there is a traitor in the palace."

"Whom does your excellency suspect?"

"My cousin Olga!"

"That girl! She would no more dare go down in those dungeons than she would enter a den of wild beasts. And how could she learn that they were down there?"

"It is not quite a secret. Some of the servants saw them brought in."

"Since the princess came the servants have had enough to do without talking about two prisoners of whom they know nothing. Anyway, how could Olga, who has spent but little time in Russia and none near Graslov or Perm, ever hear of the Paulpoffs?"

"I know not. But certain it is there is a traitor here. This escape, if escape it is, will cost us dear."

"If escape it is! It may not be an escape after all! The chains are old and rusty. Perhaps they have given way, and the prisoners may be wandering around the passages. I will send for Itzig."

Neslerov was terribly disturbed. He paced to and fro in the police office, and his face did not regain its color. He was playing for a high stake—the highest stake—playing for his life—and the game seemed lost.

Jansky sent for Itzig, and he came before them.

"You went to sleep last night!" thundered Jansky, whose theory was that to obtain the truth from a culprit you must terrify him at the start.

"I swear I did not, your excellency!" replied Itzig, shivering in terror.

"You lie! I went in the guardroom, and you were asleep. I found there a portion of a bottle of wine. Who gave you that?"

"I! A bottle of wine! I never tasted wine in my life. Brandy and vodka, plenty, but wine—I am too poor."

"Oh, you did not buy this wine. Some one at the fete gave it to you. Who was it?"

"I know not! I swear I know not who put the wine in my room!"

"You are lying. A tray was also there, with dishes. You had your feast and got drunk. Who brought the stuff to you?"

"I swear no one. If there was a feast, it was some one else's."

"How could any one else eat there and you not know it?"

Itzig saw he was lost.

"I may have—perhaps I slept a moment."

"A moment! You slept hours, and the prisoners you were guarding have escaped."

"Impossible!" gasped Itzig, almost sinking through the floor.

"Enough of this!" said Neslerov. "Itzig is here, and if he has permitted the men to escape he can be punished any time. We are wasting precious moments. Let us get down to the dungeons and find them."

Jansky took a pistol, and so did Neslerov. They went to the guardroom. Jansky took the lantern and opened the door and iron gate. He led the way, Neslerov and Itzig following.

"See? He has gone," said Jansky, pointing to the chains.

"Are you certain this is the room?"

"Certain? As I am alive."

"Then for the other, and keep a watch. They are not armed, but remember Paulpoff's strength, and the other is no pygmy."

Again Jansky led the way. He did not tell Neslerov he had not been to visit Vladimir. In his agitation at finding the American gone he had assumed, of course, that if one could escape both could. Reaching an obscure corner, toward which Denton had not chanced to go in his search, they found another stairway leading downward. This short flight brought them to a horrible place—more horrible than the one where Denton had been chained.

This was a dungeon made cold and damp by the water that stood two inches deep on the floor, and in which blind reptiles that had never seen any brighter place crawled around in the slimy ooze. Long strings of rotten moss hung from the walls. Here, in this noisome and terrible place, was Vladimir, chained in the same manner as Denton had been.

"I thought you said he had gone too!" exclaimed Neslerov, a flood of hope and courage showing in his voice.

"I thought so. In my excitement I believed both had gone, but if one is here the other must be. We will search the dungeons."

They did not speak to Vladimir, who was suffering awful tortures, but turned and ascended to the upper floor. Here, winding and turning among the passages, they crept stealthily—three armed men searching for one man who was unarmed, yet fearing that the one might leap upon them and slay them as they walked. But they did not find the American and returned crestfallen to the office of the superintendent of police.

"That man did not set himself free," said Neslerov. "Some one who knows my secret has done this. Olga is here. Who else but Olga could do the thing?"

"Did the Princess Olga come to you during the ball?" Jansky suddenly asked Itzig. "Was it the princess who gave you that wine?"

The pallor of the man's face gave Jansky his answer.

"Heavens!" he exclaimed. "The wine must have been drugged! It was Olga who set him free!"

"Then we must act with extreme caution, for if she knows this much she will ruin me. For a short time we must act as if we did not know the American had escaped. But you and Unsgethop must find him—find him—before he gets out of Tomsk. Then, with him again in our grasp, I will deal with Olga. Fool, to put her strength against mine, and in Tomsk!"

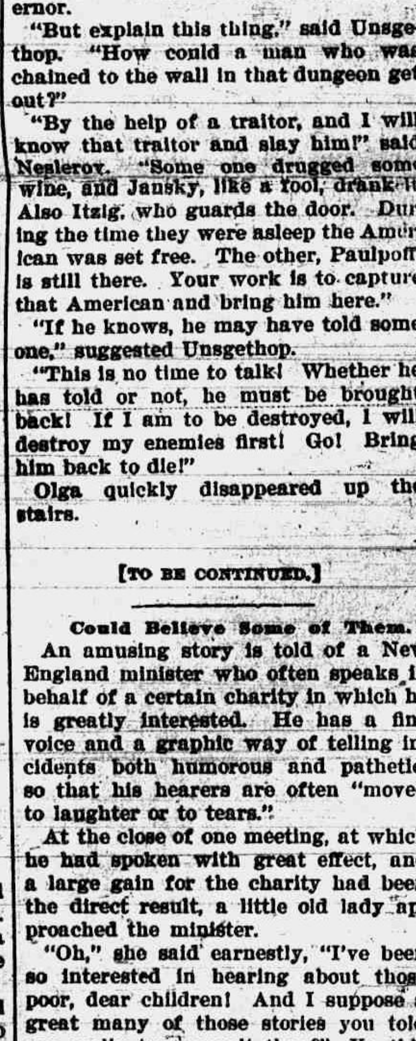
"What about Vladimir?" asked Jansky.

"Leave him alone. Let him starve! He can do no harm."

Jansky went quickly to work. Unsgethop, upon whom he depended most, had gone to another place in the discharge of his duty. Jansky made several fruitless journeys during the day, but no trace of the American could he find.

Olga, when, late in the day, she joined the governor, noticed the studied calm and the steely glitter of his eye. She knew he had discovered the escape of Denton, but the resolute girl did not fear him. She merely nerved herself to finish the work she had set herself to do. She had frequent errands that took her near the office of the superintendent of police, and she kept her ears alert to catch the slightest whisper.

It was evening when she went for the seventh time, and loud voices came from the superintendent's office. So excited were the speakers that they did not realize that their voices reached into the hall.



Winding and turning among the passages, they crept stealthily.

"I tell you it is so!" said the voice of Unsgethop, who had returned and who seemed to be angry. "How was I to know that a man could escape from the dungeons? I heard it—that the American had passed through Dorky on his way to Tivoloffsky. I supposed Neslerov had changed his plans."

"Is he going to Tivoloffsky? Old Paulpoff is still there!" said the governor.

"But explain this thing," said Unsgethop. "How could a man who was chained to the wall in that dungeon get out?"

"By the help of a traitor, and I will know that traitor and slay him!" said Neslerov. "Some one drugged some wine, and Jansky, like a fool, drank it. Also Itzig, who guards the door. During the time they were asleep the American was set free. The other, Paulpoff, is still there. Your work is to capture that American and bring him here."

"If he knows, he may have told some one," suggested Unsgethop.

"This is no time to talk! Whether he has told or not, he must be brought back! If I am to be destroyed, I will destroy my enemies first! Go! Bring him back to die!"

Olga quickly disappeared up the stairs.

Aching Joints

In the fingers, toes, arms, and other parts of the body, are joints that are inflamed and swollen by rheumatism—that acid condition of the blood which affects the muscles also.

Sufferers dread to move, especially after sitting or lying long, and their condition is commonly worse in wet weather.

"It has been a long time since we have been without Hood's Sarsaparilla. My father thinks he could not do without it. He has been troubled with rheumatism since he was a boy, and Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine he can take that will enable him to take his place in the field." MISS ADA DOTY, Sidney, Iowa.

Could Believe Some of Them.

An amusing story is told of a New England minister who often speaks in behalf of a certain charity in which he is greatly interested. He has a fine voice and a graphic way of telling incidents both humorous and pathetic, so that his hearers are often "moved to laughter or to tears."

At the close of one meeting, at which he had spoken with great effect, and a large gain for the charity had been the direct result, a little old lady approached the minister.

"Oh," she said earnestly, "I've been so interested in hearing about those poor, dear children! And I suppose a great many of those stories you told are really true, aren't they?"—Youth's Companion.

Apples and Currants.

If the liver is sluggish, refusing to work, so that the bile flow is deficient and so all fats remain undigested, the eating of either apples or an abundance of currants will effect a magical change. The jaded organ will be stimulated; all the digestive juices act; the food is all absorbed, and soon the appetite cries for more. Therefore the apple and the currant have been called appetizers because they are the means of bringing appetite to those in search of it. The apple being in season longest has the usual claim to favor as an appetizer, but the currant is almost as deserving of the claim. But it has more waste in the shape of fiber and skin than is found in the apple, the proportion in the currant being over 4½ per cent, while in the apple it is only 3 1-5 per cent.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, Feb. 23, 1903.

After a serious deadlock in the senate, it is believed that a compromise on the Statehood bill will be effected and will be followed by the ratification of the Panama Canal treaty. The details of the compromise have not been made public but your correspondent is in a position to say that it will be on the basis of the "two state" bill previously proposed with some modifications providing for separate statehood for Arizona and New Mexico when they shall have fulfilled certain prescribed conditions. This arrangement has received the sanction of Senators Quay, Elkins and Gallinger, all of whom are for Statehood, and only the attitude of the democrats remains to be ascertained.

The President has advised various members of the Senate that in the event of either of the treaties failing of ratification he will call an extra session of the Senate. It had been supposed that with the anti-trust program completed and the Alaskan and Panama treaties ratified Mr. Roosevelt would be satisfied but that such is not the case he has stated in unequivocal terms. There is little hope that the Cuban treaty can be ratified before the 4th of March so that an extra session of the Senate is considered almost inevitable but it is believed it will be of short duration.

The House has been devoting its attention chiefly to appropriation bills and has passed a majority of the regular measures. Leading members say that they could complete all the remaining essential business in a period even more brief than that remaining to this Congress. The Fowler currency bill has been made the regular order and Mr. Fowler tells your correspndent that he believes it will pass both houses but he is the only Representative thus far found who holds that opinion. It is generally believed that the Aldrich bill will become a law and it will in a great measure supply the relief for which the Fowler bill is intended.

The last Cabinet meeting was participated in by Mr. George B. Cortelyou, who has been sworn in as Secretary of Commerce and Labor, his accession adding one more to the lawyers in the Cabinet there now being six lawyers out of nine members. Mr. Cortelyou never practised law but is a graduate of Georgetown Law School, and has received the degree of master of laws. Secretary Cortelyou is now engaged in preparing an estimate of expenses for the new department and it is understood that he will recommend that an appropriation be made at this session of Congress for a building for the accommodation of his department.

No answer has been received to the cablegram of Attorney General Knox accepting the offer of the Panama Canal Company, subject to the ratification of the treaty which has been signed by representatives of the United States and of Columbia. It is known, however, that correspondence by cable has been in progress between the directors of the French company and their legal representatives in Washington and that the former are disposed to reject Mr. Knox's offer unless some definite date is set for the acceptance of the offer. It is alleged that the French company is under constant expense in maintaining the work already performed on the canal and has moreover a force of men engaged on the isthmus and the directors think the United States should make some provision for reimbursing them for such expense as they may incur after the expiration of the present option. It is also claimed that certain European capitalists are prepared to furnish the funds for completing the canal if the United States fails to effect its purchase.

The President and Mrs. Roosevelt are both suffering from ill health although in neither instance is it believed that their indisposition is serious. Mrs Roosevelt fainted at a recent state dinner and was at once ordered by her physician to abstain from furthur participation in social affairs for a brief period. She has since recovered somewhat and gave a musical last week. The President is suffering from an attack of laryngitis and is under the care of a physician but it is believed that he will soon recover. Unless an extra session of the Senate or of Congress interferes, Mr. Roosevelt, accompanied by Secretary Root, will leave for Colorado about the middle of March for a brief hunting trip. His long anticipated western trip will not be taken until about the first of May.

A report has reached leading officers of the Marine Corps to the effect that Secretary Root is anxious to effect a transfer of the Corps from the Navy to the War Department. This proposition has been considered by the naval general board and both Admiral Dewey and Rear Admiral Taylor have condemned it. These gentlemen hold that the Marine Corps is fast becoming a most important adjunct to the navy, furnishing landing parties on practically instant notice and they do not hesitate to predict that, while the army will in time become a mere police body for the maintenance of order and peace within the limits of the United States and its possessions, the Marine Corps will acquire all the glory growing out of any disturbance on foreign shores.

On Saturday was laid the corner stone of the new Army War College at what are known as the Washington Barracks. The corner stone was laid by the President who, notwithstanding his indisposition, insisted in participating in the exercises and the oration of the day was delivered by Secretary Root. The establishment of the War College has long been the aim of leading army officers and will furnish to those officers in the army, who demonstrate at the special service school an especial proficiency, an opportunity to perfect their military education under the most favorable circumstances. The location is in the City of Washington at the junction of the eastern and western branches of the Potomac River and the new post is destined to become one of the finest in the United States if not in the world.

A Deerfield minister is said to have preached ten sermons, attended four funerals and three other meetings and traveled 292 miles in the space of eight days.

Pa he's bull heded and I'm red heded and level too. The smart end of a boy is his hed except when he's spanked, but the smart end of a bee is not there—oh, no. An old weather prognosticator says: "Better than any silver tongued thermometer is an old scratched-up, lopeared tom cat. If he eats grass, it's a sign of rain; if he stands with his back to the stove, look out for cold weather; when he washes his face wash yours, for company is coming; if he is nervous at the time he is usually sleepy, look to your lightning rod, an electrical storm is brewing. Everything he does is a sign of something."

This little story in verse was told last week by a county exchange: "He didn't have a dollar; he didn't have a dime. His clothes and shoes were looking just as though they'd served their time. He did't try to kill himself to dodge misfortune's whacks. Instead, he got some ashes and he filled five dozen sacks. Then, next he begged a dollar. In the paper in the morn he advertised tin polish that would put the sun to scorn. He kept on advertising, and, just now, suffice to say, he's out in California at his cottage on the bay."

Harold Pamphilon, the young man who worked the worthless check game in this city last Thursday, was sentenced by Judge Lockwood, to two years at Ionia, last Saturday. When arrested he gave his name as J. Markle, but the officers soon unearthed his real name, together with a check that he had worked off on a merchant at Wellington, O. Enough evidence was gathered to show that he was an old offender in the check game. His home is in Toronto, Canada, where he left about a year ago, since which time he had no regular occupation.—Monroe Democrat.

Thirteen is lucky or unlucky according from which standpoint you view it. Grand Rapids saloonists consider it unlucky, and the temperance people think different. Thirteen saloonists were arrested Feb. 18 for violating the liquor law, and as there was no escaping the evidence furnished by Rev. A. R. Ferris, the thirteen pleaded guilty before Judge Nenham, and he suspends sentence till March 1st. The prospects are that the violation will be atoned for by a money consideration, in the shape of a fine, instead of six months each in the county jail.—Adrian Press.

He was very drunk as he leaned against a telephone pole on Cortland street and attracted the attention of a crowd of small boys the other day. Around the index finger of his right hand was tied a piece of string, and this he held up and regarded with stupid gravity. He seemed to know that it had been placed there to remind him of something, but what that something was seemed quite beyond him. "Z'at's queerish thing," he cogitated. "I've been tryin' for two hoursh to think what that piece o' tring meant, an' it jus' occursh to me that it was to remind me that I promished my wife I wouldn't drink anything today! I'm mos' abshent minded man in th' worl'."—Jackson Patriot.

Consumption

Salt pork is a famous old-fashioned remedy for consumption. "Eat plenty of pork," was the advice to the consumptive 50 and 100 years ago.

Salt pork is good if a man can stomach it. The idea behind it is that fat is the food the consumptive needs most.

Scott's Emulsion is the modern method of feeding fat to the consumptive. Pork is too rough for sensitive stomachs. Scott's Emulsion is the most refined of fats, especially prepared for easy digestion.

Feeding him fat in this way, which is often the only way, is half the battle, but Scott's Emulsion does more than that. There is something about the combination of cod liver oil and hypophosphites in Scott's Emulsion that puts new life into the weak parts and has a special action on the diseased lungs.

A sample will be sent free upon request.

Be sure that this picture in the form of a label is on the wrapper of every bottle of Emulsion you buy.

Mr. Waldron, of Tecumseh, at the Hudson institute last week, said the Michigan egg crop last year was valued at $6,000,000 and the wheat crop at $4,000,000. However, if Waldron had bought eggs, instead of selling them, and had our experience, we believe he would swear that the egg receipts were fully $60,000,000 in this state.—Adrian Press.

Hearts of Oak.

Every one who has witnessed any of the plays of James A. Herne will ever remember the charm of the children he introduces. Especially in "Hearts of Oak" and "Shore Acres" the children are real, living natural beings. The author provides them with lines such as they really would utter and allows them to lisp their words and express their feelings as they would in real life. The children are not the impossible beings as one usually sees on the stage; they are the types of hundreds of thousands of little ones to be found in American homes. "Hearts of Oak" with its trained company of artists, its children, its singers and its wealth of realistic scenic effects, is to be presented at the New Bradley Tuesday evening, March 3.

RECEPTION

Given by the Monday Club

AT THE BORDINE RESIDENCE

Monday Afternoon. It Was a Martha Washington Day.

The Monday Club were out in good numbers yesterday afternoon for their mid-winter reception at the home of Mrs. W. S. Bordine. It was a Martha Washington day and a handsome flag floating over the front entrance, bore witness to the fact, while inside the national colors were everywhere. The staircase and hall, where the reception committee awaited the arrivals, was artistically draped with flags and bunting.

Mrs. Bordine, the hostess of the afternoon, was dressed in Martha Washington costume and was assisted in receiving by Mrs. T. C. Harris, Mrs. North, Miss Phelps and Miss Stacy, the club officers. Miss Linda Hall, in a handsome yellow gown of silk mull, distributed decorated programs to the guests and Mrs. Howland called the meeting to order and announced the following numbers:

Paper, "Social Life of the Washingtons"—Mrs. Hillman.

Recitation—Miss May Garlinghouse.

"Old Colonial Belles"—Mrs. Eugene Harris.

Vocal solo—Miss McKenna, accompanied by Mrs. Levi Hayden.

Mrs. Finch then ushered the guests into the dining room which had been arranged after the manner of other days. The light from numerous candelabra shone on a pretty little picture of handsome waiter girls in Puritan caps and kerchiefs, serving coffee from a table decorated with smilax and daffodils. Mrs. Henry Wilson and Mrs. Jennie Hall took turns in presiding at the coffee urn, and Misses Florence Brewer, Florence Primrose, Viola Shull, Jennie Gillespie and Mrs. E. D. Brown served the guests in a delightful manner. Mrs. Lee and Mrs. Linton, with a basket of ripe cherries supposed to be off George Washington's own tree, decorated each guest as they left the refreshment room with a pretty little souvenir of the occasion.

A feature of the afternoon was an old flax wheel which had been in use in 1797 and was still in good running order and was presided over by Aunt Rosa Young, who actually spun a spindle full of thread from the flax on the distaff. Aunt Rosa herself was dressed in Martha Washington cap and made a picture at the wheel which Miss Grace Hillman with her camera caught very successfully.

Mrs. Hisley, Mrs. Sisson, Mrs. Huey and Miss Haire were also of the committee which helped the Monday Club to add another to their long list of successful social afternoons.

Mrs. N. H. Kimball, of Adrian, and Mrs. Arthur Hall, of Toledo, were among the guests.

Charles Ford Morley

Was born in Van Buren township, Onondaga County, New York, October 16, 1829. He died February 9, 1903 in his home near Tecumseh, at the age of eighty years.

Mr. Morley was one of the pioneers of Michigan, having lived in the state seventy years. In 1833, at the age of eleven, he came with his parents to Oakland County. After working here for several years he settled on the farm which was his home at the time of his death. With the exception of seven years spent in the village of Tecumseh, he spent 44 years on his farm.

He was a good farmer, industrious, intelligent and painstaking.

Two sons by his former wife survive him. Mr. Bert B. Morley, of Winfield, Kansas, and Mr. Fred Morley, of Lapeer, Mich. Twenty years ago he was married to Miss Inez LeBaron, who survives to mourn his loss.

Mr. Morley united with the Presbyterian church many years ago and was a conscientious, faithful christian, regular in attendance at church and most devont

He died in full faith of a glorious resurrection. His body was laid away in the cemetery at Ridgeway February 12th.

Surprise on Ransom.

And it came to pass in the 2nd month and on the 20th day of the month in the 20th century, that Nancy, a Tecumsehite, said unto her sisters, "Make yourselves ready, also your liege lords, and we will repair to the house of Ransom, a Tiptonite, and there will astonish him."

And Nancy said, "Gather yourselves together in the streets of Tecumseh and the great and mighty warrior Shull will provide horses and chariots to carry you up to the house of Ransom, the Tiptonite.

Nancy also sent embassadors to the Tiptonites to call all the warriors of old from the east and from the west, from the north and from the south that there might not any escape of Ransom.

Now Ransom's wife and her daughter, a Campbellite, said not a word to Ransom that there was a plot against him.

And so it came to pass that fourteen of the Tecumsehites took passage in the great coach and, during a six mile march, amidst much rejoicing and shouting which was so fierce that the swine along the highway ran violently into the snow and perished from fright, arrived at the scene of action amid loud and continuous firing, all aiming at Ransom, who took refuge behind his wife. But after peace and quiet was restored, the victors and vanquished, numbering 45, sat down to a sumptuous dinner.

Then Nancy, who was captain of the guard, commanded all to be quiet, and Elmer, Bert and Will, of the tribe of Tipton, sang songs of victory and were joined by the multitude. All who had not lost their ammunition on the way, fired their volley. Then more songs were sung, after which a great babel was raised and the victors returned to their own land.

But Ransom was much confounded and knew not what to say or do and charged it upon his own household, but did not proceed to violence. So it came to pass that it was a bloodless battle.

Mrs. Mary Knight.

This morning at 3 o'clock, at the home of her son, Geo. M. Knight, of East Church street, occurred the death of Mrs. Mary Knight, aged nearly 81 years. Death was the result of cancer, with which she has been ill for two years and bedfast for over two months.

Miss Mary Camburn was born May 29, 1822, and seven years later, with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Camburn, Sr., came to Lenawee county. The trip from Wayne county, N. Y., was made with teams of oxen. The Camburn home for a year was in the neighborhood of the present village of Tecumseh. The year following they made their way along the Indian trail to a place near Tipton. There they made their home until moving to this city in 1862. In the year 1842 May Camburn married Orson Knight, of Tipton, who departed this life about 14 years ago Mrs. Knight grew up with Lenawee county and she has seen the Indian trails disappear into well marked highways, and the miles of woods into fertile farms. She had a very retentive memory and could tell many interesting incidents of pioneer days. Four years was spent in California, from '58 to '62, coming to Adrian in the later year. Six years later in company with his son, Geo. Knight, he established the mill on Dennis street, still operated by the son.

There is only one other son, William C. Knight, of Minneapolis. The burial will be in the family lot in Oakwood.—Adrian Telegram.

Mrs. Knight is the oldest sister of E. E. Camburn, of Tecumseh.

Tragedy Averted.

"Just in the nick of time our little boy was saved," writes Mrs. W. Watkins of Pleasant City, Ohio. Pneumonia had played sad havoc with him and a terrible cough set in besides. Everybody ought to know it's the only sure cure for coughs, colds and all lung diseases. Guaranteed by C. A. Wright, druggist. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free.

ASK YOUR NEIGHBOR.

Hundreds of Tecumseh Citizens can tell You all About It.

Home indorsement, the public expression of Tecumseh people, should be evidence beyond dispute for every Tecumseh reader. Surely the experience of friends and neighbors, cheerfully given by them, will carry more weight than the utterances of strangers residing in far-away places. Read the following:

Mr. S. Erskine, proprietor of the well-known barber shop, says: "For ten years off and on I had a dull pain in my back, imperfect action of the kidneys, and often I could hardly stoop or get up again. I think it was caused by standing so much at my work. Be that as it may I was in bad shape. I used a great many medicines but without receiving much benefit until Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to my notice and I got a box at C. A. Wright's drug store. I must confess that I was agreeably surprised, for after using one box I was much relieved. After the use of two boxes my back is stronger and better than it has been for a long time. Doan's Kidney Pills are the best medicine I have ever used and I have such faith in them. I believe I will be conferring a kindness on those suffering from kidney trouble in making known their merits."

For sale by all dealers: Price 50 cents per box, Foster-Milburn company, Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

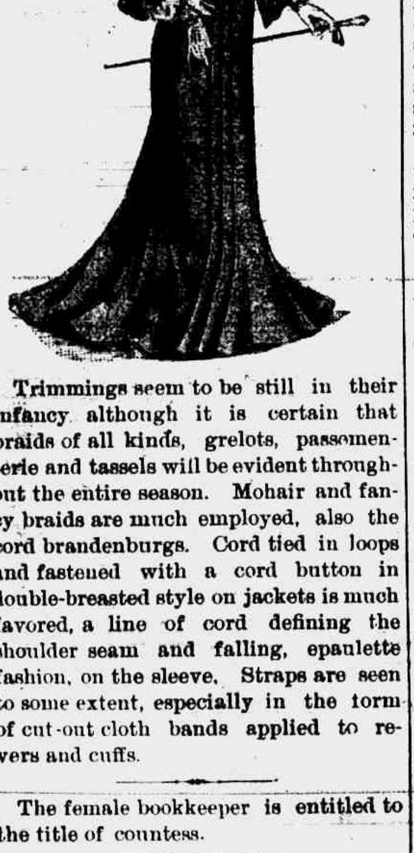
LATEST FASHION NOTES.

Brown Zibeline Street Gown.

A jaunty street gown is here shown. The material is brown camel's-hair zibeline, and the stitching is done with brown Corticelli stitching silk. The jacket has a very novel, loose front, cut in overlapping sections, and the turndown collar and oblong revers are of tapestry embroidery, edged with zibeline straps. The jacket hooks invisibly in front, the silk cord and tassels being entirely ornamental. The sleeves have vertical tucks that widen toward the bottom and flare over full puffs of biscuit silk. The skirt has clusters of tucks at each side of the panel front, and a new arrangement of tucks is shown in the back gores.



Trimmings seem to be still in their infancy although it is certain that braids of all kinds, grelots, passementerie and tassels will be evident throughout the entire season. Mohair and fancy braids are much employed, also the cord brandenburgs. Cord tied in loops and fastened with a cord button in double-breasted style on jackets is much favored, a line of cord defining the shoulder seam and falling, epaulette fashion, on the sleeve. Straps are seen to some extent, especially in the form of cut-out cloth bands applied to revers and cuffs.

The female bookkeeper is entitled to the title of countess.

Winter coughs are apt to result in consumption if neglected. They can be soon broken up by using Foley's Honey and Tar. J. J. Orr.

Some Missouri Names.

The people have given singular and amusing names to many neighborhoods in Missouri, says the Kansas City Star. In Caldwell county are Zion, Lickfork and Polo. Echo Dell, Gabtown and Dawson City are in Worth county. In Nodaway county are Toad Hollow, Sunrise and Possum Walk, and in Henry county is Coal. Pigeon Creek and Centennial are in Atchison county; River Dots, Splawn Ridge and Civil Bend in Daviess county; Sleepy Hollow and Ivy Hill in Sullivan county, and Eurom Echoes in Butler county. These are just a few names picked at random from the country correspondence of the county seat press. Sometimes a pretty or suggestive name is given a neighborhood, but generally the aim of the christener seems to have been to confer the harshest or most amusing appellation he could think of.

Loveless Marriages.

Marriage without love is almost a crime. In fact, it would be regarded as one if the world were as true, as simple, as sincere, as it ought to be. But society has so long wandered in a maze of complexity, and marriage, from monarchs downward, is undertaken for such a variety of reasons apart from love, that only a few retain the correct impression about it. And of these few the majority are women or girls who would rather die than marry a man they did not love. Sir Walter Scott knew this well when he wrote "The Bride of Lammermoor." His noble, gentle, true and tender spirit, aware of what love is, could well compute the horror of a loveless marriage.

THAT STATEHOOD BILL.

Is Still a Menace to Rapid Progress With Legislation.

Washington, Feb. 23.—The house held a session Sunday to pay tribute to the memory of three deceased members, the late Representative Tongue of Oregon, the late Representative Rumple of Iowa and the late Representative Moody of North Carolina. Mr. Moody of Oregon presided in the absence of Speaker Henderson. The customary resolutions were adopted and many members delivered eulogies.

The house enters the last full week of the session with the decks practically cleared of everything except appropriation bills. Only one of these—the general deficiency—which was reported Saturday, remains to be passed. Especially spirited would be the fight over the proposition to accept a statehood amendment, if one should be reported to the house as a rider on an appropriation bill. It would command the solid support of the Democrats, and it is believed, enough Republicans to accept it, although it would be strongly resisted by the Republican leaders. The Philippine currency bill has been set for Tuesday. The six suspension days, which under the rules precedes the expiration of each congress, begins on Wednesday and by means of the parliamentary expedient of making motions under suspension of the rules, parliamentary knots can be cut and legislation expedited.

Of the thirteen appropriation bills only six have so far been considered by the senate proper, but several of the remaining seven have had the attention of senate committees. Three have not, however, been received from the house of representatives.

Two of the appropriation bills, namely the pension and the diplomatic and consular bills, have passed both houses and received the signature of the president, thus becoming laws. The legislative, executive and judicial bill is ready to go to the president.

In order to conclude its work on the appropriation bills and transact other necessary business before the day for final adjournment on March 4, the senate will find it necessary, regardless of the statehood bill and the canal treaty, to hold longer sessions than ordinarily.

POPE FED THE POOR.

Thousand Inhabitants of Rome Ate at His Expense.

Rome, Feb. 23.—Sunday was a great day for the poor of Rome, a thousand of them being guests of the pope at a dinner in the Belvidere court of the Vatican in honor of the pontiff's jubilee. The tables were waited upon by nuns and the Swiss guards in brilliant uniforms kept order, their band playing during the repast. The excellent menu included wine and dessert. Great enthusiasm was displayed and there were repeated cries of "Long live Pope Leo."

The pope desired to personally administer his blessing on the gathering, but, although he was well, the doctors vetoed his desire in order that he might husband his strength for the coming functions.

All the homes of Americans were bedecked with stars and stripes Sunday. Because of Washington's birthday falling on a Sunday, some objections were made to holding receptions. These objections, however, were smoothed away by making the reception at the United States embassy a purely informal affair, at which tea was served. It was a most enjoyable affair and 600 Americans were present.

The American college gave a dinner in honor of the day, at which toasts were drunk to the pope and President Roosevelt.

Dr. Nevin also gave a dinner to several members of the Loyal Legion.

DELAYS IN NAVAL WORK.

President Has Asked Moody For an Explanation.

Washington, Feb. 23.—The president has been in correspondence with Secretary Moody respecting the matter of delay in the construction of naval vessels, and the secretary, in turn, has called upon the chief constructor for a statement of conditions in various shipbuilding yards where naval work is going on.

The chief constructor's report shows that there are seven causes for delay in naval work, namely: Inadequate plans, changes in armor or armament or design, delays in delivery of armor and ordnance, delays in government inspection, delays in structural steel, delays due to inadequate facilities and insufficient ability in the contractor's staff, and delays due to inadequate supply of skilled labor.

Cruelly Crushed.

William Bliss when president of the Boston and Albany railroad was once called before the railroad committee of the Massachusetts legislature to testify on traffic matters, and a young member who was serving his first term undertook to examine him.

"I want you to tell me how much it costs to haul a freight car from Boston to Springfield," said the member.

"I don't know," replied Mr. Bliss.

"You don't know?"

"That was the answer I gave."

"What are you, anyway?"

"President."

"Of what?"

"The Boston and Albany railroad."

"Well, sir," began the legislator in rising voice, "if you are William Bliss, president of the Boston and Albany railroad, and you don't know what it costs to haul freight from Boston to Springfield, who in the name of heaven does know?"

"No one that I know unless it is a member of the Massachusetts legislature who is serving his first term."

Another member continued the examination.

Something that will do You Good

We know of no way in which we can be of more service to our readers than to tell them of something that will be of real good to them. For this reason we want to acquaint them with what we consider one of the very best remedies on the market for coughs, colds, and that alarming complaint, croup. We refer to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. We have used it with such good results in our family so long that it has become a household necessity. By its prompt use we havn't any doubt but that it has time and again prevented croup. The testimony is given upon our own experience, and we suggest that our readers, especially those who have small children, always keep it in their home as a safeguard against croup.—Camden (S. C.) A Telling Retort.

Fault was found, says the Christian Endeavor World, with the way in which the shorthand writers reported the speeches in a legislative body. They retaliated by giving the speech of one of the members exactly as he made it, with the following result:

"The reporters—ought not to—the reporters ought not to be the ones to judge of what is important—not to say what should be left out—but—the member can only judge of what is important. As I—as my speeches—as the reports—as what I say is reported sometimes, no one—nobody can understand from the reports—what it is—what I mean. So—it strikes me—it has struck me certain matters—things that appear of importance—are sometimes left out—omitted. The reporters—the papers—points are reported—I mean—to make a brief statement—what the paper thinks of interest—is reported."

The Oldest Death Sentence.

The oldest death sentence extant is found in the Amherst papyri containing the trials of state criminals in Egypt, about 1300 B. C. The criminal in this case was found guilty of magic, which his judges state "was worthy of death, which he carried out, and he killed himself," apparently by stabbing, as in the Japanese "hari kari," which is also of very ancient origin.

Among less civilized peoples drowning would seem to have been the earliest method of legal punishment, for about 450 B. C. the Britons killed their criminals by throwing them into a quagmire. Of other than capital punishments the oldest recorded comes from Chaldea, where it was enacted some 6,000 years ago that when any one maimed a slave "the hand that thus offended should pay him each day a measure of corn."

SCHOLTZ ACQUITTED.

Jury Decided East Tawas Man Did Not Murder His Wife.

East Tawas, Mich., Feb. 23.—The jury in the case of Ernest Scholtz, charged with the murder of his wife, returned a verdict of not guilty at 10 o'clock Saturday night. This was the second trial. The jury was out about five hours, the first ballot standing ten for acquittal.

Stage Bubble Collapsed.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Feb. 23.—Felix Dumas and Arthur Fabish have returned to Chicago, after a picturesque career as theatrical magnates extending over a month. Dumas came here first and dazzled the town with a description of a magnificent new temple of vaudeville he proposed to build and for which he claimed to have an option for the sight. Fabish appeared a little later. Rather than have competition Colonel Wood, manager of the new Powers theater, consented to admit Dumas and Fabish to partnership in the Powers theater. Upon payment of first installment of $1,000 Dumas and Fabish wanted Wood to endorse their notes that they might procure the funds at the bank. An investigation followed and sufficient evidence was produced to convince Wood that something was wrong. Subsequently the men disappeared and the stage bubble quickly collapsed.

They Want Early Shooting.

Three Rivers, Mich., Feb. 23.—Several sportsmen in this vicinity signed a petition to be presented to the present legislature to revise the game laws of the state. They ask to have the killing of deer run from Oct. 20 to Nov. 10 instead of Nov. 30 as at present; squirrels from Oct. 1 to Nov. 30; partridge, quail, spruce hen and woodcock Oct. 1 to Nov. 30, and water fowl from March 10 to April 10 and from Oct. 1 to Dec. 15. Among the reasons set forth for requesting the change are the spring shooting. It is the only time, the petitioners claim, that they can get a chance to shoot at a goose or a bluebill. They further urge that all the geese and migratory ducks shot in Michigan will not interfere with the increase. Undoubtedly remonstrances will be gotten up opposing the change asked.

Stone told the jury that the killing was in self-defense, he having been attacked by Nelson, knife in hand.

Says Sun Is Inhabited.

Laporte, Ind., Feb. 21.—Alexander Young of Laporte, an astronomer, has announced that, from observations made by him he is confident that the sun is inhabited, that with his instruments he has seen on the sun's surface mountain sides with great and precipitous rocks which glow with prismatic colors, mingled with the greenness of a perennial vegetation, and with floral radiance more beautiful than that on earth. Beyond these mountains, he says, he saw valleys and plains where people live.

Uncle Sam's Mail Service

requires physical and mental ability of a high degree to withstand its hard labors. The high tension to which the nervous system is constantly subjected, has a depressing effect; and soon headache, backache, neuralgia, rheumatism, sciatica, etc., develop in severe form. Such was the case of Mail Carrier S. F. Sweinhart, of Huntsville, Ala., he says:

"An attack of pneumonia left me with muscular rheumatism, headache, and pains that seemed to be all over me. I was scarcely able to move for about a month when I decided to give Dr. Miles' Pain Pills and Nerve Plasters a trial. WANTED TO DIE.

Murderer James Had Poison Concealed in a Basket.

Muskegon, Mich., Feb. 21.—Deputy Sheriff Clinger left last evening for Jackson with David P. James, convicted of the murder of his son and given a life sentence.

James has said repeatedly that if convicted he would never go to prison, and it seems he made arrangements to carry out the threat.

Just before leaving the jail he asked for a little basket he had brought with him when first arrested. Before giving it to him it was carefully examined and there was found hidden in it a small package containing opium enough to kill half a dozen men. Because of his threats Sheriff Payne has kept two other prisoners in his cell for the past three weeks.

Yesterday afternoon James insisted on taking the commitment papers and going alone, promising faithfully to deliver them to the warden. Lieutenant Peocock of the Salvation Army went to see James and gave him a testament with some texts marked. The prisoner was glad to get it and said it reminded him of old times when, as a young man, he was conversant with the book.

James told the sheriff just before leaving that he would rather commit suicide than go to the hell he was going to. He is an old soldier and receives $12 a month pension.

Big Fire at Houghton.

Houghton, Mich., Feb. 21.—Fire which broke out in the Miller department store at 2:30 Friday morning, destroyed and damaged $200,000 worth of property before being gotten under control. The fire started in the basement of the department store and gained headway so fast that the firemen were forced to call for aid. Hancock, Quincy, Hurontown and Calumet departments responded, the latter coming in by special train. An east wind fanned the flames and for a time it looked as though the greater part of the business portion of Houghton would burn. The firemen succeeded in getting the fire under control at 6 o'clock, but the flames were not extinguished until after 9 o'clock.

Witness Failed to Appear.

Niles, Mich., Feb. 21.—William Barber and James Prettyman were acquitted in circuit court Friday of assault with intent to do great bodily harm. William Marshall, the complaining witness, appeared at the examination in a disfigured condition and testified he had been kicked about the head and pounded with a whiffletree while prostrate on the ground. He failed to appear Friday, having left town, it is claimed, through fear of prosecution for having bought liquor for his assailants, against whom notices had been posted in local saloons.

Underwent an Operation.

St. Joseph, Mich., Feb. 21.—Hon. John Lane, representative from this district in the legislature, and known as the defender of the St. Joseph marriage industry, submitted to an operation for appendicitis Friday afternoon. He was stricken while at Lansing and brought home, but his condition rapidly grew worse until the physicians decided an operation necessary to save his life. There is little doubt now of his recovery.

Well Known Vessel Owner Dead.

Bay City, Mich., Feb. 21.—Thomas F. Madden, a well-known vessel owner, died at his home in this city last night, after a brief illness. WHEAT BEYOND DANGER.

Heavy Snow, Says Bradstreet, Has Been Beneficial.

New York, Feb. 21.—Bradstreet's weekly review of trade today says:

Wintry weather has retarded, but not checked, spring jobbing trade, which, despite drawbacks, is still far in advance of a year ago. Retail business has been more noticeably affected and buying has been lessened temporarily. This has also further accentuated the vexed transportation problem. The favorable side of the weather situation is unquestionably the heavy snow which has covered the entire surplus-producing winter wheat belt, putting that plant temporarily at least beyond danger from seasonal changes. Other developments of the week have been mostly favorable.

The price situation, indeed, taken as a whole, is a remarkable one. Country produce, particularly butter and eggs, has displayed exceptional strength, while the great majority of staples retain all their old steadiness except where further advances are noted, as in the case of cotton goods, which are very strong at the highest prices in years. Collections are rather better as a whole, ranging from fair to good the country over. Industry is active, limited only by transportation facilities.

Wheat, including flour, exports for the week ending Feb. 19 aggregate 2,713,792 bu, against 2,856,439 last week, 3,609,485 in this week a year ago, and 3,424,302 in 1901. Wheat exports since July 1 aggregated 153,135,769 bu, against 176,931,559 last season, and 129,662,639 in 1900. Corn exports aggregate 3,739,457 bu, against 1,830,170 last week, 247,830 a year ago, and 3,627,668 in 1901. For the fiscal year exports are 28,370,643 bu, against 22,806,326 last season, and 127,594,884 in 1901.

Washington, Feb. 23.—Forecast for Tuesday:

Mexican Mustang Liniment

Its Year of Jubilee has come.

Sixty years of faithful service to Man and Beast entitles it to

A GRAND DIAMOND JUBILEE

Your sires and grand sires used Mexican Mustang Liniment because it healed their hurts and cured the ills of their domestic animals. What MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT did for mankind and brute kind 60 years ago it does to-day. It has always cured and always will cure any and everything that a good, honest liniment can cure.

All Sorts of Horse Flesh

are all subject to all sorts of Sprains, Bruises, Flesh Wounds and other ails. Most owners know that Mexican Mustang Liniment is the most effective horse medicine that ever penetrated flesh. It is the best investment an animal owner could put money into.

It soaks down through the muscles.

No liniment can cure unless it penetrates the fevered and swollen muscles right down to the roots of the trouble. MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT penetrates more thoroughly than anything that was ever created in a chemical laboratory. The deepest, most stubborn and most intense pain in man or beast can be reached and routed by the use of this good old time-tried liniment.

Cures the hurts of anything that walks.

If your horse has a stiff joint, a harness sore, a cut or bruise, MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT will cure it. If your cow has a hurt, a caked udder or sore teats it will cure it and restore her to health and usefulness. If your poultry has roup, frozen combs, rheumatism, scaly legs or any disease of the flesh or bones MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT will cure them. What it has done in thousands upon thousands of instances justifies these claims.

Two things needed in lameness.

What Lameness, Stiff Joints and other deep-seated ailments need, more than anything else is MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT. The next is plenty of rubbing. The rubbing works the liniment away in through the tired and sore muscles to where the pain begins and then the lameness disappears and the pain departs.

Three sizes. 25c., 50c. and $1 a bottle. Sold everywhere.

WILL FORCE THEM

Mitchell Schemes to Unionize Eastern Mines.

TIE UP THEIR OUTPUT

Unions Will Protest Against Awarding of Contracts to Firms Using the Coal—Movement Started in Chicago—Protests Filed With the Mayor.

Chicago, Feb. 26.—John Mitchell, president of the United Mineworkers of America, has abandoned all hope of organizing the miners of Maryland and West Virginia without outside assistance that will bring such strong pressure upon the operators that they will be forced to unionize their own mines in self-defense.

To that end a movement was started Wednesday in Chicago to protest against the awarding of public contracts to firms handling Maryland and West Virginia coal, and this movement is to spread all over the United States wherever labor is organized. The teamsters' unions have entered into a compact with the miners to tie up the output of the boycotted mines, and they will refuse to deliver it on any public contract.

The first move was made when Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor; Albert Young, president of the Amalgamated Teamsters' association, and the largest union labor committee ever collected in Chicago for such a purpose, called on Mayor Harrison and filed a formal protest against the awarding of city coal contracts to firms dealing in the coal which is mined by non-union men.

At the meeting with the mayor the labor committee declared that if contracts for West Virginia or Maryland coal shall be awarded, the teamsters will refuse to deliver it and a general tie-up in Chicago will result.

The mayor will turn over to Mr. Young certified copies of all the bids now in the hands of the council committee today. These bids will be forwarded to John Mitchell, who will return them, marking the firms that deal in the objectionable coal. A sub-committee from the coal teamsters will then confer with the mayor and the council.

THREE MINERS KILLED.

As Result of Explosion in an Illinois Mine.

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 26.—An explosion, which resulted in the death of three miners, occurred in the Auburn & Alton Coal Co.'s mine, twenty miles southwest of Springfield, last evening.

The dead are: Thomas McLaughlin, Matthew Donnelly, John Davis.

The [illegible] in the shaft at the time of the accident, and it was some time before the fact became known. A rescuing party, composed of fifteen miners, went in search of the men. They were unable for a time to reach the scene of the accident owing to the condition of the air. Just before midnight the bodies of the three men were found horribly mangled. Ten of the eleven mules used in the shaft were also killed. The accident was caused by an explosion of dust.

Mad Dog Bit Them.

Kokomo, Ind., Feb. 26.—Wesley Gearhing and his son, John Gearhing, of Jackson township, are perhaps fatally ill from the effects of the bite of a dog suffering from rabies. Both father and son are at Newcastle, where a madstone is being applied. A stray dog appeared at their home. It was fed. While eating, young Gearhing approached it. The dog sprang at the boy, sinking its teeth into the calf of his leg. Mr. Gearhing went to the rescue of his son and tried to pull the dog away. The animal attacked him and severely bit him in the arm and shoulders.

Killed Man Who Ruined Her.

Lincoln, Neb., Feb. 26.—Jennie Thomas, a stenographer, 24 years old, went to the room of Fritz Broderson, clerk in a Lincoln commission-house, last night and shot him dead. She then shot herself and probably will die. The young woman says Broderson, who is thirty years old, ruined her a year ago and refused to marry her. There were no witnesses to the killing. Miss Thomas' parents live in a Lincoln suburb and are much respected.

Topeka, Feb. 26.—Reports from western Kansas say that that portion of the state, western Oklahoma and northern New Mexico are in the grip of a blizzard. Snow has been falling since Tuesday afternoon and has reached a depth of eighteen inches in some places. MILLIONS WANTED

State Appropriation Bills Ask For $7,800,000.

AN INCREASE OVER 1901-2

Francis Wants to Regulate State Commerce—Richards Has Unique Liquor Bill—Baird Wants Office of State Fire Warden.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 26.—Chairman Smith of the senate finance and appropriations committee has made a careful review of appropriation bills introduced and continuous appropriation, which shows that about $7,800,000 is asked for for the years 1903 and 1904. This compares with $6,505,788 62, amount appropriated for the years 1901 and 1902 current expenses.

The closing days for the introduction of bills have been marked by the usual grist, affecting nearly every department of the railroad business. Yesterday afternoon a skeleton bill was introduced by Representative Baumgartner of Saginaw, at the instigation of Representative Read of Manistee, chairman of the house committee on railroads, who, with some other parties he does not wish to name at present, are preparing to open a stiff fire on the railroads. The title reads like this:

"A bill to provide for the appointment of a commission to regulate the carrying of freight and to fix, regulate and establish classifications and rates for the carrying of freight on all railroads in the state of Michigan; to define the powers, duties and compensation of such commission, and making appropriations to meet the expenses of the same."

Representative Francis presented a skeleton bill "to regulate state commerce." Representative Duncan offered another from the Electrical Workers' union of Grand Rapids, for the appointment of a deputy railroad commissioner who shall be an electrical expert and who shall receive $1,200 a year and all "personal" as well as traveling expenses. There is already one deputy appointed by the railroad commissioner.

Representative Richards of Cheboygan has introduced a bill to regulate the sale of liquor.

Briefly, the scheme is this: The governor would appoint a state liquor commissioner at $2,500 a year, who would have one clerk. He would be the executive officer of a liquor board of control composed of five members at $1,500 a year, appointed by the governor. The manufacture of liquor in the state would not be stopped, but all the elixir of life would have to be tested by the chemist of the M. A. A. and O. K.'d before it passed into the hands of the commissioner for distribution.

Whenever a city, village or township wanted a saloon, a petition would have to be presented by a majority of the electors, and the commissioner would then appoint a local dispenser for that district, to be paid by the district. Anybody except chronic drinkers and minors could get all the liquor he wanted, done up in sealed packages, marked O. K. He would not be allowed to open the package on the premises, but must take it away and imbibe in private. This is where it hits the treating system. The bill covers all malt as well as the high-ball class of drinks.

A bill creating a Michigan commission to look after the state's interest at the St. Louis world's fair has been prepared by Representative Ashley of Detroit. The appropriation advised is for $20,000, to be expended as follows: Agricultural, forestry, mining, art and education exhibits, $2,000 each, fish and fisheries exhibit, $1,000; postage, clerks' hire and incidental expenses, $1,000; to assist manufacturers of Michigan in transporting and setting up their exhibits, $10,000. No Michigan building is suggested, the bill introducing the commissioner to secure adequate space in the different buildings being erected by the fair association.

The commission is to consist of the presidents of the Michigan Agricultural College of Mines, the University of Michigan, the state land commission and the president of the fish commission. The personnel of the commission would be J. L. Snyder, F. W. McNair, James B. Angell, Edwin A. Wildey, Freeman B. Dickinson of Detroit, respectively.

Among the senate measures introduced was a joint resolution presented by Senator Barnes, to submit to the people an amendment to the constitution for the abolition of the decennial census of 1904. He considers the work a needless expense of $200,000.

Senator Moriarty introduced a bill amending the tax commission law. The present law makes the judgment of the commissioners, or any member of the commission, final in all cases of assessment, but the amendment gives the right to appeal from the decisions of the commissioners or members of the supreme court.

Senator Kelly introduced a bill to permit corporations organized for the purpose of acquiring, holding and selling real estate and building thereon to increase their property holding from five to thirty acres. The present law provides for a capitalization of $1,000,000, and the new amendment fixes the property value limit to be held by such corporations at $750,000.

Senator Baird introduced a bill to establish the office of state fire warden.

Senator Waterbury introduced a bill to amend the railroad laws which will permit electric and steam railways to enter into traffic agreements. He also introduced a bill to prohibit the manufacture or sale of oleomargarine in the state.

Senator Scullen offered a bill drafted by Arthur Webster of Detroit, to create a state voting machine commission composed of the secretary of state, the attorney-general and a master mechanic, to pass on all machines before they were used at elections.

Senator Kelly has introduced his bill to tax telegraph and telephone companies on an ad valorem basis.

Senator Cannon introduced, by request, a bill to wipe out the present state board of agriculture and create a new board to consist of ten members. The senator believes the bill has for its purpose a little housecleaning. Senator Moriarty introduced a bill providing for examination and licensing of osteopathy physicians.

Senator Goodell offered a bill to stop manufacture of slot machines.

Coal was for the first time used as fuel in this country at Wilkesbarre on Feb. 11, 1808.

STORIES WERE NOT TRUE.

W. C. T. U. Never Gave Mrs. Hayes a Sideboard.

Washington, Feb. 25.—Colonel Theodore T. Bingham, superintendent of public buildings and grounds, has concluded an exhaustive investigation into the statement recently published widely throughout the country that a sideboard presented to Mrs. Lucy Webb Hayes while she was mistress of the White House by women of the W. C. T. U. has passed into the hands of a Washington saloonist. The statement was made that the sideboard was presented to Mrs. Hayes out of regard for her determination not to permit wine to be served at White House dinners.

Colonel Bingham's investigation discloses clearly the fact that the published statements have no foundation in fact. So far as the records and a recent voluminous correspondence with interested parties, no such sideboard ever was presented to Mrs. Hayes by members of the W. C. T. U., by any other body of women, or by any individuals. The two sideboards from the White House recently were sold at auction. The offer of these, as well as other articles from the White House, was made in accordance with law.

The investigation has developed the fact that the one which was purchased by a saloonist was bought for the White House during the incumbency as president of General Arthur. The other was bought for use in the mansion at an earlier date.

WAS PASSED OVER.

Agricultural Bill Would Not Carry Statehood Amendment.

Washington, Feb. 25.—The Indianola, Miss., postoffice case occupied the major portion of the time of the senate Tuesday. Mr. Tillman spoke for three hours in continuation of his remarks begun Monday on the race question, and was followed by Mr. Carmack of Tennessee.

During the morning hour several bills and resolutions were passed and consideration was given the bill to further provide for the safekeeping of public money on deposit in national banks. The agricultural appropriation bill also was considered and the committee amendments agreed to, except the statehood rider, which was passed over.

The house Tuesday passed the Philippine currency bill, accepting the senate bill so far as it relates to the islands. The committee amendment striking out the international monetary conference was agreed to. The contested election case of Wagoner vs. Butler was under consideration for a time, and the Democrats began a filibuster which they threaten to continue if the case is pressed. The case was withdrawn with an agreement that it is not to come up until Thursday.

CONFESSED MURDER.

Choked His Wife to Death and Threw Body Into River.

Hamilton, O., Feb. 26.—Albert Knapp, who was arrested in Indianapolis yesterday and brought to this city on suspicion of having killed his wife, Hannah Goddard Knapp, last December, has confessed. Knapp admitted to Director of Police Mason, Captain Lenhan and Mayor Mosch that he choked his wife to death on the morning of Dec. 22, but says that he does not know why he did it. He says he then came to town, hired a spring wagon, secured a wooden box and drove back home. He stuffed the body into the box, being obliged to double it to get the lid down. He then drove to the Miami river and dumped the box containing the body into the water and drove back to town.

When he was taken back to jail Knapp told Chief of Police Kuemerling that he had something else on his mind that he would tell before he died. This statement is believed to be the forerunner of a confession from the prisoner that he killed his first and second wives, both of whom died mysteriously.

Indianapolis, Feb. 26.—Albert A. Knapp, formerly of Hamilton, O., was taken by the police Wednesday from the home of his bride on a charge of murder. The police say that the wife at whose home Knapp was arrested, and whose maiden name was Anna May Gamble, is Knapp's fourth wife, and that the others have disappeared in a manner which warrants investigation. Knapp, it is said, married the following women in the order given: Emma Stubbs, Jennie Connors, Hannah Goddard, and Anna May Gamble. An investigation in Hamilton showed that Miss Goddard, or Mrs. Knapp No. 3, really disappeared Dec. 21, and that the following day Knapp was seen to take from the house a large box and carry it away in a wagon rented from a livery stable. When asked yesterday about the disappearance of Miss Goddard, Knapp said she had simply gone away; he did not know where. He said the box he took from the house contained old clothes, which he threw away two miles from the city. Knapp, the police say, once served a term of eight years in prison.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

A narrow escape—While Joe Schwab of Freedom, accompanied by his niece Miss Meyer of Adrian, were on their way to Manchester last Saturday and were about to cross the track one mile and a half west of this station his horse was struck by the freight locomotive taking off one of its front legs which caused the horse to fall and jump up again and turn to the side. The young people claim they didn't hear or see the train until it struck the horse. Miss Meyer claims that she could reach the engine with her hand from the buggy. The horse had to be killed immediately which caused the loss of Mr. Schwab to be one hundred twenty-five dollars besides the damage on buggy and harness which he was offered a couple of weeks before.—Saline Observer.

CHAPTER XVI.

MAMMA PAULPOFF AVENGED.

It was midnight in Tomsk, and the palace of the governor was still. Jansky and Unsgethop had ridden away to overtake Denton at Tivoloffsky, Itzig was at his post in the guardhouse and the new lieutenant of the palace guard paced his measures through the deserted corridors.

But Neslerov was not asleep. Feverish and impatient, he sat in his room, awaiting the return of his police with the American, whose liberty was a menace to the life of Neslerov. He drank deeply from time to time from a bottle that stood on his table. If he spoke, he did it with a loud voice, but no one was near. His thoughts were spoken thus, as with a man half mad with fear.

"Heavens!" he said as he drank again. "If he reaches Perm, and the truth is known, I shall—what will become of me?"

He started as a light footstep sounded on the hard floor, and his haggard face grew paler as Princess Olga entered.

"Why are you awake?" he asked harshly. He was too excited to think of phrases.

"I could not sleep, and I knew you were not in bed," she answered. "I came to talk."

He stared at her. In his eyes she was as beautiful even as Frances Gordon, but his danger made him think her a tigress seeking to devour him. Yet he dared not show it.

"Why are you alone?" asked Olga. "You usually have Jansky, the superintendent of police, with you?"

"Jansky is away. A noted prisoner has escaped and the superintendent has gone to retake him."

"I heard a commotion. I supposed it was something of that kind. Was it a Russian?"

"Yes—a nihilist."

"I hope they will capture him."

"They will! They must!" said Neslerov fiercely.

Olga's eyes were veiled—they did not betray her thoughts.

"There is much concerning this system that is new to me, and it will take long for me to learn it all. I am already weary with the little I have done."

"Better leave it alone. It is a business for men, not princesses," said Neslerov.

"The study has made me wakeful. Bring me some wine."

He opened a bottle.

"It has puzzled me why you do not marry," he said, trying to hide his fear of her as he poured out a glass of wine.

"Why should I?" she asked. "I have not yet found among the nobles of Russia the man I would marry."

"What sort of man must he be to please you, cousin?"

He was sparring for time. Any hour might bring Jansky back with Denton. Then he could play his part in safety. But with Denton at liberty he dared not act.

"Oh," said Olga, "to please me a man must be honorable, strong and wise. He must not be bound by custom, nor yet must he scorn it. There are ways—in the world we live in there are ways—of being great without being eccentric and without following the lead of others. A man whom I love must be patient and must not use his strength against the weak."

A sarcastic smile crossed his lips.

"You must look outside of Russia," he said.

"Perhaps," she answered. "But you have not pledged me. Must I drink alone?"

His eyes snapped with the remembrance that Jansky and Itzig had been drugged. But she was so handsome, so smiling, that no sign of evil intent was in her face.

"From your hand," he answered, with a show of gallantry.

She poured him a glass of wine, and they drank. For a moment he waited, as if half expecting to fall asleep. But the wine had no ill effect, and they chatted on. But Neslerov grew more impatient as the night wore on. Why did this girl persist in staying up and talking to him? What was in her mind? Was there another plot? He paced to and fro in the room as he spoke. When his back was turned, she made a quick movement and dropped something—not into the wine bottle, but into the bottle of liquor from which Neslerov drank.

"I think I will retire," said the princess. "It is late, and perhaps I can sleep now."

"I hope you will find rest," he said.

She went out. Neslerov watched her with a dark, saturnine face. What did she mean? He poured out a liberal dose of liquor. The wine was too weak for him. He needed something to steady his shaken nerves. He drank it. In five minutes he was staring blankly at himself in a glass.

"What is this—this feeling?" he muttered. "That she devil! I am poisoned! What trick is this? Help! Guard! Lieutenant of the guard!"

The young officer heard, and ran to him.

"Your excellency called," he said.

"Yes—quick—I am poisoned—I am drowsy—bring Princess Olga—quick!"

The lieutenant, wild with apprehension, rushed to Olga's room.

"His excellency the governor wants you!" he panted. "He is poisoned."

"He is not poisoned," answered Olga calmly. "He is merely going to sleep. I want you to stay away from him, and I want you to keep quiet."

The officer stared.

"What do you mean? He is ill! The governor called me and sent for you."

"I am going to him, but you must not."

"But I must. It is my duty!"

"Whom do you obey?"

"Neslerov, governor of Tomsk."

"Then from this moment you obey me. Read this!"

She placed before him the same paper she had shown Dermsky, his fellow officer. His eyes started from his head.

"The seal of the czar!" he cried, and he, like Dermsky, fell to his knees. "I obey—command me!" he exclaimed.

"Remain quiet. I did not come to Tomsk for nothing. This night will mean much to Russia. Work will be done that will right a terrible wrong. All you need do is to remain quiet and do not attempt to interfere."

"I dare not!" he said. "You have the seal of the czar! It commands all to obey you! I obey!"

She left him, staring and wondering, and went to Neslerov. The governor was drooping. He opened his eyes as she entered.

"You!" he hissed as he tried to regain his strength. He would have killed her.

"Yes, I!" she answered quietly. "You will sleep. It will not be long."

"What will you do?" he asked, with a curse.

"My work," she answered. "I shall release him—Vladimir."

He made a tremendous effort to rise and smite her, but fell with a groan to the floor. Quickly Olga, taking a pistol from her pocket, ran across the hall to Itzig.

"You!" he cried as she entered. "You brought me wine that was drugged, and my prisoner escaped."

"True," said Olga. "And now the other. You were with Jansky and the governor when they visited him. You know where he is."

"I know not," grumbled Itzig.

"That is false. I heard them speak of you to Unsgethop. Will you guide me to his dungeon? Open the door!"

"I cannot. The key is with Jansky. It is never out of his hands."

"Oh, heaven!" cried Olga. "Have I made this terrible mistake?"

"The key is Jansky's," said Itzig. "No one goes to the dungeon save by his orders."

"Break down the door."

"Impossible! It is heavy oak. I have no ax."

She turned from him and fled to the stairs.

"Lieutenant!"

The young officer, with visions of mines and the knout and wondering where this complication would end, answered her.

"Come here," she said. "I want this door opened."

He looked at the door and at Itzig.

"Jansky has the key, and he is gone," said Itzig.

"We must open it, if the princess says so," said the officer.

"What! You disloyal to Neslerov?"

The officer smiled and looked at Olga.

"We must take off the hinges," he said. "I will get the tools."

He was gone but a moment, and when he returned he attacked the screws that held the great iron hinges.

"I will alarm the governor!" cried Itzig, leaping upon him.

"Stand back! Keep your hands off!" ordered Olga, aiming her revolver at him. "I have commanded, and I will be obeyed!"

"You have no authority!" said Itzig, cowering before the pistol.

"I have this."

She showed him the paper. His face grew white, and he sank shivering to the floor.

"The seal of the czar! Oh, princess, I did not know! I obey! I will do anything!"

"Help open the door."

The hinges were soon off and the door was opened. The iron gate resisted the united efforts of the two, but they sawed out the lock.

"Take the lantern!" commanded the princess.

Trembling in every fiber, Itzig lighted a lantern.

"Lead the way to the dungeon where Vladimir is concealed."

"I obey."

"And I will guard you, princess," said the officer.

Thus they descended the stairs, Itzig leading with the lantern, Olga following and the officer close behind her ready to protect her. Potent was the seal of the czar.

They found the giant blacksmith in his chains. The hunger he felt had not yet sapped his strength. The key the princess had taken from its peg soon released him.

"Come!" she said.

"But who are you, and what does this mean?" he demanded.

"Come! We have no time to waste with words. Tonight you have the work of your life to do. Come!"

The four ascended, and Itzig extinguished his lantern. The eyes of Vladimir blinked as he entered the great hall, which was kept lighted all night.

"You are Vladimir," said the princess. "I am Olga of the Neslerovs. Do you know the story of the picture?"

"The little picture," cried Vladimir eagerly—"the little one that Papa Paulpoff said he found? Yes; he told it to me and to the American one day in the hut at Tivoloffsky."

"Then you know the truth. The American was to go to Perm and start the investigation."

"Yes, but he was brought here."

"I released him last night. He went from here to Tivoloffsky to bring Papa Paulpoff to tell his story before the governor general, who has not yet arrived. Jansky, the superintendent of police, and Unsgethop have gone to fetch him. They will kill him; they will not risk taking him alive. It is your duty to ride to Tivoloffsky—ride as for your own life—and save the American and Papa Paulpoff. Bring them here. Do you understand?"

"Yes; but a horse."

"Lieutenant, in the name of the czar, the fleetest horse in the stables for Vladimir."

"I obey—the fleetest horse."

"You must be famished," said Olga. "Will you eat?"

"Eat! With the American and Papa Paulpoff in danger! No; but a drink of wine."

He watched her as she stepped into Neslerov's room. He saw the governor.

"Neslerov!" he said. "Is he dead?"

"No. I drugged his liquor. Here is wine. It is not drugged. I drank of it myself."

He drained the glass, and the officer entered.

"The horse is at the door, princess. I woke no one at the stables. I saddled the steed myself."

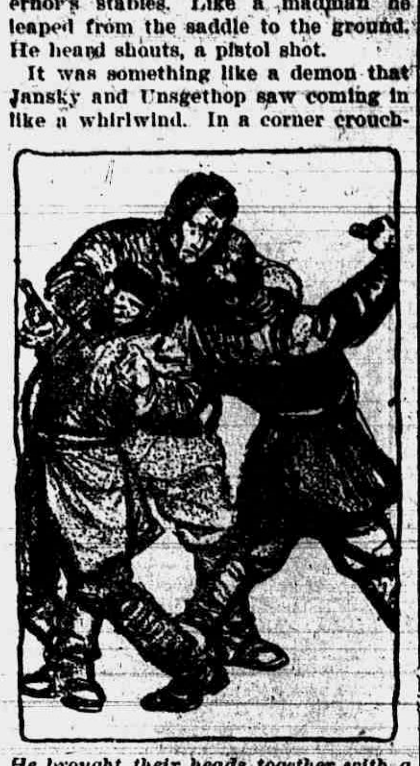
"Good. You will be a captain tomorrow. Now, Vladimir, go!"

He mounted and was off. He followed the line of the new railway and could not lose his way. His horse was fast, the best horse in Neslerov's stable.

"For the American! For Frances! For the honor of Graslov!" muttered Vladimir as he strove to increase his horse's speed.

He passed through villages asleep under the bright stars. The hoofs of his horse rang out on the pebbles of one road or sank into the mud of another. But on he went. Tivoloffsky, like all the other villages, was asleep. Its quiet was rudely disturbed by the hammering of the iron shoes as the horse bore him through the silent streets. Right well he knew the way to the hut where Mamma Paulpoff was murdered. Two horses stood before the door. His own dashed up and whinnied. They were from the governor's stables. Like a madman he leaped from the saddle to the ground. He heard shouts, a pistol shot.

It was something like a demon that Jansky and Unsgethop saw coming in like a whirlwind. In a corner crouched Papa Paulpoff, trembling and white with terror. On the floor lay Denton, unconscious, with the mark of a bullet in his forehead and the blood streaming over his upturned face. Jansky was bending over him.



He brought their heads together with a crash.

"Who is this?" cried Unsgethop as Vladimir entered.

The blazing eyes of the avenger took in the whole scene. A small lantern stood on the floor.

"I am your master!" cried the blacksmith, and the words were as if roared by a lion.

With a leap he landed between the two. Jansky's pistol and Unsgethop's knife were drawn. Vladimir's right hand closed on Unsgethop's neck. His left shot toward Jansky, and the superintendent of police was powerless in that terrible grasp.

"Now pray to heaven," cried Vladimir, "for this hour is to be your last! In this house you killed that poor old woman who had loved me. Here you have come to kill the American and Papa Paulpoff. Die like the dogs of murder that you are! For your crimes take this! And this!"

With his muscles of iron he brought their heads together with a crash.

"And this!" repeated Vladimir, swinging them apart and then together again.

Flinging Jansky from him with a curse, he stooped quickly, seized Unsgethop by the legs and swung him in the air. He brought his head against the rude wooden wall, and the blood spurted from his mouth. Jansky, with chattering teeth, tried to get his pistol aimed at the giant's head, but Vladimir caught him round the waist and sent him, as an Indian throws a spear, into the corner of the room, where he lay motionless with a broken neck.

"Come, Papa Paulpoff," ordered Vladimir. "You are not injured. You are needed at Tomsk at once. But first I must get this poor fellow to a priest."

He picked up the bleeding and unconscious Denton and set off with him to a nearby cottage. The priest admitted him, knowing his voice.

"What is your burden?" cried the priest. "What terrible thing has been done in Tivoloffsky tonight?"

"Nothing much," said Vladimir calmly. "I have killed two wolves."

BRIDGE WHIST

Players will be Interested in this.

In a little booklet of seven pages of verse, Col. H. C. DuVal, of the New York Central Railroad Co., has published some very pretty and useful directions for bridge players. As in regard to the old "Rhymes" in the back of Dr. Pole's "Modern Scientific Whist," many players doubtless will limit their book knowledge of bridge to these verses. In the following apostrophe the book opens:

"Oh, Muse, forgive me,
Critics all—desist;
My rhymes, tho' bad,
Perchance may teach you whist."

Under general directions he says:

Aces three and guarded Queen,
No trump hand is plainly seen,
Guarded King in each array
With an Ace, no trump's the play.

* * *

Honors one in Hearts of six
Make it Hearts—you'll take the tricks.

* * *

Sure Heart hand I much prefer,
No trump then would be to err.

* * *

It is never well to name
Diamonds in a rubber game,
Diamonds you will never find
Wise when you're a game behind,
Diamonds or hearts are grand
Honors four within your hand.

* * *

Lead through strength is quite correct;
Up to weakness don't neglect.

* * *

If poverty your hand pervades
Take no chances, make it Spades.
If you have the deal refuse
Either Clubs or Spades to choose.

* * *

To double a Heart and take the tricks
Be sure of five and a possible six.
Doubling's wisest in the fight,
If the maker's on your right.

Best of rules without a doubt,
Keep in mind what cards are out,

* * *

And of all things don't ignore
Carefully to watch the score.

One of the most incomprehensible things in life is that one's mother and father were once in love with each other.

Consumption

Salt pork is a famous old-fashioned remedy for consumption. "Eat plenty of pork," was the advice to the consumptive 50 and 100 years ago.

Salt pork is good if a man can stomach it. The idea behind it is that fat is the food the consumptive needs most.

Scott's Emulsion is the modern method of feeding fat to the consumptive. Pork is too rough for sensitive stomachs. Scott's Emulsion is the most refined of fats, especially prepared for easy digestion.

Feeding him fat in this way, which is often the only way, is half the battle, but Scott's Emulsion does more than that. There is something about the combination of cod liver oil and hypophosphites in Scott's Emulsion that puts new life into the weak parts and has a special action on the diseased lungs.

A sample will be sent free upon request.

Be sure that this picture in the form of a label is on the wrapper of every bottle of Emulsion you buy.

OPTICAL ROOMS.

The Herald Man Visits Those of

S. P. HOSMER.

We have no Hesitancy in Recommending Him as an Optician of Merit.

Ever having the interest of the patrons of the HERALD in view we dropped into the Optical Rooms of S. P. Hosmer and were surprised to know that we had so complete an outfit in our town. Above we give a cut of the interior of these rooms. We are not experts in the needs of such an office, but from the explanation Mr. Hosmer gave of each instrument, convinced us that he at least knew how and when to use them.

We were informed that many of the pains through and above the eyes, at the base of the brain, etc., were the [illegible] of eye strain. Vision may be [illegible] trouble will follow from weak muscles.

He showed us an instrument of his own idea and workmanship. That he must understand the laws of optics, to have thought out and constructed so delicate an instrument is certainly plain to us.

Mr. Hosmer is a pupil of one of the best experts in the west, having taken a special course of study, and has had 20 years of experience.

Hearts of Oak.

James A. Herne's two famous domestic plays "Hearts of Oak" and "Shore Acres" are being presented this season with their usual remarkable success. To the present generation these plays are practically new while to those who saw them some years ago they appeal with strong sentiment, like the return of dear old friends. "Hearts of Oak" was the first drama written by James A. Herne in which the character of a villain is eliminated. It was the play that created a sensation by the introduction of a real live baby instead of the "property" article which had previously done duty in the theatres. It will be interesting news to the playgoers of this city to learn that "Hearts of Oak" with a specially selected cast of players and a magnificent display of scenery is to be seen at the New Bradley opera house Tuesday evening, March 3, 1903.

BAD ACCIDENT

Experienced by M. A. Zimmerman Wednesday while at Work

AT THE HANDLE FACTORY.

He was Setting a Saw and his File Broke, one Piece Penetrating his Right Cheek.

While at work at his handle factory Wednesday afternoon, M. A. Zimmerman suffered a very painful accident. Mr. Zimmerman was setting a circular saw and in some way the file caught, breaking in four pieces. One piece flew and struck him in the face, penetrated the right cheek, and struck the back tooth, loosening it. Another piece stuck him in the forehead, cutting a small gash, and had it not been for the protection of the fore-piece of his cap, the blow might have been fatal.

Dr. Frost was quickly summoned and dressed the wounds. At the present writing Mr. Zimmerman is getting along nicely.

THE CHURCHES.

Rev. S. Louisa Haight will preach at the Universalist church Sunday morning at 10 o'clock.

March 8th—"Jesus the Savior."

March 15th—"The Way of Salvation."

March 22nd—"The Necessity of the Sacraments."

March 29th—"The Necessity of Faith."

April 5th—"The Necessity of Good Works."

The Rector would earnestly commend this course of sermons. It is not more to be lamented than it is true that the great majority of Christian people have no proper understanding whatever of the Way of Salvation.

"The Counterfeiters."

A fair sized audience greeted the presentation of Carl A. Haswin's best detective play, "The Counterfeiters." Each act was a leading feature in itself and many thrilling and sensational situations were developed during the play. Miss Lillian Hines in the character of "Butts, the newsboy," characterized her part to perfection.

Among the scenic effects, during the play, may be mentioned the counterfeiters' den in the third act, in which occurred the breaking up of the gang; a scene overflowing with excitement and bringing forth from the audience a hearty round of applause. The company left on the 3:03 Lake Shore Wednesday for Toledo.

Cheerful News.

"Of all the words of tongue or pen
The gladdest 'Dad' I've passed again."

It was a bright, cheerful day for the Mills family yesterday in more ways than one.

World's Best Medicine.

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND

Has Made People Well When Every Other Remedy Has Failed.

Paine's Celery Compound cures disease! It has saved the lives of thousands of sufferers. It has made the weak strong, vigorous, and happy.

Paine's Celery Compound purifies the blood and builds up the nervous system as nothing else can do; it is pre-eminently the great life giver and health maker.

Overworked and tired women stand in urgent need of this health giving prescription to make and keep them well. All women should take advantage of the remarkable power of this best of medicine for restoring vigor to the blood and strength to the nervous system. The all-important thing for nervous, run down, and sleepless women is that Paine's Celery Compound fortifies the whole physical system, and by correcting digestion and regulating the nerves, it insures sound, refreshing sleep. In every case of sickness Paine's Celery Compound completely and permanently brings back health. Mrs. Mary M. Myers, Baltimore, Ohio, saved by Paine's Celery Compound after the failures of able physicians, gratefully writes as follows:—

"I suffered for eight years with nervous prostration and the general debility common to women, and had such pains in my back that I could not get around the house. I used several remedies and consulted several of the best physicians without obtaining any relief. Paine's Celery Compound restored me to health.

"I also want to say to all mothers that Paine's Celery Compound is a splendid medicine for their children."

ASK YOUR NEIGHBOR.

Hundreds of Tecumseh Citizens can tell You all About It.

Home indorsement, the public expression of Tecumseh people, should be evidence beyond dispute for every Tecumseh reader. Surely the experience of friends and neighbors, cheerfully given by them, will carry more weight than the utterances of strangers residing in far-away places. Read the following:

Mr. S. Erskine, proprietor of the well-known barber shop, says: "For ten years off and on I had a dull pain in my back, imperfect action of the kidneys, and often I could hardly stoop or get up again. I think it was caused by standing so much at my work. Be that as it may I was in bad shape. I used a great many medicines, but without receiving much benefit until Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to my notice and I got a box at C. A. Wright's drug store. I must confess that I was agreeably surprised, for after using one box I was much relieved. After the use of two boxes my back is stronger and better than it has been for a long time. Doan's Kidney Pills are the best medicine I have ever used and I have such faith in them. I believe I will be conferring a kindness on those suffering from kidney trouble in making known their merits."

For sale by all dealers: Price 50 cents per box, Foster-Milburn company, Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

Attention, farmers and breeders of Lenawee county! In our midst is owned Steel Hal 2:16¼, a horse the type of which is needed to raise general purpose horses with warm blood in their veins. Steel Hal 2:16¼, a beautiful horse weighing about 1300 lbs. with chest and muscles of a horse weighing 2000 lbs. His owner, Chas. Maynard, of the bank of Britton, Britton, Mich. having no time to canvas for patronage and Steel Hal being a strange horse it was thought advisable to accept the offer of Tuscola county people who want to lease him for the season of 1903 but the owner has been persuaded to promise that if the people of Lenawee county want him to remain here by sending their name and address on or before Feb. 25, 1903, manifesting their desire to book one or more mares. If enough names can be booked (fees $25 to insure) thereby insuring a paying season, he will not send him away. Should he stay here he will go to Holloway, Adrian, Tecumseh, Clinton and Macon. Remember Steel Hal 2:16¼ is closely related to the best ones: Star Pointer 1:59¼, Hal Dillard 2:04, Direct Hal 1:04, etc. Some of this speed will come out somewhere. Attend to this at once.

A Raving Maniac.

Morenci, Mich., Feb. 25.—Harvey Keller, a young mechanic here, has gone insane and threatened the lives of his wife and children. Monday night when the officers went to arrest him he locked the door and waited for them with a heavy iron poker. They beat down the door with a battering ram, but before they could secure and handcuff him he struck one officer on the head with the poker and nearly put the other two out of business. After spending the night in the village lockup he was taken to Adrian to be committed to the asylum at Kalamazoo.

Something that will do You Good

We know of no way in which we can be of more service to our readers than to tell them of something that will be of real good to them. For this reason we want to acquaint them with what we consider one of the very best remedies on the market for coughs, colds, and that alarming complaint, croup. We refer to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. We have used it with such good results in our family so long that it has become a household necessity. By its prompt use we haven't any doubt but that it has time and again prevented croup. The testimony is given upon our own experience, and we suggest that our readers, especially those who have small children, always keep it in their home as a safeguard against croup.—Camden (S.C.) New Way to Polish a Stove.

No Waste—Odor—or Dirt.

By sprinkling Sifter Stove Polish on the stove and then rubbing with a damp rag and gently brushing with a dry cloth, a brilliant, jet black lustre is obtained. Sifter Stove Polish comes in a large box with a perforated top, through which the polish is sifted just like peppering a beefsteak. Sifter Stove Polish is made of pure powdered graphite, which is not affected by fire, produces the most brilliant polish, and when applied, won't rub off. It is odorless. It never dries up. It does not require soaking in water before using. A 10 cent box of Sifter Stove Polish will polish more stoves than three times its cost in any other polish. Get Sifter Stove Polish of any dealer at 5 cents a box, a 10 cent box contains more than twice as much. Insist on the yellow label with the hand.

Butterflies That Fly High.

Both in the Himalayas and in the Andes butterflies have been found at heights ranging up to 16,000 feet, and in the Alps they are quite common at 9,000 feet. The very highest elevation so far observed is 16,626 feet, where they were found by M. Bonpland on the slopes of Chimborazo. Sir J. D. Hooker found butterflies on the slopes of the Himalayas at about the same height. He speaks of "the amazing quantity of superb butterflies, many large tropical swallowtails, black, with a scarlet eye on the wings." The South American high flying butterflies belong to the family of Colia dimera, the Asiatic that of the Pieris callidice. The explorer, Sir Martin Conway, also found them at high altitudes in the Himalayas.

A Kiss and a Bite.

In his volume, "The Kiss and Its History," Dr. Christopher Nyrop of the University of Copenhagen relates that in England in 1837 Thomas Saveland brought an action against Miss Caroline Newton, who had bitten a piece out of his nose for his having tried to kiss her by way of a joke. The defendant was acquitted, and the judge laid it down that "when a man kisses a woman against her will she is fully entitled to bite his nose if she so pleases."

"And eat it up, if she has a fancy that way," added a jocular barrister half aloud.

His Bluff Quickly Called.

"I want you to understand," he said, "that I'm the master in this house."

"All right," she replied. "Go out and tell the cook that we're going to have company all next week."

Then he put on his hat and went away, making sarcastic remarks about people who were afraid to say their souls were their own.—Chicago Record-Herald.

RABIES PREVALENT

Believed Many Dogs in Grand Rapids Are Infected.

LITTLE CHILD BITTEN SUNDAY

Veterinary Surgeon Bitten by a Horse—Both Go to Pasteur Institute, Chicago—All Unmuzzled Dogs of City May Be Killed.

Grand Rapids, Mich., March 2.—A little child of John E. Moore was bitten by a pet dog Sunday afternoon. The health officer examined the dog and pronounced it affected with rabies. Mrs. Moore left last night for the Pasteur institute at Chicago, taking the child with her.

Dr. McLean, a veterinary surgeon, who was bitten by a horse last week which displayed symptoms of rabies, left last night for treatment at the institute.

Many cases of hydrophobia in various forms among dogs has aroused the city officials, and it is likely a general slaughter will be ordered against dogs that are not muzzled.

ICE BOATS COLLIDED.

Soft Ice Caused Serious Mishap at Kalamazoo.

Kalamazoo, Mich., March 2.—Four ice boats piled up in a heap on Gull lake Sunday and the crews were sent sprawling over the ice in all directions, Dumont Shepardson being badly hurt.

The crash occurred in the afternoon near La Belle resort. The four yachts were engaged in speed trials, and were racing along under a stiff breeze at the rate of sixty miles an hour. The Crackerjack, which was leading, encountered soft ice and was brought to a sudden stop, swinging around broadside of the course.

The Reindeer, which was close upon her heels, crashed into the Crackerjack full tilt and cut the yacht in two. The Dreadnot, the New Jersey yacht, and the Joker, a local ice craft, were close behind and piled up with the others in a mass of torn canvas, twisted cordage, broken spars and timbers.

Captain Shepardson of the Joker was hurled fully twenty feet, striking against the mast of one of the other boats. He was picked up in a dazed condition and is thought to be seriously hurt, though no bones were broken.

Crippled For Life.

Coldwater, Mich., March 2.—Last September Alonzo Olmstead, a Bethel township farmer, saw a rusty nail sticking through a board. Olmstead remarked that someone would get hurt on it, and gave the nail a kick to turn it down. It penetrated his foot, caused blood poisoning and now the bones of his foot are wasting away and he will be crippled for life.

A SPECIAL SESSION

Senate Has More Than It Can Do in the Allotted Time.

FEW BILLS BECAME LAWS

Record of Bills Introduced Succeeds That of Any Previous Session—Democrats in the House Will Continue to Filibuster—Special Sessions Sunday.

Washington, March 2.—The senate has more than enough work to keep it occupied during the last week of the session, and do the best it may there will be much left undone when the gavel of the president pro tempore shall fall at the close of the final sitting at noon Wednesday, when the last session of the Fifty-seventh congress will close by constitutional limitation. The calendar even at this late day is quite full, and there are many more bills in committee than have been reported out.

In the present congress, like most others, only about 10 or 12 per cent of the bills introduced have become laws, but it also is to be said that the record of bills introduced far exceeds that of any previous congress. Tuesday's session will be continued until noon Wednesday and the senate will be in almost continuous session day and night until then.

Of the supply bills, the sundry civil, postoffice, naval and fortifications bills are still in the hands of conference committees, but there are no points in dispute in connection with any of them which are likely to be difficult of adjustment. The general deficiency bill is the only one of the appropriation bills that has not passed the senate, and it will be passed some time today.

Aside from the appropriation bills and conference reports preference will be given to the Aldrich bond-deposit bill. There is also great anxiety to get action on the Philippine tariff bill, and while there is also opposition to this measure it is intimated that this antagonism might cease in case of a cessation of the efforts to pass the bond deposit bill, but Senator Aldrich is not disposed to yield to this kind of argument.

A final attempt will be made to press the Panama canal treaty to a conclusion, in the hope that Senator Morgan may relent in his opposition and allow the treaty to be ratified rather than to father an extra session of the senate.

Senators generally therefore have given up all hope of avoiding the extra session and now are concerned principally as to the time it shall begin and the length of time it shall occupy.

The senate Sunday spent three hours in eulogies of four deceased members of the house. Messrs. Martin, Virginia; Gallinger, New Hampshire; Perkins, California; Clay, Georgia, and Daniel, Virginia, spoke of the late Peter J. Otey of Virginia.

The house of representatives held a four-hour session Sunday and put the District of Columbia appropriation bill through its last parliamentary stage in the face of the Democratic filibuster. The previous question on the conference report on the Alaskan homestead bill was ordered and the vote on its adoption will be taken when the house reconvenes today. That was the net result of the Sunday session.

Although it was Sunday by the calendar, it was still Thursday, Feb. 26, according to parliamentary fiction. The Democrats put a block in the legislative wheel at every opportunity, and it required six roll calls to accomplish what was done Sunday.

The Democrats of the house have decided to prosecute their filibuster until congress expires by limitation at noon March 4, and the remaining days of the session, therefore, promise to be largely repetitions of the last three days, that is, all business will have to be transacted in the face of every particle which the minority can interpose. But even the laborious processes to which the majority will be put, it is believed ample time remains to get through the conference reports on the remaining five appropriation bills. There is slim chance for much beyond this, so far as the house is concerned.

Twenty-seven bills with senate amendments are on the speaker's table. One or two of these may get through, but the great majority are doomed to die where they are. The one bill in which Republican leaders are particularly interested is the Aldrich financial bill, and if it comes over from the senate a way will be found probably through the operation of a special rule to secure action on it. The complications arising out of the fact that a hostile committee, that on banking and currency, has jurisdiction over the subject can be overcome by a rule. It is believed that the immigration bill, which passed the senate Saturday in an amended form, also will be acted on.

Mill Blown to Atoms.

Meyersdale, Pa., March 2.—Francis W. Bare was instantly killed and his son Marshall, aged 25, so badly hurt that both legs may have to be amputated, the result of a boiler explosion at the Bare sawmill, five miles east of here, late Saturday evening. The boiler let go with terrific force, blowing the mill to atoms and throwing the men employed in every direction. All escaped with minor bruises except the two mentioned above.

Mr. Bowen's Mother Dead.

Washington, March 2.—The United States minister to Venezuela and Mrs. Herbert W. Bowen left Washington at 12:45 Sunday afternoon over the Pennsylvania railroad for Brooklyn to attend the funeral services of Mr. Bowen's mother, Mrs. Ellen Holt Bowen, which will take place in Brooklyn today. The sad news was a severe shock to the minister and reached him late Saturday night in a dispatch from his brother.

LOWLANDS FLOODED

Hundreds of Families Forced from Their Homes.

MANY MILLS UNDER WATER

Monongahela and Allegheny Rivers on a Rampage — Flood Is General Throughout Pennsylvania — Sandusky River Does Much Damage.

Pittsburg, March 2.—With every tributary of the Allegheny and Monongahela rivers emptying swirling torrents into the banks of these two streams and rushing down to the point where they converge to form the Ohio, Pittsburg was given a visitation Sunday which forced hundreds of families to either abandon their homes or seek escape from the water in the upper stories, while mud and water dispensed destruction and discomfort below. Mills in the low lying levels throughout the county, numbering between fifty and sixty, were flooded, and 38,375 men are thrown idle for four or five days, with a loss in wages of more than $326,748.

The flood was general throughout western Pennsylvania, the streams everywhere overflowing their banks and causing more or less damage to houses and farms that lay in their course. Down town in Pittsburg, cellars and basements of business houses which are in the general flood belt, were inundated, while in Allegheny two railroads were temporarily paralyzed owing to the water, which covered their tracks. People in the first and third wards, Allegheny, had to adopt Venice methods of going to and from their homes. Gondolas of the ordinary skiff type were commoner than wheeled vehicles.

From the territory up the Monongahela and Allegheny rivers comes reports that much damage was done by the flooding of lower floors of houses, mills and factories. From all points above, on both rivers, the waters are reported as either falling or stationary, and danger is averted. Towns below here on the Ohio, however, are still to have their worst experiences during the present high water now or later. At McKees Rocks and Corapolis, a few miles below Pittsburg, the water last night was so high that the business sections of both places are under water and several street car lines were forced to suspend operations.

Upper Sandusky, O., March 2.—Much damage has been done here by Sandusky river and Tymochtoe creek. A steel bridge was washed out at Crawford, so that Hocking Valley trains had to go round by Forest. The waterworks pumping station in this city was flooded and the water supply has been shut off. The streams are the highest they have reached in nineteen years.

POPE RECEIVED CARDINALS.

Aged Prelate Would Not Give Way to His Infirmities.

Rome, March 2.—Dr. Lapponi, the pope's physician, made Sunday morning a last effort to induce his holiness to renounce his reception of the cardinals. He remonstrated with him, saying: "Your holiness, my duty is to point out that your health would be greatly benefitted by your resting today." The pope replied, "My dear doctor, before your valuable advice comes my duty, which I shall perform until the end."

The audience was held in the pope's private library, and Leo XIII. spoke continuously for half an hour with the forty-two cardinals present. No address was delivered, and the most important words were when the pontiff referred, with emphasis, to his advanced age and approaching end. He was led to speak thereof in reminding the cardinals that the room in which he was receiving them was the same in which Pius IX. held his last consistory, he (Leo XIII.) being present, but in bed. The cardinals greeted this reference to the possible approach of death with a chorus of noes and with exclamations of "we have all come to wish you a long life."

Rochester, N. Y., March 2.—J. H. Baird of Guysville, O., aged 24 years, was instantly killed by falling from Vincent street bridge, over the Genesee river, to the roof of the electric light company's plant below, a distance of seventy-five feet. It is thought he stepped backward and fell.

ROUND-UP CLOSES

Smaller Attendance but Good Results from Owosso Meet.

TEACHERS' DAY FRIDAY

Prof. Bright, Superintendent of Cook County Schools, Spoke on "Things Worth Considering"—Encourage Nature Study in Rural Schools.

Owosso, Mich., Feb. 28.—The eighth annual round-up of the Michigan farmers' institutes closed Friday noon. L. R. Taft, state superintendent, expressed himself as being quite well satisfied with the sessions, believing the delegates, although fewer in number than at some previous round-ups, had received more inspiration and practical good.

The morning session was decidedly for the teachers, their institute in charge of County School Commissioner O. L. Bristol, having been a prominent feature of the round-up. The farmers were not numerous. Professor Orville T. Bright of Chicago, superintendent of the Cook county schools, talked on "Things worth considering." Highly educated and imbued with the new teaching ideas, Professor Bright's address was one of the best things of the entire program.

Lack of mental activity, due to the limitations of the rural school, was deplored by the speaker. The hard work and drudgery of the farm has made it unpopular. The exodus to the cities has been constant for years, but now, said the speaker, a check is noticeable, thanks to the modern improvements which are enjoyed in some sections of the country, nearly as satisfactory as in town.

Regarding the curriculum of the rural school, Professor Bright advised the cutting out of part of the arithmetic teaching and introducing nature study, or something else besides so much "book learning." Regarding the teaching of geography, he said none should be taught the boy on the farm except such as relates to his experience. History teaching should consist in teaching the pupil how to read history. Beyond that he can care for himself.

Reading is the one great line to adopt with the young pupil. If he cannot read well he cannot do anything else well, and no other line should be taken up with a pupil until after he can read rapidly and intelligently.

Professor Burrows interested the school teachers with an address on "Some common birds and how to study them." He had with him specimens of Michigan's sixty varieties.

Deputy Superintendent of Public Instruction French of Lansing completed the program with a talk on "The ethics of the schoolroom." In the afternoon the 300 schoolmarms visited the Owosso city schools.

Milling In Michigan.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 28.—Labor Commissioner Griswold has completed a tabulation of the results of a thorough canvass of the flouring mills of the state. There are mills in 72 of the 83 counties, located in 537 different cities and towns. Of these 509 are flour mills and 208 manufacture nothing but feed. Fifty-three per cent are operated by individuals, 39 per cent by firms of two or more members, and 8 per cent by incorporated companies. An aggregate capital of $6,190,630 is invested, an average of $8,620. The flour mills show an average investment of $11,556, and the feed mills of about $1,000. When working at full capacity, these mills manufacture 45,900 barrels per day, an average of 90 barrels each. In the past year they actually manufactured 24,510 barrels of flour each day.

Licked the British Bantam.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 28.—The championship of the world in the bantamweight class was won in the Light Guard armory last night, before a big crowd, by Harry Forbes, the champion of America, from Andrew Tokell, acknowledged the best man of his weight that England has produced in many a day. The men fought ten rounds and both were on their feet at the finish, but in none but the fourth and ninth rounds was the victory for a moment in doubt. When, at the close of the battle, Referee Siler of Chicago declared Forbes the winner, there was not a whisper of discontent, and the British champion himself, his left eye closed and his face a mass of bruises, came forward to congratulate the winner.

Guilty of Terrible Charge.

Port Huron, Mich., Feb. 28.—Rev. Charles Kirchner of Gasco township, pastor of the church at that place, has pleaded guilty to being the father of Rosa Aderholtz's child. The young girl was a member of his family. His arrest some time ago caused a sensation. Sentence has not yet been passed on him.

THE MYSTERY OF GRASLOV.

By Ashley Towne. . . .

CHAPTER XVII.

"I AM GOING TO MARRY YOU!"

It was noon in Tomsk, and the Princess Olga had not yet slept. She sat at her window, which faced toward the great plaza, and watched and listened. Suddenly there came to her ears the faint sound of a bugle. It came from the direction of the new railway station. The princess smiled. Then came a knock at her door.

"Open it, Therese."

Therese was pale and trembling. The events of the past two nights had shaken her nerves till she was on the verge of collapse. But she obeyed, and the same lieutenant who had assisted during the night came in.

"I fear for your life!" he said. "Neslerov has recovered and is cursing like a madman. He called for me and ordered me to fetch you to him."

"It will not be a difficult task," said the princess. "I will go."

"But he will kill you. He is speaking words that no sane man could ever speak. He says if he is to be destroyed he will destroy you first."

"Does he know that Vladimir is gone?"

"He suspects it. He has not been to see."

Olga looked from her window. Three men were riding abreast, coming toward the palace, and after them a detachment of the soldiers always at the station.

"Some one comes!" said the officer.

"Yes. Do you know who that is?"

"I do not," replied the officer. "It must be one of the generals."

"You will see," said Olga. "Come! We will go to Neslerov!"

The governor glared at her in mad fury.

"You drugged that wine! You put me to sleep!" he shouted.

"I drugged the liquor, for I had work to do," she answered.

"What have you done? Let us be frank. You came here as an enemy and as a spy."

"I came to right a wrong; to avenge the crime of Graslov."

"What do you know?"

"I know the truth."

"What do you intend to do?"

"Restore that which is lost and undo what was done by wickedness."

An evil look came into his face, and he stepped toward the door. The lieutenant blocked it.

"Out of the way, dog!" cried Neslerov.

"I protect her highness."

"You! You protect against my orders!"

"There is a higher than you. I obey the czar."

Neslerov started back, so powerful in effect is the name of the czar.

"The czar!"

At the very door of the palace a bugle blew its blast.

"Make way! Admit his excellency the governor general," came a voice. Neslerov went white and leaped at Olga.

"You sent for him, and this means my death! We die together!"

"In the name of the czar!" cried Olga, and the sword of the lieutenant touched the breast of Neslerov.

"What means this?"

The voice came from a tall and soldierly man wearing a brilliant uniform, who blocked the doorway with his burly form.

"De Muloff! Governor general!" gasped Neslerov.

"Sit down," said the governor general sternly. "You sent for me in haste, princess. I came as soon as possible. Fortunately there was a train."

"The railroad has saved me and the Duke of Graslov," said Olga.

Neslerov darted a look of hatred toward her.

"Bring Therese, my attendant," said Olga to the lieutenant.

There was another commotion at the entrance, and three soldiers and an officer came in with two prisoners.

"To the governor!" cried the officer. "There was murder at Tivoloffsky!"

Olga started up, and so did Neslerov. The governor general turned calmly to see who had come. The two prisoners were Vladimir and Papa Paulpoff.

"Bring them in here," ordered Olga. "Let them be brought before the governor general."

"This man murdered the superintendent of police and Unagethop," said the officer in charge.

"True," said Vladimir, "I did."

Neslerov was the picture of despair and baffled rage and hate. His glance was venomous, but his very helplessness made him haggard. Therese, white lipped and shivering, came in. Neslerov looked from one to the other. He knew that something was coming—the end of his career. The governor general waited, looking chiefly at Olga, for from her he expected the first bomb.

"Look at that man, Therese!" commanded Olga.

It was a dramatic scene as the girl stood with perfect poise and pointed her finger at Neslerov.

"I see him," faltered Therese.

"Who is he?"

"Prince Nicholas Neslerov."

"Prince Nicholas Neslerov, let me tell you what the governor general already knows," said Olga, and her voice was cold and steely. "For many years my youth prevented a clear understanding of things. I was born after the death of my unfortunate cousin and so did not fully take in the significance of the mystery of Graslov till a few years ago. But when I did learn of it I resolved to sift it to the bottom and make certain that the one who caused her death should be punished. For years my efforts were unavailing. I pursued every line of investigation that occurred to me, and in them all I had the sanction and assistance of the czar. At last, during a sojourn at Graslov in another name, I met this woman whom you have heard me call Therese. Do you know who she is? She is Mme. Dendoff, widow of that Dendoff who was the slave of your wicked father and yourself."

Neslerov was too crestfallen already to show further effect of her words. He made no answer.

"For twenty years this woman has lived with the truth locked in her bosom because she feared her husband. The governor general is here and will hear this case at once, and from that moment when he hears the truth you are in his hands. Therese, who is that man?"

She pointed at Vladimir as she spoke.

"That—is—the Duke of Graslov!" said the woman firmly.

"Tell your story."

"It was twenty years ago, your excellency," said Therese, speaking directly to the governor general, "that the little Prince Alexis was lost. He was missing from the palace at Graslov one evening, and the poor princess was beside herself with grief and anxiety. A search was made, and my husband, who was in the service of the duke, returned from the Kama and reported that the child had been seen wandering on its banks, and he brought back a portion of its garments, which he said he found close to the water. It was believed that the child was drowned, and the princess grieved for her dead boy. The poor princess did not survive the shock long, and when she died there was trouble between the two branches of the Neslerovs. Her family claimed that the duke had misused her and caused her death. It was never settled, and the two families have since been enemies.

"It was not less than two years after when, one night, while he was intoxicated, my husband said something that aroused my suspicion—that he knew what had become of the young prince. I taxed him with it, and he was maudlin enough to confide in me. He had been poor, but since the loss of the young prince he had not worked, but had plenty of money. This also caused me to suspect. He told me, in his drunken fashion, that the Duke of Graslov did not wish the son of the princess to inherit the title or estate. As the father of the boy had died he was the heir, but the duke preferred his younger son, Nicholas.

"The two, the duke and Prince Nicholas, paid my husband to take the child and drown it. He was a wicked man, my husband, and he agreed. He did take the child to the Kama and was about to take from it the telltale clothes when it cried lustily, and a powerful man sprang from the bushes and took the child. There was a fight in which my husband was badly whipped. But he did not dare report to the duke that he had failed, and so he carried out the plans and reported the finding of the clothing at the river. This was the clothing he had taken off preparing to throw the child in the river. To me this revelation was a great shock, but my husband threatened my life if I ever breathed a word of it to a single person. I knew he would keep his threat, and so I dared say nothing, for the house of Graslov was rich and powerful, and I feared to speak even to the police.

"Thus I lived year after year with the shadow of my husband's crime upon my heart, until I thought I would go mad. Moved by an impulse I could not control, I determined to learn if the child was alive. I found it in the house of the blacksmith Paulpoff at Perm. Having learned that the little Alexis was well and happy I felt easier, but resolved that when my opportunity came I would reveal the truth. The old duke died and Nicholas became his heir and finally became governor of Tomsk. A short time ago my husband died, and I was free to tell. There came to Graslov one day a beautiful girl, giving a name that was not familiar, but she was the picture of that lovely princess who had died, and I watched her. I knew she was searching for the truth, and I told her what I knew. We went to St. Petersburg, where she told the czar, and he gave her authority under his seal. We went back to Perm, but the Paulpoffs were on their way to Siberia. The princess resolved to follow, and this meeting is the result."

"How did you know the boy in Paulpoff's house was the young prince?" asked the governor general.

"I saw his mother's picture which had been around his neck. I recognized his face, his voice, his manner, and Paulpoff told me how he came into his possession."

The Hanover Local announces that "R. B. Tully lost a horse by death a few days ago." Yes, Dan Russell of Clark's Lake, lost a valuable colt the same way last week. And this reminds us of the editor of an exchange who received the following inquiry the other day: "What ails my hens—every morning I find two or three of them lying on their back, toes curled up, never to rise again." The editor replied: "Your hens are dead—the only thing you can do is to manufacture them into chicken salad or bury them."

Pains in the Back

Are symptoms of a weak, torpid or stagnant condition of the kidneys or liver, and are a warning it is extremely hazardous to neglect, so important is a healthy action of these organs.

They are commonly attended by loss of energy, lack of courage, and sometimes by gloomy foreboding and despondency.

"I had pains in my back, could not sleep and when I got up in the morning felt worse than the night before. I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and now I can sleep and get up feeling rested and able to do my work. I attribute my cure entirely to Hood's Sarsaparilla." MRS. J. N. PERRY, care H. S. Monday, Washington's birthday, was enjoyed by the men at the prison, for it was a half holiday down there. The men worked at their usual tasks in the morning and at 1:30 marched into the dining room, where they enjoyed a bountiful dinner that had been prepared for them. They were allowed the freedom of the corridors until evening, when they ascended to the chapel room, where they listened to a lecture, "Glimpses of Foreign Travel," by the Hon. Frank A. A battering ram was used to break into the house, but the officers were met by Keller, who with his poker put up a game fight, and struck the officers with weapons. He was finally overpowered and placed in restraint.—Hudson Post.

A tramp stored himself away on the front platform of a Lake Shore limited train the other day to steal a 160 mile ride. Now, as is well known, these fast trains do not stop for water but scoop it up from troughs in the center of the track. It requires good judgment to raise the scoop at the proper time else the tank will run over. On this train they were making fast time and the fireman took water twice. Whether he knew that the tramp was on the platform or not the scoop was left down a minute too long each time and tons of water boiled over the tank onto the front platform giving the tramp two good involuntary baths. At the end of the run he appeared before the engineers as wet as a drowned rat and touching him lightly upon the arm said: "Say, mister, what was the name of those rivers we run through back there?"—Manchester Enterprise.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, March 2, 1903.

The last session of the 57th congress is drawing rapidly to a close with the usual hurry and bustle incident to the closing hours of a congress in both legislative chambers. Filibustering, conflict and rancor have been evident in both houses during the greater portion of the week and a systematic filibuster is still being conducted in the House by the democrats in revenge for the unseating of Representative Butler, of Missouri. On the face of the returns, Mr. Butler was elected by 6,100 majority, but on the discovery of certain frauds the vote of so many precincts was thrown out that the contestant, Mr. Wagoner, was awarded the seat. This decision, coming so late in the session, has practically no effect other than to give Mr. Wagoner his $10,000 salary and mileage. The democrats have caucused on the situation and bound themselves to demand a yea and nay vote on every measure. The result of this action on Friday was to prolong the mere approval of the journal over two hours and since then the House has not adjourned, taking recesses and making the legislative day of Friday continue, it is expected, until the congress expires.

A similar filibuster was organized in the senate, the democrats being determined to force a vote on the Littlefield anti-trust bill, but was of short duration as the republicans permitted the question to come to a vote, refusing to consider the Littlefield bill, 28 to 38. Senator Morgan's filibuster on the Panama canal treaty still continues and the senator from Alabama has objected to every motion to set the day for a vote before the end of the session. This is regarded as rendering an extra session of the senate inevitable. Excellent progress has been made with the appropriation bills and, as a result, there will be no extra session of both houses of congress as was at one time threatened.

President Roosevelt has sent an earnest appeal to the senate to pass the Philippine tariff bill, reducing the tariff on sugar and tobacco from the Philippines from 75 to 50 per cent. of the Dingley rates, but Senators Teller and Patterson, fearing that the Philippine sugar industry may at some future time be able to compete with their beet sugar producing constituents, say they will talk the bill to death if its further consideration is insisted upon. Senator Lodge, who has the measure in charge, said today that he regarded its fate as most dubious.

The idea of a fixed naval program so earnestly advocated by leaders of both political parties and by the president, is rapidly gaining favor and the House committee on naval affairs has favorably reported a resolution calling upon the secretary of the navy, the naval war college and the naval board, of which Admiral Dewey is president, for information on the feasibility of such a plan, together with recommendations as to the class of ships which should be built, the length of program most judicious, the annual expenditure advised, etc. It is regarded as probable that the next congress will adopt such a program and that it will govern the future increase of the navy for a number of years.

Statehood legislation at this session of congress is dead. The compromise presented by the republicans was promptly rejected by the democrats and the whole matter goes over to the next congress. According to the republican leaders a party bill creating two states out of the four territories will be passed at the next session but this prediction is strenuously disputed by the democrats.

It is not generally realized that foreign governments own in the city of Washington real estate having an actual value of over $2,000,000. The largest holder of such property is the British government whose embassy is alleged to be worth upwards of $200,000. The German government stands next with property worth over $100,000. The French embassy is worth not less than $50,000 and owns a building site, not yet improved, worth $30,000. The Corean government owns property worth $25,000 and so on. As none of this property pays taxes, the loss to the District of Columbia in revenues is estimated at upwards of $8,000 per annum.

"I wonder if the American conscience is growing tender," said the secretary of the treasury recently when he received a check for $4,000 from a man who said that he had taken that amount from the government and his conscience had troubled him ever since. This is the second large remittance to the "Conscience Fund" received within the past six months. The majority of the contributions to this fund do not amount to over 50 cents, many of them being as small as two cents. All are acknowledged through the daily press, however small, and go to swell that fund which bears such eloquent, though silent, tribute to the sensitiveness of the human conscience.

The Daughters of the American Revolution have held a lively and at times exciting convention in Washington concluding their labors last Saturday. During the early hours of the session there was a bitter contest for the presidency, but it was finally dissipated by the withdrawal of Mrs. Donald McLean, of New York, from the race. This left Mrs. Fairbanks, of Indiana, almost a sole candidate and she was re-elected by a large majority. Mrs. McLean's withdrawal was regarded by the Daughters as most graceful and won for her such great popularity that it is generally conceded that she will be elected to succeed Mrs. Fairbanks two years hence, no president being eligible for more than two terms under the provisions of the constitution.

YOU MAY SING

IF WELL AND HAPPY

If you feel the throb of pure blood in your veins and the thrill of life in your body you are fit for anything, you can laugh and sing, you are in condition for work or play and you will enjoy life.

PURE BLOOD MEANS LIFE

If you do not feel right, if you are troubled with a gloomy feeling, with tired and nervous spells, look out for the following symptoms:

Foul Breath, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Sallow Skin, Pimples and Blotches, Indigestion, Loss of Appetite, Pains in the Side, Lame Back, Pains Under Right Shoulder, Dizzy Spells, Nervousness, Neuralgia, Rheumatic Pains.

These signs show that your kidneys and liver are out of order, and if they are they will not carry off the impurities and you will feel bad and are liable to have a spell of sickness. Better attend to it at once.

KINYON'S BLOOD AND KIDNEY REMEDY

WILL SET YOU RIGHT

Mrs. Balch of Mishawaka, Ind., says: "I was very sick for over two months, troubled with gall stones and general kidney trouble, at times I screamed so with pain that people could hear me a block away. I had a number of doctors and they could do nothing for me. I kept getting worse, could not rest or sleep. In desperation I used Kinyon's Blood and Kidney Remedy. I took $2.00 worth and got well. For the last year I have enjoyed good health."

Proverbs

"When the butter won't come put a penny in the churn," is an old time dairy proverb. It often seems to work though no one has ever told why.

When mothers are worried because the children do not gain strength and flesh we say give them Scott's Emulsion.

It is like the penny in the milk because it works and because there is something astonishing about it.

Scott's Emulsion is simply a milk of pure cod liver oil with some hypophosphites especially prepared for delicate stomachs.

Children take to it naturally because they like the taste and the remedy takes just as naturally to the children because it is so perfectly adapted to their wants.

For all weak and pale and thin children Scott's Emulsion is the most satisfactory treatment.

We will send you the penny, i. e., a sample free.

Be sure that this picture in the form of a label is on the wrapper of every bottle of Emulsion you buy.

Tecumseh, with a population of 2,400, has a comfortable theater, with a big stage and other modern accessories. That the people appreciate and patronize good theatrical attractions is attested by the fact that the receipts at a performance of "Liberty Belles," a metropolitan favorite, amounted to $440.—Hudson Post.

Lafayette Rappleye

The community of Ridgeway were shocked to learn of the sudden death of Lafayette Rappleye. Not arising at the usual time his wife called him, but getting no reply went up stairs to his room to find him cold in death. Coroner Stevens, of Tecumseh, was summoned and a jury impaneled who rendered a verdict of death caused from apoplexy.

Mr. Rappleye was 64 years of age and has been a resident of this place since a small boy. He leaves a widow and one son and three brothers to mourn his departure.

The funeral services will be conducted from his late residence Thursday afternoon at two o'clock.

Tragedy Averted.

"Just in the nick of time our little boy was saved," writes Mrs. W. Watkins of Pleasant City, Ohio. Pneumonia had played sad havoc with him and a terrible cough set in besides. Doctors treated him, but he grew worse every day. At length we tried Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and our darling was saved. He's now sound and well." Of 417 prisoners in the county jail during the last six months 348 were charged with being drunk. There were only four women in the entire number. Probate Judge Watkins says it is so pleasant that tramps like to be sent there. At present there are 41 prisoners. —Manchester Herald.

WALTER STONE

Fell from Freight No. 52 at the West "Y" and

WAS KILLED,

The Body was Found by Fred Holmes and Identified by Charles Wright, as his Nephew.

Saturday evening about 5:30, shortly after freight No. 52 had pulled in from Adrian, the body of Walter Stone, colored, better known in Adrian as Walter Young, was found on the west "Y" in a mangled condition. The head and left foot being nearly severed from the body while the right arm was completely off.

He was a nephew of Charles Wright, the porter at the Emery House, and was identified by him.

Stone was seen at the Detroit Southern depot in Adrian just before the freight left and the supposition is that he was killed by falling under this train on which he stole a ride. He was coming to Tecumseh to visit his uncle.

Undertaker Belding was called and the remains were moved to his undertaking parlors and after Coroner H. W. Stevens viewed the remains he decided an inquest was unnecessary.

The remains were taken to Adrian Sunday afternoon to the home of Mrs. Anna Walters, corner of Clinton and Hunt streets. The funeral was held at two o'clock yesterday, Rev. Bird, of the A. M. E. church, officiating. Interment at Oakwood cemetery.

Mr. Stone was married about eight years ago. His wife left him last fall going to Toledo to make her home with an uncle. The young man was about 31 years of age and leaves a mother, Mrs. Rachael Stone, of Adrian, to mourn his loss.

Mrs. Helen L. Sprague.

Helen Louise Sprague was born at Rome, N. Y., Dec. 15, 1840. Her maiden name was Bettinger. She was married to Chas. I. Sprague at LaPorte, Ind., Aug. 14, 1860. Her residence during the years of the Civil War was in Indiana where her husband was a contractor for the government. From 1865 to 1881, her residence was in New York City and Long Island. In 1881 they removed to Owosso, Mich., and at that place in 1890 Mr. Sprague died.

Since that time Mrs. Sprague has resided in Tecumseh with her daughter, Mrs. M. A. Zimmerman, at whose home ministered to by loving hands, she passed away Thursday morning, February 19, 1903. Mrs. Sprague was an Episcopalian in belief and a communicant of St. Peter's church.

The service at the residence was conducted by her rector, Rev C. C. Kemp, and the singing was by the vested choir. The interment was at Owosso on Saturday where the Rev. Cooper was the officiating clergyman. The floral offerings by her friends were numerous and beautiful and testified in a measure to the high regard in which she was held in the church, in the neighborhood, and by everyone with whom she was in anyway associated.

Loving and unselfish to her immediate family, kind and helpful to her friends, and thoughtful and courteous to everyone, Mrs. Sprague will be missed and remembered in many circles outside her own home.

"Fold her, O Father! in thine arms,
And let her henceforth be
A messenger of love between
Our human hearts and Thee."

"For Her Childrens' Sake."

New York has approved of Theodore Kremer's new play "For Her Childrens' Sake," and there is nothing left for us to do but follow suit and applaud Messrs. Sullivan, Harris and Woods' latest bid for popularity. They conquered with "The Fatal Wedding" and in following up this big bonanza, did not hit all wide of the mark in their selection of its successor. Its career in the metropolis at the Grand opera house, was an instantaneous hit for company, author and producers. It will be shown here with all the original effects and full strength of the cast that caused the big city to sit up in amazement and say "At last we have found a play!" The New Bradley Friday, March 6, 1903.

IT IS SERIOUS.

Some Tecumseh People Fail to Realize the Seriousness.

The constant aching of a bad back,
The weariness, the tired feeling,
The pains and aches of kidney ills
Are serious—if neglected.
Dangerous urinary troubles follow.

A Tecumseh citizen shows you how to avoid them.

Mr. F. A. Ferguson, tinsmith, residing in the northwestern section of Tecumseh, says "I had symptoms of kidney trouble. The kidney secretions were very irregular and at times too frequent and highly colored. Having seen so many cases of severe kidney trouble I thought it wise to do something at once, so I got a box of Doan's Kidney Pills at C. A. Wright's drug store and took them. I began to improve from the very start and continued to do so. I emphatically declare Doan's Kidney Pills to be up to the representations made for them."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents per box. Foster-Milburn company, Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

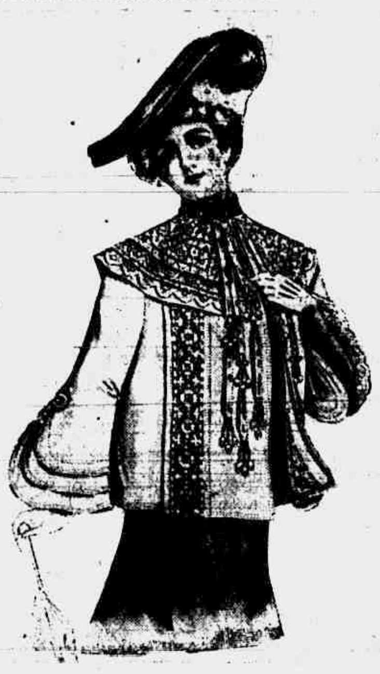
LATEST FASHION NOTES.

A Pretty Short Coat.

This very novel coat is suitable for either velvet or peau de soie, and recalls some of the portraits of earlier days. The deep collar, which may almost be called a cape, is edged with Vendyck-pointed Irish crochet lace, and the coat, which is here made of velvet, is ornamented with strapes of peau de soie stitched with Corticelli stitching silk, and is further decorated by small buttons and dainty bowknots.



The yoke jacket, recalling the Norfolk, returns to us with a few modifications, or rather merely one modification, and that the loose front. The yoke and the plait effect remains, the plaits in this instance being simulated and on the fronts reaching to the belt, while in back the plait-shaped piece is very wide where it joins the yoke, then narrows to the waist and widens a trifle again on the basque. The yoke is cut with points and adorned with buttons in front, similar buttons apparently fastening the belt on either side of the front. The revers, collar, and cuffs are of plaid cloth.

A Minor Consideration.

The ambitious young woman was attracted by an advertisement, one line of which read, "How to Become an Author." The advertiser claimed that by his method failure was impossible.

So the ambitious young woman sent on the necessary trifling sum of money, and by return mail she received a slip on which was printed this bit of advice, "Write something."

"But," she protested by letter, "I already have done that, and it hasn't been printed."

"We congratulate you," was the reply. "If you have written something, you already are an author. Publication is a minor consideration, with which we have nothing to do."—Brooklyn Eagle.

Managing the Baby.

Young Matron (with theories on the care of children, to nurse)—Jane.

Nurse—Yessum.

Young Matron—When the baby has finished his bottle, lay him in the cradle on his right side. After eating a child should always lie on the right side. That relieves the pressure on the heart. Still (reflectively) the liver is on the right side. Perhaps, after all, you had better lay him on the left side. No, I am sure the treatise on "Infant Digestion" said right side. On the whole, Jane, you may lay the baby on his back until I have looked up the matter more thoroughly.

An Earnest Salutation.

"Ah," said Biggs as a prosperous looking man who had cordially saluted Diggs passed on, "that's the way I like to hear a man speak. He seemed sincerely glad to find you alive and well."

"Yes," replied Diggs. "He probably was. He's the president of the company my life's insured in."—Brooklyn Life.

Expressive.

It was Tommy's first glass of soda water that he had been teasing for so long.

"Well, Tommy, how does it taste?" asked his father.

"Why," replied Tommy, with a puzzled face, "it tastes like your foot's asleep."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

A Natural Question.

Little Walter was eating lunch, when he gave his arm a sudden shove, and, splash! down went his glass of milk.

"I knew you were going to spill that," said mamma angrily.

"Well, if you knew," queried Walter, "why didn't you tell me?"

PLEA OF INSANITY

Likely to Be Made by Defense at Trial of Murderer Knapp.

Hamilton, O., March 2.—Albert Knapp, the self-confessed murderer of five women, will probably be arraigned today and his preliminary trial will be held soon afterward. It is almost certain a plea of insanity will be the defense. It was currently reported about the jail yesterday that Knapp is considering another confession that will cover other crimes. Among those who have been with Knapp were medical experts, who pronounced him sane but abnormally degenerate.

Cincinnati, March 2.—While neither the parents nor the brother, Cyrus Knapp, nor the sisters, Mrs. King and Mrs. Wenzel, of the Hamilton prisoner, are under surveillance here, the officers are incidentally keeping track of them. It seems that the family all agree in their statements about Alfred being insane, but they differ about other matters. His brother Cyrus and his sister, Mrs. Wenzel, are doing all they can for his defense and have created much sympathy in the neighborhood for their aged parents.

At the same time, the Kings have aided in the apprehension of the prisoner. It is now generally believed here that Mr. King had his suspicions confirmed recently by Knapp's mother, who got a letter from her son, telling about his crimes, and that the aged mother told all, so as to prevent Alfred from murdering his fourth wife, who is now in Indianapolis. All possible efforts were made here to get this letter and others, but it is believed that Mrs. Wenzel is correct in insisting that Alfred's letters were burned.

Mrs. Wenzel blames her sister, Mrs. King, with urging her husband to have Alfred arrested. She also blames Hannah Goddard Knapp with separating Mr. Wenzel, who now lives in Chicago, and herself. Mrs. King, in her interview, stated that Alfred wrote Mrs. Wenzel some time ago that Hannah was now out of the way. Mrs. Wenzel denies receiving such letter. The counter-statements of the sisters are attracting much attention here.

She Was Tired of Life.

Philadelphia, March 2.—A woman, who gave her name as Mrs. Charlotte G. Wellington, committed suicide Saturday by inhaling chloroform in a fashionable boarding house in Haddonfeld, N. J., near here. The woman left a note to the proprietress of the boarding house in which she said: "I am the last of a distinguished family left so alone that I am tired of life. Will you kindly see that my remains are decently buried? I inclose money to pay expenses. My clothes give to the poor. Please keep this as quiet as possible." With the note was $75.

Gen. William Smith Is Dead.

Philadelphia, March 2.—Gen. William Farrar Smith, better known as "Baldy" Smith, one of the prominent figures of the civil war, died at his home in this city Saturday night. He was in his 80th year and was born in St. Albans, Vt. He entered West Point at the age of 17 and when the civil war broke out he was made commander of the Third Vermont regiment. He rose rapidly and became one of the leading figures in that struggle.

Believed Woman Murdered Him.

Buffalo, March 2.—The body of Edwin L. Burdick, who was murdered at his home on Ashland avenue last Thursday night, was Sunday taken to his former home in Canestota and buried. The authorities so far have not given out any information as to their work in attempting to run down the murderer. The police are inclining to the theory that the crime was committed by a woman.

Jeffries and Corbett Matched.

New York, March 2.—James J. Jeffries and James J. Corbett met Sunday and agreed to fight twenty rounds next July before the club that will give them $25,000, or the largest purse that may be offered above that sum, the winner to take 75 per cent and the loser 25. It was also agreed that the principals should meet in Baltimore to sign articles Thursday next.

Sunday In England.

Few people are aware how strict a Sabbath is still legally ordained in England. The Lord's day observance act forbids not only Sunday trading, but also every possible occupation—walking, riding, rowing or any game—and strictly enjoins upon all subjects over nine years of age attendance at church. At the opening of every assize the royal proclamation for the preservation of morality is read. People who are then present for the first time are astonished to hear that the monarch forbids and calls upon the magistrates to punish absence from divine service on Sundays, any playing of cards or other games of chance or haunting of public houses on the same day. Everybody found in an inn during service hours is liable to a fine of 80 cents, the landlord to a penalty of $2.40, and for a successful prosecution church wardens are entitled to a reward of $10. As recently as 1864 Isaac Walton, a manservant, was fined $2.30 for refusing to attend church on Sunday when ordered there by his mistress. About the same time a mother was prosecuted by her son and actually imprisoned for not attending church.

READ IT THROUGH.

'Twould Spoil this Story to Tell it in the Headlines.

To use an eighteenth century phrase, this is an "o'er true tale." Having happened in a small Virginia town in the winter of 1902, it is a story very much of the present. Up to a short time ago Mrs. John E. Harmon, of Melta Station, Va., had no personal knowledge of the rare curative properties of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. "Last January," she says, "my baby took a dreadful cold and at one time I feared she would have pneumonia, but one of my neighbors told me how this remedy had cured her little boy and I began giving it to my baby at once and it soon cured her. I heartily thank the manufacturers of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for placing so great a cure within my reach. I cannot recommend it too highly or say too much in its favor. I hope all who read this will try it and be convinced as I was." For sale by all druggists.

How He Made Money.

Conversation overheard on a train for Monte Carlo. Two travelers unknown to each other chatting familiarly:

"On your way to Monte Carlo, sir, that delightful and exclusive home for all gamblers?"

"That is exactly where I am going."

"And you will play just a little, I suppose?"

"I do nothing else, sir. It is my business."

"Gracious! You don't mean to say you make a business of it?"

"Yes, sir; twice a day regularly, and I never by any chance lose."

"In that case perhaps you will explain your 'system' to me."

"Certainly, with pleasure. I play the violin."

Why He Changed His Mind.

"I tell you, sir, civil service is a great thing.

The man addressed looked astonished.

"Coming from any one but you, that remark would not greatly surprise me," he said. "You didn't think so when I last saw you."

"No, I didn't."

"You considered civil service little short of a civic curse."

"That's right. But then I was on the outside and trying to get in, while now I am on the inside and trying to stay in. It makes a great difference."—Brooklyn Eagle.

Dick—And think of the opportunities he must have had! It should be a warning to everybody still alive. You haven't got a couple of dollars about you that you can let me have until I see you again?—Boston Transcript.

The Elder Sothern's Tact.

It was in the year 1863 or 1864. During the summer months Sothern, with John T. Raymond and several other well known actors, occupied the local theater of a seaside summer resort, to which he and his company drew a houseful of people several nights in the week to hear and see them act—rehearse it really was in preparation for their next winter's New York season—the most important of Shakespeare's plays.

The little building had of course a gallery, and in the gallery the "gods" became so obstreperous on occasions that it was with great difficulty the play could be proceeded with. The ringleader, a well known rough of the town, was a man named Bill Hanrahan. One night a happy inspiration seized Sothern. Having learned the name of this prominent member of the rowdy element, he addressed him in the midst of the most unearthly noises as follows: "Mr. Hanrahan, will you be good enough to take charge of the gallery and keep order for me, and I shall feel very grateful." The result was magical. Bill became at once an official of the theater and as such cracked the heads of a few of his erstwhile fellow rioters with such good effect that it was only a little time before the best of order prevailed.—Century.

Every Conveniience.

There is a dock laborer in Glasgow who is possessed of a great sense of humor. Perhaps it's because he's an Irishman. Pat had been disturbed several times in his single apartment by a well meaning lady missionary. Seeing Pat was rather an exemplary sort of a husband, she suggested that he might be able to afford a room and kitchen soon.

"An' phwat wad Oi want lavin' such a comfortable house as this for?" asked Pat.

"Well," she replied, "you would have more room—more conveniences."

"Convaniences is it?" said Pat, with a smile. "Sure, an' at prisint if Oi want to go to the drawin' room or the dinin' room or the conservatory, begorra, Oi've just got to sit still. Phwat could be handier?"

The lady couldn't say.—London Answers.

Who Executed Charles I.

In the burial register of Whitechapel under the year 1649 is the following entry:

"June 21st. Richard Brandon, a man out of Rosemary lane. This Brandon is held to be the man who beheaded Charles the First."

A less distinguished candidate for the infamy was one William Howlett, actually condemned to death after the restoration for a part he never played and only saved from the gallows by the urgent efforts of a few citizens who swore that Brandon did the deed. Brandon was not available for retribution. He had died in his bed six months after Charles was beheaded and had been hurried ignominiously into his grave in Whitechapel churchyard. As public executioner of London he could hardly escape his destiny, but it is said that remorse and horror shortened his days. In his supposed "Confession," a tract widely circulated at the time, he claims that he was "fetched out of bed by a troop of horse" and carried against his will to the scaffold; also that he was paid £30, all in half crowns, for the work and had "an orange stuck full of cloves and a handkerchief out of the king's pocket." The orange he sold for 10 shillings in Rosemary lane.—Harper's Magazine.

Washington's Birthday.

Washington's birthday was made a legal holiday by vote of the Massachusetts legislature April 15, 1856; therefore Feb. 22, 1857, was first a legal holiday. For many years previous Mrs. Harrison Gray Otis held a reception at her home on Feb. 22, to which all the people of the city of Boston were invited. Her house was open to the public on that day, and before and after the day became a legal holiday all the military companies of Boston would parade past her house on the 22d. Probably the first occasion of Washington's birthday being recognized was Feb. 12, 1781. That was by the French troops at Newport, R. I. As the 11th fell on Sunday, the celebration was held on the 12th. This was according to the old style of reckoning.

Wakeful Children.

For a long time the two year old child of Mr. P. L. McPherson, 59 N. Tenth St., Harrisburg, Pa., would sleep but two or three hours in the early part of the night, which made it very hard for her parents. Her mother concluded that the child had stomach trouble and and gave her half of one of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets, which quieted her stomach and she slept the whole night through. Two boxes of these Tablets have effected a permanent cure and she is now well and strong. For sale by all druggists.

If it's a bilious attack, take Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets and a quick recovery is certain. For sale by druggists.

The Word "Picnic."

Few people know the original meaning of the word "picnic." It is to be found set out in the London Times of a hundred years ago. "A picnic supper consists of a variety of dishes. The subscribers to this entertainment have a bill of fare presented to them, with a number against each dish. The lot which he draws obliges him to furnish the dish marked against it, which he either takes with him in his carriage or sends by a servant. The proper variety is preserved by the talents of the maitre d'hotel, who forms the bill of fare. As the cookery is furnished by so many people of fashion each strives to excel, and thus a picnic supper not only gives rise to much pleasant mirth, but generally can boast of the refinement of the art."

Where He Rode.

A schoolboy who was going to a party was cautioned by his father not to walk home if it rained and was given money for cab hire. It rained heavily, and great was the father's surprise when his son, in spite of the instructions he had received, arrived home drenched to the skin.

"Did you not take a cab as I ordered you, Alfred?" the parent asked sternly.

"Oh, yes; but when I ride with you you always make me ride inside. This time I rode on top with the driver. Say, dad, it was grand!"—Utica Observer.

A Wonderful Echo.

At a watering place in the Pyrenees the conversation at table turned upon a wonderful echo to be heard some distance off on the Franco-Spanish frontier.

"It is astonishing," said an inhabitant of the Garonne. "As soon as you have spoken you hear distinctly the voice leap from rock to rock, from precipice to precipice, and as soon as it has passed the frontier the echo assumes the Spanish accent."—Pearson's Weekly.

Knights of Old.

The knights of the days of chivalry were so well protected by their armor that they were practically invincible to all ordinary weapons. Even when dismounted they could not be injured save by the misericordia, a thin dagger, which penetrated the chains of the armor. In more than one battle knights fallen from their horses could not be killed until their armor had been broken up with axes and hammers.

Good Cooks.

"If all sick people had good cooks," says the London Hospital, "how much greater might be the proportions of recoveries!" The value of the patent foods which are advertised so much lies largely, it says, in the ease with which they are prepared for the table.

AFTER A LONG ILLNESS

Hon. W. A. French Is Taken Away—Sketch of His Life.

Saginaw, Mich., March 3.—Hon. William A. French died Sunday morning at 12:53 at St. Mary's hospital from the result of an operation performed for the removal of a tumor on Feb. 2.

The end came peacefully, with his wife and his brother, S. A. French, in the room. For some days the doctors have not permitted him to speak to anyone.

Perhaps the death of no figure in Michigan politics will be more generally mourned than the passage into eternity of William A. French. He has for years been prominently identified with the Republican party and was recognized as one of its stalwarts. Born in Pelham, Canada, in March, 1849, he went to Chicago in 1867, where he was employed for several years by the Chicago & Northwestern railway. He then moved to Dundee, Monroe county, where he owned and operated several large mills and farms and figured as a railroad contractor very extensively.

He was first elected to the legislature in 1882 by a large majority. After serving a term in that capacity he moved to Presque Isle county, where he engaged in the lumbering business. In 1896 he was appointed as a member of the board of trustees for the Northern asylum for the insane at Traverse City, which position he resigned in 1898. For four years he was a member of the Republican state committee, was nominated at the Republican state convention as state land commissioner in 1894, and was later renominated and elected to succeed himself in that office for several terms.

His wife, three sons, Frank S., Alfred and Archibald, and one daughter, Ollie M., survive him. The remains will be taken to Dundee for interment.

A Medicine for Old People.

Rev. Geo. Gay, Greenwich, Kas., is past 83 years of age, yet he says: "I am enjoying excellent health for a man of my age, due entirely to the rejuvenating influences of Dr. Miles' Nervine. It brings sleep and rest when nothing else will, and gives strength and vitality even to one of my old age."

"I am an old soldier," writes Mr. Geo. Watson, of Newton, Ia., "and I have been a great sufferer from nervousness, vertigo and spinal trouble. Have spent considerable money for medicine and doctors, but with little benefit. I was so bad my mind showed signs of weakness. I began taking Dr. Miles' Nervine, and I know it saved my life."

Dr. Miles' Nervine

"Saved me from the insane asylum," Mrs. A. M. Hellmer, of Jerico Springs, Mo., writes. "I was so nervous that I could scarcely control myself, could not sleep or rest, would even forget the names of my own children at times. I commenced using Dr. Miles' Nervine and it helped me from the first, and now I am perfectly well."

HEADED OFF STRIKE

President Ramsey of the Wabash Gets Out an Injunction.

TURNED TRICK ON EMPLOYES

Prevents Eleven Hundred Firemen From Leaving—Claims Road Pays Higher Wages Than Nearly All Others.

St. Louis, Mo., March 4.—An injunction granted by Judge Adams of the United States district court prevented the culmination Tuesday of the threatened strike of the 1,100 firemen and trainmen of the Wabash railroad for higher wages. As the result of the poll during the past week among the employes over the question of striking in case President Ramsey ultimately should refuse to grant the demanded wage concessions on the Wabash east of the Mississippi river, the engineers and conductors refused to participate in a strike, but the firemen and trainmen favored it emphatically. Their committees Monday notified President Ramsey that he would be given until noon Tuesday to grant their demand. If by that time he still refused, a strike would be immediately called.

President Ramsey yesterday afternoon requested a little more time, and the two committees granted him until 5 o'clock to make final reply. Before the allotted time had expired President Ramsey had secured a restraining order from the court, and it had been served on all the officials of all the orders and members of the grievance committees. The injunction was a most sweeping instrument and effectually blocked any strike proceedings. In part it reads:

"We, therefore, do strictly command you, until the further order of the court, absolutely to desist and refrain from in any way or manner ordering, coercing, persuading, inducing or otherwise causing, directly or indirectly, the employes of the said Wabash Railway company to strike or quit the service of said company."

The injunction is temporary and writs are not made returnable. The persons against whom the injunction is issued may appear in court at any time and present a plea to have the injunction dissolved, or if no one asks that it be dissolved, it may be made permanent.

After considering the demands set forth in the letter sent him by the committees representing the Wabash trainmen and firemen yesterday afternoon, President Ramsey early in the evening made reply in a letter of considerable length. Regarding the firemen's demands he said:

"We now pay higher rates for firing our engines than nearly all other roads. In this connection, I would remind you that your own demands, Nov. 10 last, were for $2.40 per 100 miles on heavy engines, and I give you $2.50 in our Dec. 1 schedule, posted Dec. 3, and on Dec. 10 you raised to $2.60. The classification of engines will stand on $2.30 and $2.50 rate until we find other lines paying more for engines of same weights. The demand is declined.

"You now demand 10 per cent increase for all firemen on the Buffalo division (in Canada). This is an absolutely new demand and was not voted on by the employes. I can consider no advance on the Buffalo division, except in comparison with rates paid by lines in that territory. We now pay the same as the Grand Trunk railway, whose tracks we run our trains over. The demand is declined, subject to comparison as above."

More Praise From Lorenz.

Vienna, March 4.—Professor Lorenz related his experiences in America before a distinguished gathering of society people and scientists yesterday evening. He referred jestingly to the fact that he had "been banquetted to death" and to the "tyranny of the American toastmaster." The American woman, the professor said, undoubtedly was preeminent in intellect, education and art, "but she cannot cook, and, according to President Roosevelt, will not marry." Professor Lorenz summed up his impressions by saying that America was "a magnificent country, inhabited by a noble people."

Knapp Makes Another Confession.

Hamilton, O., March 4.—While talking about the finding of the body of Hannah Goddard, Strangler Knapp confessed another crime. Knapp said he was the man who, in the summer of 1886, attacked a girl at New Madrid Bend, in Lake county, Missouri. He says he was chased by a mob bent on lynching him, and that he held a big crowd at bay with a Winchester rifle. He succeeded in saving his life by flight, making his way towards the river. Knapp then told of other attacks on women from which he had narrow escapes.

Saw a Steamer Sink.

New York, March 4.—The German steamer Pisa, from Hamburg, arrived here yesterday and reported that on Feb. 16, when in latitude 49.46, longitude 12.45, she saw a steamer with one mast and one funnel standing bow out of water and stern settled down. Later when the Pisa was within a mile of the steamer the latter disappeared. There were no boats or rafts in the vicinity of the vessel. The captain of the Pisa believes that all hands perished.

Unique German Society.

Berlin, March 4.—A new society has been organized at Hamburg for promoting German shipping and increasing the number of trained German seamen. It will give special attention to the selection of strong lads and to educating them to become sailors and officers. The society hopes to give the young men thorough drilling in yachting, by which German yachtsmen will get better results in international regattas.

PRIMARY IN STATE

Legislators Favoring It Each Have a Pet Idea.

FARMER SOLONS ARE DIVIDED

Duncan's Bill For Enlargement of Labor Commissioner's Report Killed in Senate—Legislature Will Adjourn For Week at End of Today's Session.

Lansing, Mich., March 5.—The general demand from all over the lower peninsula for a general primary law has at least had the effect of compelling the unwilling administrationists to admit that "something must be done."

One thousand and one things have been proposed. Every senator has his pet idea with regard to the details of what he would consider a "safe" bill.

A careful canvass of the senate shows that at least fourteen senators are willing to vote for a general bill covering the state ticket. They are: Barnes, Burns, Cannon, Cook, Farr, Glasgow, Goodell, Jones, Lockerby, Scripps, Simons, Scullen, Van Akin and Vaughan.

Senator Burns is much opposed to a blanket ballot such as the compromise bill reported out by Chairman Colby of the house elections committee yesterday provides. Goodell is pushing a bill of his own. Van Akin, who is not in the city, represents Lenawee, one of the strongest primary election counties in the state.

The measure which finds favor in the eyes of the men with a majority of two or three is one to provide for the election of delegates to state convention by primary system. But with no one engineering the fight for the genuine reformists in the upper house and with no immediate danger threatening from the Democrats of the state, the fate of such a bill as the house will probably pass is extremely problematical.

The legislative farmers' club held a lively session last night on general primary election reform measures. About thirty members were present. Nearly half of them declared that while they were personally opposed to the passage of a general primary election bill, abolishing political party, state and other nominating conventions, they would vote for a general primary election bill.

Representative Duncan's bill, providing for the enlargement of the biennial report of the labor commissioner from 400 to 600 pages, passed its third reading in the house and came over to the senate. The work of printing the report has already commenced, and Duncan wanted the bill hustled through. Senator Iaflamboy was to take charge of it but was not on hand and Doherty volunteered to take care of it by moving its immediate passage.

Senator Barnes, chairman of the senate committee on printing, objected on the ground that his committee had not considered the bill. Senator Scripps, a member of the committee, stood by Barnes, and said he could see no reason for such haste. Barnes said he didn't like the looks of it. Glasgow also kicked on the railroad act.

On a vote being taken, there were nine for the bill and five against, not a sufficient number to pass it. On Doherty's motion, the vote was reconsidered and the bill referred to the committee on printing. It was Doherty's first attempt this session to pass a bill on the floor of the senate.

A joint resolution went through both houses fixing adjournment for the week at the close of today's 9 o'clock sessions.

The senate state affairs and finance committees and the house state affairs and ways and means committees will hold a joint committee meeting in the senate chamber Wednesday evening, March 11, at 7:30, to consider the St. Louis world's fair appropriation bill.

TO LAST MOMENT

Democrats Kept Up Filibustering In the House.

CONGRESS ADJOURNS AT NOON

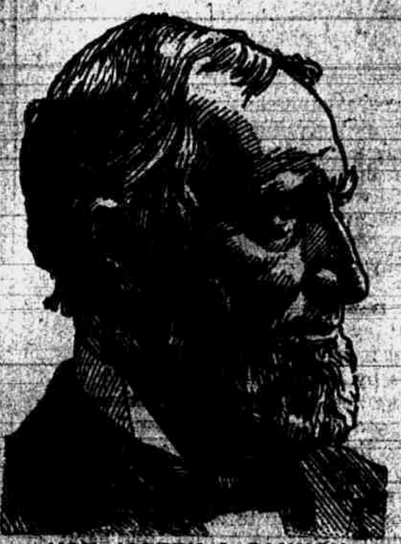
Vote of Thanks to Speaker Henderson —Lively Debate During Closing Hours of Senate—Roosevelt Held Reception to the Legislators.

Washington, March 5.—Congress adjourned at noon Wednesday amid dramatic scenes. Both houses convened at 10 o'clock, but the attendance at the opening was slim, as it was 4 o'clock in the morning before the session of the house adjourned.

In the house the Democratic minority appeared determined to make good its threat to keep up its filibustering tactics to the end. As soon as the speaker's gavel fell he announced that no quorum was present and a call of the house was ordered.

As the roll call was concluded a remarkable scene occurred. Speaker Henderson yielded the gavel to Mr. Cannon, the incoming speaker. As the latter took the chair the members broke into a burst of applause, in which the galleries joined. Amid intense silence Payne, majority leader, offered the following resolution of thanks to the retiring speaker:

"Resolved, That the thanks of this house are presented to the Hon. David B. Henderson, speaker of the house of representatives, for the able, impartial and dignified manner in which he has presided over its deliberations and performed the arduous and important duties of the chair during the present term of congress."



HON. JOSEPH G. CANNON,
Who Will Be Chosen Speaker of the House When the Fifty-eighth Congress Convenes.

This was finally passed, but the vote was not unanimous.

A message from the senate announcing the passage of a resolution for the appointment of a committee to wait on the president and inform him that congress was ready to adjourn was received. Payne immediately asked unanimous consent that the chair appoint a committee of three to join the senate committee on this mission, and the chair appointed Payne, Grosvenor and Richardson.

At this moment—six minutes of 12, Speaker Henderson re-entered the hall and ascended the rostrum amid a great demonstration on the Republican side, which extended to the Democratic side and the galleries.

The applause grew into cheers, and the vast majority of Democrats rose with the Republicans to their feet to join in the demonstration.

Speaker Henderson was visibly affected when he delivered his valedictory. It was largely an appeal to patriotism and was greeted with an immense demonstration. When the house was finally declared adjourned sine die at 12:02 p. m., the whole membership united in singing the national anthem.

The closing session of the senate was enlivened by a debate on the Philippine tariff bill, in which Hoar declared that the United States was not capable of governing a people 8,000 miles away. Lodge made a vigorous reply, in which he said he believed the United States thoroughly able to deal with it, as they dealt with greater and mightier problems before.

Senators Allison and Jones were appointed a committed to meet a similar committee from the house to inform the president that the senate was ready to adjourn, and after the adoption of a resolution thanking Speaker Pro Tem Frye, the latter declared the senate adjourned at 12 o'clock.

The president was on hand early and went to his room in the capitol, where both the sundry civil and general deficiency appropriation bills were presented to him, and after their approval by the cabinet he signed them.

By 11:45 o'clock the president had signed all the bills presented to him, and a few minutes later the announcement of the fact was made in both the senate and the house.

When final adjournment had been taken President Roosevelt held an informal reception to senators and members of the house in his room.

Mr. Allison, chairman of the committee on appropriations, stated that the total appropriation for the present congress was $1,554,108,518, as compared with $1,440,489,438 for the Fifty-sixth congress. Included in this is the appropriation of $50,000,000 for the Panama canal, which, he said, accounts for nearly one-half of the increase.

MURDERED BY WOMAN.

Is Belief of Investigators Into Fate of Millionaire Burdick.

Buffalo, March 5.—District Attorney Coatsworth's office in the city hall was again the place around which interest in the Burdick murder mystery centered Wednesday. Superintendent Bull is quoted as saying an arrest—the arrest of a woman—may occur at any moment. The authorities are working as hard on the case as they did the first day after the tragedy was discovered.

"We think we could make an arrest now in safety," said Superintendent Bull, "but we prefer to wait, as we believe that certain evidence which we wish to gather will lead to successful results."

Less information is allowed to find its way out of the district attorney's office than heretofore. The publicity given the names of persons who have called at the office no doubt has prevented many who might be able to give some suggestion, relating some incident that they deem significant from imparting that information to the authorities. The district attorney announced through the press that those desiring to confer with him might do so by telephone, or if they called at the office their desire to conceal their identity would be respected. The result of this announcement, it is stated, has been to bring a flood of new material into the hands of the authorities. One of the new facts developed from this source brings into the case another mysterious carriage. It is considered to be of great importance. It was an ordinary coupe, drawn by a team of dark colored horses. It was halted in Ashland avenue, north of the block in which is situated the Burdick home. The hour was late and the carriage and its unusual movements attracted attention. That is why its presence a block away is regarded as significant. In fact, it is looked upon as one of the most important clues of that particular kind that has come to light since the investigation began.

One of the women who called the district attorney on the telephone gave the information. She is an invalid.

Superintendent Bull stated today that an arrest of a woman suspect may be made at any hour.

"Have you any tangible theory on which to base your belief that a woman committed the murder?" he was asked.

"Yes," he replied.

"What is the evidence?"

"I can't tell you."

"You believe that she had an appointment with Burdick on that night?"

"Yes."

"Are you certain the woman you suspect killed Burdick?"

"Almost."

"Is the woman a member of the Burdick household?"

"No."

"Is an arrest imminent?"

"I think so."

It was admitted by Chief Cusack that the two houses in the Elmwood section were searched by the police last Sunday.

THE MYSTERY OF GRASLOV.

By Ashley Towne. . . .

"This is strange," said the governor general, turning to the old man sternly. "How was it that you kept the young prince and did not disclose the fact that he was alive?"

"It was the prayer of his poor mother," said Papa Paulpoff. "I, too, have my story. On that day I was wandering by the river and had been fishing. I heard the cry of a child. I ran toward the sound and saw the man taking off its clothing. He cursed it and struck it and said that its voice would soon be stilled. I knew he meant to murder the child, and so I attacked him. I was a powerful man then, though not nearly so powerful as Vladimir—as the prince—is now. We fought, and I severely whipped him. I then took the child home with me and resolved to restore him to his parents, for I supposed he had been taken for revenge by enemies. When I saw the beautiful face of the princess, I knew it must be the boy's mother, and so I began to think who among the nobles who lived near the Kama had such a woman. I had heard of the beauty of the Princess Neslerov, and so I went to find her, leaving the child at the forge. I saw her at Graslov and asked to be alone with her. She ordered her women away. I showed her the portrait.

"'My picture!' she cried—'the picture that was on little Alexis! Oh, what have you to tell me?'

"I told her what had happened, how I had taken the boy and that he was safe and well in my house. She began to weep tears of mingled joy and sorrow.

"'Who are you? What is your name?' she asked.

"'Michael Paulpoff, princess,' I told her.

"'Oh, Michael Paulpoff,' she cried, and it seemed that her heart would break—'can I trust you?'

"'With anything, lady,' I answered. 'You are welcome to the life or death of Michael Paulpoff.'

"'Listen!' she whispered, turning each way to see that we were not watched. 'I am in the house of enemies. My husband, who was the heir of the duke, is dead. My little son would be the heir of this estate, but the duke prefers that his own younger son should inherit, and so they have plotted to destroy my child. Thank God for placing you on this earth, Michael Paulpoff! You were sent to save my boy. And now listen. Were he to return here or were it to be known that he was alive, no matter in what part of Russia he might be, they would manage in some way to kill him. Even now I tremble lest some spy overhear our words and reveal this truth. I do not wish to have you relinquish him and will give you something now, but you must never come to me. Some day I will come to you and claim my boy. Will you swear, Michael Paulpoff, to cherish my boy and preserve this secret?'

"I gave the promise, excellency, and I have kept it. But she also said, 'In case I die, Michael Paulpoff, guard my boy as you would your own, for I think he will be like his father—strong, but no match for the wicked and designing ones. Do not permit any one ever to know this truth.'

"I have obeyed, excellency. The boy was named Vladimir, and we soon came to love him as our own. He was, as the princess said, strong, and of an easy going, simple temperament. He grew up to help me in the forge. The princess did die, and so I held my tongue, as she bade me. But Vladimir—or Prince Alexis—was talented, and he learned to paint. He discovered one day the picture of his mother and became enamored of it. He wished to paint it, and I permitted him. Then one day Neslerov came and saw it. I was frightened, for I knew he would suspect, and I knew from his manner that we would soon hear from him again.

"We were charged with conspiracy, excellency, we who had honest hearts and had never wronged any one, and were bundled off to Siberia. We were sent to Tomsk, where no doubt Neslerov intended to kill the young man when he got an opportunity. Then one day that American named Denton came to our hut in Tivoloffsky. In some way he had learned of the picture. I do not know why he was interested in Vladimir, but he asked to see the picture and questioned me.

"'Paulpoff,' he said, 'Vladimir is not your son.'

"I shivered, for I did not know but he was a friend of the governor. But he said he was going to learn who Vladimir was, so I told him the story. He said that Vladimir could not be any worse off than at present, and he could secure the help of the government to restore the estate to him and punish Nicholas Neslerov. He took the picture, and some one came to our hut after that and whipped my wife to death. Vladimir swore vengeance, and today he has killed Jansky and Unsgethop."

"This is a strange story of cruelty and crime," said the governor general. "But, so far as you are concerned, I congratulate you, Prince Neslerov, duke of Graslov. And this faithful old man, whose life is almost run, how can I show my appreciation of what he has done for Russia? Paulpoff, you shall name your own reward, and it is yours."

"To live with Vladimir," said the old man simply.

"And this American! Where is he?"

"Wounded; lying in the house of a priest at Tivoloffsky," answered Vladimir, or, as he should now be called, Alexis.

"Nicholas Neslerov, what have you to say?" asked the governor general.

"It is a lie," said Nicholas.

"Your own face does not indicate it. I believe this is the truth. You are a prisoner! Call the officer of the guard!"

"I am here, your excellency!"

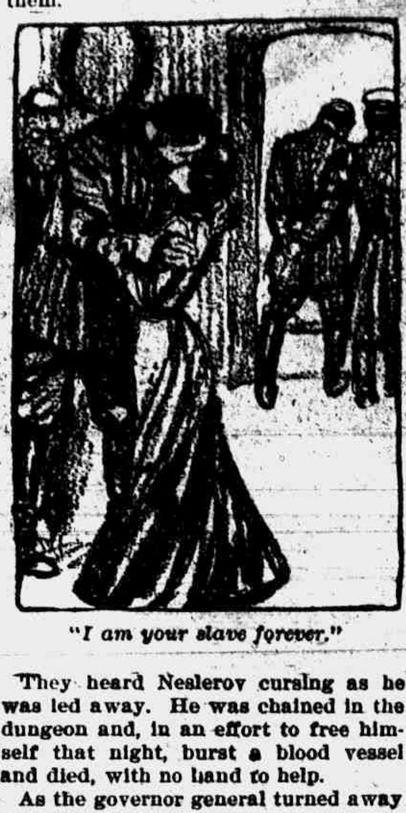
"This lieutenant," said Olga, "whose name I do not know, assisted me in freeing the prince from the dungeons under this palace. I told him he would be a captain."

"Your name?" said the governor general.

"Ormidoff."

"Captain Ormidoff, conduct this prisoner to the same dungeon in which he had confined the prince, and see that he is treated as becomes a murderer and enemy of Russia. This is enough, princess. I congratulate you."

The eyes of De Muloff were moist, and he took Olga's hands and pressed them.



"I am your slave forever."

They heard Neslerov cursing as he was led away. He was chained in the dungeon and, in an effort to free himself that night, burst a blood vessel and died, with no hand to help.

As the governor general turned away Olga smiled at Alexis.

"You are not quite my cousin, yet we are in a way related," she said. "I am glad that I have succeeded in giving you your own."

"I am your slave forever," he answered, stooping, with his great shoulders almost covering her, and his lips met hers—and she did not resist.

* * * * * * * *

In the house of the priest at Tivoloffsky Denton was recovering from his wounds. His first feeling as he gradually came to himself was of great weakness. A cool small hand was placed upon his brow, and he looked up into the face of Frances Gordon.

"Do you know me, Jack?"

"Yes, I know you, Frances. What has happened?"

"You have been ill. You were shot two weeks ago in the house where the Paulpoffs lived. Do you remember?"

"Yes—they came—did they kill poor old Paulpoff?"

"No. Vladimir—the one we know as Vladimir, but now the Duke of Graslov—came and killed them instead. He killed Jansky and Unsgethop and brought you here."

"Then it is proved already!" he said, staring.

"Yes. A princess, Olga Neslerov, cousin of his mother, having penetrated the veil of mystery, came to Tomsk to pursue her inquiries. She unmasked Nicholas Neslerov before the governor general, and he died that same night in the very cell in which Vladimir had been confined."

"I am glad," he said, with a sigh. "I knew he was not the son of the Paulpoffs, and, since you loved him, I did not wish you to marry an unknown. That was why I tried to restore him to his rank. I did not do it, but I am glad it was done—glad for him and for you."

"Poor Jack!" she said, nestling her head close to his. "Did you think I was going to marry him?"

"Yes; I thought you loved him. That was why I wanted to bring him to his own."

"Poor, noble Jack! Do you know who I am going to marry? There was never any love between Vladimir and me. I helped him, and he appreciated it. But I am going to marry the noblest, bravest, best man on this earth."

"I hope you will be happy, Frances."

"I know I shall be, Jack. And—can you forgive me, Jack, for all those ugly things I said? And will you love me—just the same as you used to—for it's you—you, Jack, I want to marry if—you want me."

"Frances!"

"That's right," said the soft voice of the old priest, "He is all right now. I say to you, Denton, that an angel hovered at your bedside, and it was not the angel of death. It was a strong, fine young woman."

"I nursed you, Jack, and papa has been here every day."

"And I'm here now," said the voice of Gordon. "Is he awake?"

"He is awake, but he hasn't said he wants to marry me," said Frances, with a laugh.

"He don't need to say it. Well, old chap, I'm glad you've pulled through, but I'm hanged if I think you would if it hadn't been for Frances."

"I am sure of it," he answered, "and I am going to spend all the rest of my life paying her for it."

She laughed—the happiest laugh of her life—and stooped and kissed him.

THE END.

BOTH APPOINTED.

Meginnity For Detroit Revenue Collector—Spalding Monroe's P. M.

Washington, March 4.—The president Tuesday afternoon sent to the senate the appointment of David Meginnity to be collector of internal revenue at Detroit, succeeding Charles Wright. Accompanying it was the appointment of General George Spalding for a second term as postmaster at Monroe. The appointments were confirmed.

Game Warden's Report.

Lansing, Mich., March 4.—The game warden reports twenty-eight arrests and twenty-three convictions for violations of the game and fish laws in February. Violators paid $325 in fines and costs, and seven seizures of illegal apparatus and fish were made. Reports indicate that deer and game birds generally are wintering well, notwithstanding the increased number of wolves reported from the upper peninsula.

Bug's Bite Bothers Doctors.

Mendon, Mich., March 4.—The condition of Oscar Newasaky, living seven miles east of this place, is puzzling the doctors. Several days ago he was bitten on the cheek by a bug, supposed to be a habitant of marshes known as a "winter bug" and quite rare, and since then has remained in a semi-conscious condition. He has no appetite and his face and neck continue swelling in spite of all that can be done.

An Ancient Foe

To health and happiness is Scrofula—as ugly as ever since time immemorial.

It causes bunches in the neck, disfigures the skin, inflames the mucous membrane, wastes the muscles, weakens the bones, reduces the power of resistance to disease and the capacity for recovery, and develops into consumption.

"A bunch appeared on the left side of my neck. It caused great pain, was lanced, and became a running sore. I went into a general decline. I was persuaded to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and when I had taken six bottles my neck was healed, and I have never had any trouble of the kind since." MRS. K. T. SNYDER, Troy, Ohio.

Hood's Sarsaparilla and Pills

will rid you of it, radically and permanently, as they have rid thousands.

Prevention of the Flight of Birds.

To prevent birds from flying without the barbarous and injurious system sometimes practiced of cutting their wings it will be found sufficient to tie together with a thread three or four of the largest feathers of one wing. This destroys the balance, the wings do not act symmetrically in the air, and flight is rendered impossible. Fowls, pigeons, etc., may be kept within bounds in this simple fashion.

Merely Misplaced.

"Captain," said the cabin boy, "is a thing lost when you know where it is?"

"No, you fool," answered the captain, who, being a wise man, abhorred frivolous questions.

"Well, sir, your silver teapot is at the bottom of the sea."

Exit cabin boy.—New York Times.

It Wouldn't Work.

"I found," said the man who frequents the races, "that I seemed to win every second day, so I made up my mind to take a fresh start and bet only every second day."

"And how did you come out?"

"Well, I think I must have started the scheme the wrong day."—Chicago Post.

The Kind of Judge He Wanted.

The story is told of an Irishwoman who tried to console her husband with the remark that he would have a fair trial and an upright judge. "Yerra, woman," replied her spouse, "what'd I want wid an upright judge? What I wants is a judge that'll lean a little."

Truth.

Truth is always consistent with itself and needs nothing to help it out. It is always near at hand, sits upon our lips and is ready to drop out before we are aware. A lie is troublesome and sets a man's invention upon the rack, and one trick needs a great many more to make it good.

Don't Do It "Just For Now."

Many young people form habits which cripple and handicap them for life by doing things "just for now." They let things drop wherever they happen to be "just for now," thinking that they will put the book, the tool, the letter or the article of clothing later where it belongs. When these young people grow up to manhood and womanhood, they find that the habit of putting things down anywhere "just for now" has become a tyrant that fills their lives with confusion and disorder. It takes no more time or effort to put a thing where it belongs in the first place than it does later, perhaps less, and the chances are that if you do not do so at the proper time you never will. Even if it costs you a little inconvenience at the moment to put everything in its proper place, to do everything at the proper time, the orderly and methodical habits which you cultivate in this way will increase your power and usefulness a hundredfold and may save you much trouble and mortification in the future.—Success.

Tried Hard.

At a trial at Auburn, Pa., one of the witnesses was a green countryman unused to the ways of the law, but quick, as it proved, to understand its principles. After a severe cross examination, says an exchange, the counsel for the government paused, and then, putting on a look of severity, exclaimed:

"Mr. Wilkins, has not an effort been made to induce you to tell a different story?"

"A different story from what I told, sir?"

"That is what I mean."

"Yes, sir; several persons have tried to get me to tell a different story from what I have told, but they couldn't."

"Now, sir, upon your oath, I wish to know who those persons are?"

"Well, I guess you've tried 'bout as hard as any of them."

He Left Them.

On the afternoon of Winslow's departure for Denver he was paying his bill, when he called Willie, hanging fascinatingly near.

"I want you," he said slowly, glaring into the boy's eyes, "to go upstairs and see if I left my toothbrush and comb in my room. Toothbrush and comb, toothbrush, toothbrush, toothbrush! Don't forget what I want, boy, and hurry, too. Got to get my train."

"N-no, sir-r; y-yes, sir," chattered Willie.

Winslow hung about impatiently, watching the clock like a hawk. Only two minutes to spare. Just as he caught up his bag to depart Willie came on a dead run across the floor, his face aglow with the sense of a lofty mission well performed.

"Yes, sir," he cried eagerly, "you left 'em!"

Winslow gazed at his empty handed emissary. His lips moved, but no words came forth. Then, with an inarticulate snarl, he stepped into the waiting carriage.—Kansas City Journal.

Fish Blowing Bait Up the Line.

How on earth or in the water fish contrive to blow large baits three or four yards up the line has yet to be explained. It is a common thing to find large slabs of pilchard bait used for pollack blown right up the line by large fish. This happens only when the pollack is itself hooked. I have recently found that large bass serve one the same trick, writes a correspondent, but in this case the bass, which is a more cunning fish than the pollack, sometimes gets away. To realize the immense difficulty of such a feat let any one put even a piece of paper on a hook and endeavor the blow it up the line with a bellows. Much more difficult it must be with the resistance of the water, and by what muscular action the fish contrives it I know not. I have searched the textbooks in vain for some hint on the subject.—London Opinion.

Terribly Bitten by Dogs.

Port Huron, Mich., March 4.—Thomas Sullivan of this city had an awful struggle with two infuriated dogs. They attacked him furiously, and before they could be driven away one end of his finger had been chewed off and he had also been bitten in other places. The dogs were being led around by a boy, but broke away from him.

Horticulture In St. Clair.

Port Huron, Mich., March 4.—Secretary C. E. Bassett of the State Horticultural society was here Tuesday and organized the St. Clair County Horticultural society, auxiliary to the state society.

YOU MAY SING

IF WELL AND HAPPY

If you feel the throb of pure blood in your veins and the thrill of life in your body you are fit for anything; you can laugh and sing, you are in condition for work or play and you will enjoy life.

PURE BLOOD MEANS LIFE

If you do not feel right, if you are troubled with a gloomy feeling, with tired and nervous spells, look out for the following symptoms:

Foul Breath, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Sallow Skin, Pimples and Blotches, Indigestion, Loss of Appetite, Pains in the Side, Lame Back, Pains Under Right Shoulder, Dizzy Spells, Nervousness, Neuralgia, Rheumatic Pains.

These signs show that your kidneys and liver are out of order, and if they are they will not carry off the impurities and you will feel bad and are liable to have a spell of sickness. Better attend to it at once.

KINYON'S BLOOD AND KIDNEY REMEDY

WILL SET YOU RIGHT

Mrs. Balch of Mishawaka, Ind., says: "I was very sick for over two months, troubled with gall stones and general kidney trouble, at times I screamed so with pain that people could hear me a block away. I had a number of doctors and they could do nothing for me. I kept getting worse, could not rest or sleep. In desperation I used Kinyon's Blood and Kidney Remedy. I took $2.00 worth and got well. For the last year I have enjoyed good health."

Proverbs

"When the butter won't come put a penny in the churn," is an old time dairy proverb. It often seems to work though no one has ever told why.

When mothers are worried because the children do not gain strength and flesh we say give them Scott's Emulsion.

It is like the penny in the milk because it works and because there is something astonishing about it.

Scott's Emulsion is simply a milk of pure cod liver oil with some hypophosphites especially prepared for delicate stomachs.

Children take to it naturally because they like the taste and the remedy takes just as naturally to the children because it is so perfectly adapted to their wants.

For all weak and pale and thin children Scott's Emulsion is the most satisfactory treatment.

We will send you the penny, i. e., a sample free.

Be sure that this picture in the form of a label is on the wrapper of every bottle of Emulsion you buy.

Sunday afternoon services at St. Peter's during Lent. Special course of sermons. General subject—"The Way of Salvation."

March 8th—"Jesus the Savior."

The Rector would earnestly commend this course of sermons. It is not more to be lamented than it is true that the great majority of Christian people have no proper understanding whatever of the Way of Salvation.

How to Become Interested in Current Events.

We all feel that if we could but get a glance at the great coronation scenes in London, the Oriental scenes of China, the battles in the Phillipines or in South Africa, and the many other startling events which are happening all over the world at this time, we could understand their importance forever.

Science has come to our aid in giving us pictures of these events, and still better, it has enabled energetic and fearless men to secure moving pictures of these events.

Mr. Lyman H. Howe, the recognized leader of moving picture exhibitors, has special facilities for securing the latest and best pictures of the great current events. He will show his superb and varied collection, on a much wider scale than ever before, at the New Bradley opera house Friday, March 13, 1903.

A Birthday Party.

The Coller house on Chicago street was a scene of a merry gathering Wednesday evening. Leon Coller entertained about forty of his friends in a very delightful manner, the occasion being the celebration of his birthday. A very pleasant evening was spent in progressive pedro and dancing.

The host was presented with a beautiful gold watch, a gift from his parents. The presentation was made by Lamont Austin. The guests further presented him with a rocking chair and other useful presents.

SCHOOL BOARD

Instructed to Accept the

GIFT OF MR. CARNEGIE

And Select a Site for the Building.

The school board called the tax payers together Tuesday evening to decide whether they should accept Mr. Carnegie's offer of eight thousand dollars for a library building. There was a good attendance. The correspondence between S. W. Anderson and Mr. Carnegie was read and Dr. Howell, for the school board, presented the subject to the voters.

C. A. Slayton offered a resolution in which it was agreed to accept the offer as stated, furnish a site, limited in valuation to fifteen hundred dollars. This was afterward amended to make the limit two thousand dollars, the school board selecting the site.

A vote was taken which resulted in seventy three votes being cast, all for this resolution.

This is a step in the right direction. It now remains for the school board to decide on a site on which to erect the building.

Mrs. Julia Ford.

Mrs. Julia Harris Ford was born at Silver Creek, N. Y., Dec. 5th, 1827. At the age of seven she came overland with her parents to Tecumseh at which place nearly her whole life has been spent.

She has often related that, after a journey of more than three weeks, as they drove into Tecumseh from the east, the first building that greeted their vision was the old Globe Mill which was then in process of erection. After ascending almost a perpendicular ascent, they came upon the old "Michigan House" and a little later the "Snell Tavern" and postoffice. These with a few log cabins constituted the town. She lived to see the forest gradually change to our beautiful village and watched with interest every new improvement.

She was united in marriage to Richard Ford on New Years eve, 1843. It may be of interest to many to know that they were the first couple married in the old Methodist church, Rev. John Bauchman, the first Methodist minister appointed to this charge, officiating.

Four children were born to them: Mrs. J. H. Darling, of Duluth, Minn.; A. H. Ford, of Milford, Mich.; Mrs. E. A. Putnam, of Tecumseh, and W. H. Ford, who died in 1894. These, together with three sisters, three grandchildren and one great-grandchild, are left to mourn her loss. She was converted at the age of 16 and always took a great interest in church work, having been a member of the Tecumseh M. E. choir for 30 years.

Nearly 16 years ago she went to Duluth, Minn., and has since made her home with her daughter. Though among strangers, she immediately became identified with the people of God and up to her last illness, her place in church and Sunday-school was seldom vacant. At the time of her death she was an honored member of the Eastern Star, having been their chaplain for the past 13 years, also a member of the D. A. R's.

Though she in a measure lost her identity with this people, her love for her old home and life long friends held a strong place in her affections as was manifested by her frequent visits. Thus another of our pioneer landmarks have passed away and soon there will be nothing but a written history to tell us of the early struggles of the founders of our beautiful home town.

"Hearts of Oak."

Tecumseh theatre goers knew well what to look forward to when "Hearts of Oak" was billed for this place and that they were not disappointed in their anticipation was well shown by the hearty applause at the close of each act.

Jas. A. Herne's originality in setting forth in characters true to life, another domestic play was at once recognized by those familiar with the companion play "Shore Acres." It was indeed pure as the ocean breezes and the first play seen here this season in which the character of a villain was eliminated.

Each actor characterized his part so well that the audience could not control their feelings. The baby was indeed no property article but a real, live, active character. The company was a good one and the scenery and costumes excellent. Grace Estelle Clarke as Crystal, James Heane as Terry Denmson, Edward Wonn as Ruby Garoway, little Leona Evans as Crystal and the baby were all that could be desired. "Hearts of Oak" will always be welcome.

Increasing Business.

It is wonderful how a little business will increase if it is properly attended to and kept up year after year. A few years ago Abner Wilson started raising a few seed potatoes, the next year he raised a few more, last year he raised more and this year he will have all he can do. The trade comes from Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Michigan, increasing each year. In fact this is but one example of the good times. No matter what a man goes into a moderate attention to the business will make success sure.

Tragedy Averted.

"Just in the nick of time our little boy was saved," writes Mrs. W. Watkins of Pleasant City, Ohio. Pneumonia had played sad havoc with him and a terrible cough set in besides. Doctors treated him, but he grew worse every day. At length we tried Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and our darling was saved. He's now sound and well." Everybody ought to know it's the only sure cure for coughs, colds and all lung diseases. Guaranteed by C. A. Wright, druggist. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free.

Surprise Party.

As our townsman, Mr. Wilson Matthews, reached the age of eighty years on Wednesday, March 4, 1903, his children and grandchildren and great grandchildren to the number of twenty repaired to his home to help him celebrate the occasion, which they did in a very enjoyable manner.

While the ladies prepared a fine dinner the stalwart grandsons visited the old gentleman's wood pile and left it in good condition for a number of weeks to come.

Mr. Matthews is a well preserved old man and lives on his farm which he purchased fifty-seven years ago and which he has cleared up and improved by many days and years of hard labor. And that he may be spared many years yet to enjoy the fruits of his labors are the wishes of his many friends.

Paine's Celery Compound

Cures

DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, AND STOMACH TROUBLES.

The tortures and evils of dyspepsia and indigestion are experienced by thousands at this time. The dyspeptic's train of evils may be enumerated as follows: feelings of dizziness, languor, nervousness, sleeplessness, headache, distension of the stomach, loss of flesh, difficult breathing, and the action of the heart is seriously affected.

All forms of dyspepsia are quickly banished by the use of Paine's Celery Compound. The use of this marvelous medicine allays the inflammation of the nerves centred about the stomach; it opens up the sewers of the body and removes all waste matter; it cleanses the blood; it makes new nerve fibre; it restores digestive power, and promotes bodily strength and activity. Mr. Fred. Ross, Clarendon, Iowa, briefly writes about his happy experience with Paine's Celery Compound as follows:—

"It gives me great pleasure to testify to the merits of Paine's Celery Compound. I can candidly and honestly say it is the best medicine in the world. Two years ago I was suffering from indigestion and nervousness, and was so run down that I could hardly walk without help. I used two bottles of Paine's Celery Compound and got better almost from the first dose, and have had no use for medicine since. I was completely cured."

IT IS SERIOUS.

Some Tecumseh People Fail to Realize the Seriousness.

The constant aching of a bad back,
The weariness, the tired feeling,
The pains and aches of kidney ills
Are serious—if neglected.
Dangerous urinary troubles follow.

A Tecumseh citizen shows you how to avoid them.

Mr. F. A. Ferguson, tinsmith, residing in the northwestern section of Tecumseh, says: "I had symptoms of kidney trouble. The kidney secretions were very irregular and at times too frequent and highly colored. Having seen so many cases of severe kidney trouble I thought it wise to do something at once, so I got a box of Doan's Kidney Pills at C. A. Wright's drug store and took them. I began to improve from the very start and continued to do so. I emphatically declare Doan's Kidney Pills to be up to the representations made for them."

For sale by all dealers: Price 50 cents per box. Foster-Milburn company, Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

On account of relatives living at a distance the time of the funeral has not yet been decided upon but it is likely to take place Saturday at one o'clock at the house.

READ IT THROUGH.

'Twould Spoil this Story to Tell it in the Hadlines.

To use an eighteenth century phrase, this is an "o'er true tale." Having happened in a small Virginia town in the winter of 1902, it is a story very much of the present. Up to a short time ago Mrs. John E. Harmon, of Melta Station, Va., had no personal knowledge of the rare curative properties of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. "Last January," she says, "my baby took a dreadful cold and at one time I feared she would have pneumonia, but one of my neighbors told me how this remedy had cured her little boy and I began giving it to my baby at once and it soon cured her. I heartily thank the manufacturers of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for placing so great a cure within my reach. I cannot recommend it too highly or say too much in its favor. I hope all who read this will try it and be convinced as I was." For sale by all druggists.

HAVE THEY PERISHED?

Still No Word From Fishermen Caught on the Ice Flos.

Menominee, Mich., March 5.—No news has yet been heard from the eight missing fishermen who are supposed to have been carried out on the big ice floe, and their families are almost distracted. Only one or two things is now possible—the men may have gotten ashore somewhere, where they could get no word to their friends, or they have perished on the ice.

The fish dealers at Escanaba were wired yesterday to notify all fishermen on that part of the bay to keep a good lookout for any signs of men on ice. Word has also been sent along both shores and a close watch is being kept. Rescuing parties are searching for signs of the missing men.

An Important Transaction.

Ann Arbor, Mich., March 5.—A very important transaction took place in this city yesterday afternoon, when the 400-acre stock farm known as Spring Brook farm, long famous for its high class shorthorn cattle and Merino sheep, was sold by W. E. Boyden to Herbert W. Mumford of Urbana, Ill., professor of animal husbandry in the University of Illinois, and chief in animal husbandry of the Illinois state experiment station. He contemplates establishing a herd of shorthorns that will be a credit to the farm and the state.

Carried Her Wounded Husband.

Holland, Mich., March 5.—While Wesley Fletcher and his wife, of Robinson, were searching for a bee tree their dog started a rabbit. Fletcher went in pursuit, and as he tried to mount a stump his gun hammers caught on a bush and the gun was discharged. Mrs. Fletcher heard his yell, ran to him and found him unconscious, with his left arm badly mangled and the left side of his face blown away. The poor woman carried and dragged her husband nearly half a mile toward their home before she could secure help.

Trolley Killed an Old Man.

Mt. Clemens, Mich., March 5.—The first car out of Detroit Wednesday morning on the Rapid Railway ran over and instantly killed an old man named Ginas at the car barns at Roseville. The old man was a little deaf and not hearing the car stepped in front of it. Ginas was a resident of that vicinity and had caused the car men considerable uneasiness of late. He had been warned many times to keep off the track.

Not Long at Liberty.

Bay City, Mich., March 5.—Edward Alore, released from the Detroit house of correction last Saturday, was arrested in West Bay City by Officer Harry Anderson on a charge of attempted criminal assault, his alleged victim being his sister, Mrs. Louisa Druior.

Fatal Blow on Head.

Petoskey, Mich., March 5.—Frank Davis, proprietor of the Eagle Island resort on Walloon lake, was struck by the pole of a windlass he was tending while moving a building, and his head was so badly injured that no hope is entertained of his recovery. He leaves a widow and daughter.

NOT TRUE HEROISM

To "Grin and Bear" Rheumatism a Relic of the Past.

Grit your teeth a minute while you listen to this story. If you have Rheumatism it is because you have an excess of Uric acid, which has clogged your blood, the same as floating ice does a river, only the Uric acid poisons in addition. You cannot be freed from Rheumatism until this Uric acid is dispelled. It can be dispelled because we have done it and are doing it every day with Athlophoros.

We have found the action the quickest when the pain is the greatest.

With half a bottle and in twenty-four hours Athlophoros has enabled men to get out of bed and go to work. There is no need to stand pain.

We say it advisedly. One bottle of Athlophoros will show if it will act on you. If it does you good you will thank us for belittling your heroism. If it does not do you good we hold ourselves ready to give your case special consideration and advice without charge.

The Athlophoros Co., New Haven, Conn., will send a bottle for one dollar if your druggist doesn't keep it.

GERMANS NOT IN IT

American Goods Receive Preference in Foreign Markets.

WON'T GUARANTEE SALARIES

Foreign Nation Depends Too Much on Catalogues — Trade Paper Urges Kaiser's Subjects to Abandon "Penny Wise Pound Foolish" Policy.

Berlin, March 7.—Export, a trade paper devoted to extending German foreign trade, devotes a series of articles to studying the methods by which American goods are supplanting German goods in foreign markets. The articles consist largely of letters from Germans living in Mexico, Venezuela, Brazil and Australia.

The writers explain that the German houses are being beaten because they are unwilling to guarantee agents fixed salaries, as the Americans do, and also because they depend on sending out catalogues, whereas the Americans keep stocks of goods in established agencies, where buyers are able to purchase after seeing the goods, and therefore prefer to deal with Americans. The German agents, it is added, are largely taking service with American houses because of the better terms offered them and owing to their handling exclusive American wares.

Export urges the German manufacturers to abandon their "pennywise pound foolish policy" and give their agents decent, fixed salaries, so as to enable them to withstand the "flattering offers of their American competitors," adding:

"This is all the more important since American competition in the world's markets will evidently grow keener during the next ten years."

Appeal From Helen Keller.

Boston, March 7.—Miss Helen Keller, who, although deaf, dumb and blind, is a student at Radcliffe college, addressed through an attendant, the legislative committee on education Friday in behalf of a bill for the relief of the adult blind. Her message to the committee was a feeling one and she urged all possible aid to her fellow unfortunates. She said that the blind did not need the higher education, but did require help in order to take their places in the industrial world.

Achieved Another Success.

Santo Domingo, March 7.—United States Minister Powell has achieved another success in obtaining from the Dominican government the withdrawal of the decree lowering the port charges which seriously affected the interests of the Clyde steamship line. Minister Powell has steadfastly maintained that injustice was being shown to American interests, and he demanded that the government should faithfully keep its engagements.

Wants $100,000 For His Warnings.

Washington, March 7.—A Swede who gave his name as Z. Berg of Providence, R. I., tried for an hour to see the president. Berg said several years ago he had informed the United States government that the Spaniards intended to blow up one of the battleships, and he wanted the president to see to it that he received $100,000 for his information. Berg was persuaded to return to Providence and there place his claim in the hands of a lawyer.

Cuban Senator Denounces Treaty.

Havana, March 7.—The reciprocity treaty was up in the senate again Friday and the debate was adjourned until today. In the course of the afternoon's debate Senor Sanguily denounced the treaty as a scheme on the part of the United States, designed to keep European commerce out of Cuba in order that the former country might secure the entire commercial as well as the political control of the island.

He has not designated the date of his visit. An effort will be made to have him officiate at the laying of the cornerstone of the new railway Y. M. C. A. building.

Likely to Plead Insanity.

Hamilton, O., March 7.—Alfred A. Knapp, the self-confessed murderer, was visited yesterday by his attorneys from Cincinnati, and they say they cannot get ready for the preliminary hearing this week. There is no doubt whatever about the defense pleading insanity, and the first movement will be for an inquest.

NARROWLY ESCAPED DEATH

Bridge Gave Way on Which They Stood—Grand River on a Rampage—Houses Half Submerged—Dynamite Fails to Release Ice Gorges.

Grand Rapids, Mich., March 9.—Grand river rose rapidly Saturday night and Sunday and at 7 o'clock last night was within a foot of the high mark, the depth in the rapids here measuring more than twelve feet.

Late Saturday night the temporary superstructure of the new steel bridge of the street railway company at North Park was carried away and two steel caissons were torn out and swept down stream. Shortly before 1 o'clock Sunday afternoon three sections of the North Park wagon bridge gave way and were carried down in the rushing torrent. About twenty inmates of the Michigan Soldiers' home were upon the bridge near the west end watching the rushing waters when the crash came. They were warned by the cracking timbers and made a rush for land. But for timely assistance half a dozen of them would have been hurled into the river with the wrecked bridge. As it was, they were compelled to leap a three-foot chasm at the bridge end to escape. A man in a carriage barely got across by lashing his horse into a mad gallop.

Low lands on the west side, in the south part of the city, are under water and a number of houses are isolated. Basements of business houses along the river are flooded by water backing up the sewers.

Ionia, Mich., March 9.—The raging Grand river threatens to break its record of 1893 at this point. Following the destruction of the Wager dam at 9 o'clock Saturday night, the water came up a foot before morning. It is thought the limit has about been reached, though it is still getting higher in the big pocket east of Steele street. The water is held back also on the east high water road.

When the sudden rise began Saturday evening a hasty exit was begun by the residents of Bayard's flats, and their houses are now half submerged in water, while boats were used for Sunday visiting among the neighbors. There has been fear that the ice would damage the two bridges, but it has been following a roundabout channel and has safely passed the town. One gorge in the middle of the river between the bridges has foiled all efforts of dynamiters. It is still intact, and the high water roads have been lined with people watching the operations and the passing of the ice floes.

Violence Breaks Out Anew at Waterbury, Conn.

MASKED MEN ATTACK A CAR

Policeman Murdered and Motorman and Conductor Hurt—Perpetrators of the Deed Escape the Police—Motorman Was Chased.

Waterbury, Conn., March 9.—Violence in its worst form has broken out anew in Waterbury as a result of the high feeling in connection with the strike of motormen and conductors of the Connecticut Railway and Lighting company. This time it is murder, and Policeman Paul Mendlesohn is the victim. John W. Chambers, a non-union motorman, is shot and his whereabouts are unknown, and his conductor, G. Keberndorfer, was pounded almost into insensibility.

The scene of the crime was at Forest Park, the terminus of the North Main street line. The spot is an isolated one and when the car reached the end of the line last night the crew made preparations for the return trip. Immediately after the conductor turned the trolley the motorman reversed his levers, eight masked men sprang from the bushes by the roadside, entered the car and discharged their revolvers, every man being armed.

Officer Mendelsohn fell at the first report, and, as a later examination showed, the first shot was fatal, having pierced his heart. The motorman was also hit and leaped from his car with a cry of pain. Some of the men followed him, while the remainder turned their attention to the conductor. He was thrown to the floor of the car and pounded and kicked until he was almost unconscious. The men then left him and joined their companions outside.

From this point in the attack their actions are wrapped in mystery and are causing considerable apprehension. Weberndorfer saw his motorman leap from the car when he was shot, and he also saw him followed by the murderers. Whether he dropped or whether he was carried off by the attacking party cannot be learned.

Weberndorfer, hardly able to stand, went to the controler and started the car back toward the city with the dead officer.

An alarm was immediately sent around the city by the police and in a few moments the entire detective department, accompanied by the thirteen policemen, went to the scene of the murder. A thorough search was made for Chambers, but at midnight he had not been found. Despite the diligent search of the policemen and detectives not a clue could be found as to the perpetrators of the murder.

Later.—Early this morning the searching officers came upon Motorman Chambers. His head was covered with blood, but it was found that he had not been struck with a bullet, but had been pounded upon the head with the butt end of a revolver.

Captain Coffin said that this early start was in order to "Americanize the America." "You know the ship before had a Norwegian captain and crew," he said. "Now every man on board will be an American citizen."

Pope Leo was loudly acclaimed by pilgrims.

HOOKER THE CHOICE

Of Republicans For Justice of the Supreme Court.

IN CONVENTION AT DETROIT

Peter White and Loyal E. Knappen Named For Regents—Resolution Indosing Primary Election Adopted—Banquet in Evening.

For Justice of the Supreme Court—
FRANK A. HOOKER of Eaton.
For Regent of the U. of M.—
PETER WHITE of Marquette.
LOYAL E. KNAPPEN of Kent.

Detroit, Mich., March 7.—After one of the bitterest and most spectacular convention fights held in Detroit in recent years, Hon. Frank A. Hooker was chosen by the Republican state convention Friday as the party candidate for justice of the supreme court to succeed himself. It took nine consecutive hours to arrive at a final ballot, and when Hooker won out on the sevents, his nomination was made unanimous. Peter White of Marquette was nominated as the party candidate for regent of the state university on the first ballot. A general primary election bill was indorsed.

It was long after the oratorical feast had been digested and the merriment of the occasion had begun to wear off when a nominee had been chosen and the committee on resolutions made its report. This committee was composed of twelve men as thoroughly opposed to a real general primary election law as the hottest anti could wish. They were State Senators Bangham, Sleeper and Woodman; ex-Senators J. O. Murfin, W. P. Savage, Ira T. Sayre and G. H. Prescott; D. E. Alward, secretary of the state central Republican committee; Ignatius Salliotte of Ecorse; J. D. Brooker and John Vanderwert, and R. A. Douglass, representing the upper peninsula. Secretary Alward drafted the resolutions, which were presented by Senator Bangham, and which did not include any mention, good, bad or indifferent, to primary election reform.

Theodore M. Joslyn of Adrian had lost no time in submitting an amendment to the resolutions committee's report, to insert a clause reading as follows:

"It is the sentiment of this convention that a general primary election law, covering the entire state, be enacted by the legislature."

Considerable excitement ensued, in which several prominent politicians voiced their sentiments for and against primary election law, but finally terminated in the adoption of the resolution, including the following:

"We, the Republicans of Michigan, in judicial convention assembled, reaffirm our allegiance to the principles and policies of the Republican party.

"We cordially indorse the patriotic, courageous and wise policy of President Theodore Roosevelt and hereby renew our pledge to support and our expressions of confidence in him and his administration.

"We congratulate the people of Michigan on the election of the entire state ticket last fall and on the economical administration of state affairs under Governor Aaron T. Bliss.

"The glory in the national fame of Michigan's supreme court and in its continued strength and probity.

"We commend our great state university to the continual support, confidence and esteem of the people."

The choosing of candidates took place in the afternoon. Immediately following the adoption of the committee report on credentials, W. W. Wedemeyer of Ann Arbor rose and presented the name of Judge E. D. Kinne of Ann Arbor as candidate to succeed Justice Hooker on the supreme bench. Subsequently Colonel Irish of Kalamazoo presented Dallas Bondman of his town as a candidate; Colgrove of Hastings nominated Justice Hooker; Chaddock of Ionia put F. D. M. Davis' name in nomination; Speaker Carton of the state legislature nominated Judge R. C. Ostrander; Chapman of Owosso nominated Peter F. Dodd.

Daniel C. Chamberlain of Muskegon made the nominating speech for Judge A. B. McAlvay, and Devere Hall of Bay City made the final nomination in favor of T. F. Shepard of Bay City.

Balloting followed. Hooker kept the lead, with Kinne a close second, but before the seventh ballot was counted motion was made that Hooker's nomination be made unanimous. It was carried.

The nominations for regent were made without much ceremony and in a hurry. It was evident at the start that the choice lay between Peter White of Marquette and William A. Butler, Jr., of Detroit. Five names were put in nomination; the other three being C. M. Burton, Loyal E. Knappen and George A. Farr, the present regent. White and Knappen were nominated.

A well regulated and elaborate cuisine proved a most attractive feature at the annual banquet of the Michigan club, and in this respect the gathering eclipsed all efforts of former years. The banquet was held in the main dining-room of the Cadillac last evening and demonstrated the advantages of such environment.

Many notables of state and national prominence were gathered around the festive board, including General Leonard M. Wood of Cuban fame; Senators Alger and Burrows of Michigan, Gallinger of New Hampshire and ex-Senator Thurston of Nebraska.

William Alden Smith presided as toastmaster.

General Wood, Senator Gallinger and ex-Senator Thurston were the speakers of the occasion.

Danger of Colds and Grip.

The greatest danger from colds and grip is their resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used, however, and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken, all danger will be avoided. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for these diseases we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia, which shows conclusively that it is a certain preventive of that dangerous disease. It will cure a cold or an attack of the grip in less time than any other treatment. It is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution, and assisting nature in doing its work. A SUCCESSFUL DEVICE

[Original.]

The mind considered as a machine sometimes reminds one of an engine. Turn a wheel, and the thing will go forward rapidly; turn another, and it will go backward just as fast.

Brandon Somers was in hard luck. He was out of a job, with a wife and two children, nothing to eat and liable at any moment to be turned out of doors. His troubles worked upon his mind, turned a mental wheel, and he began to think of ending his sufferings by suicide. When he once got to thinking in this direction, there seemed to be no hope for him. Instead of trying to regain his grip on the world he occupied himself considering the best means by which to get out of it. He decided on using a pistol; but, having none and no money with which to buy one, he went to his most intimate friend, Noel Willard, and asked him for a small loan.

Willard saw that Somers was in the slough of despond and endeavored to argue him out of it. He told the unfortunate man to dig on a railroad, fire on a locomotive, split wood, anything to earn a dollar and relieve the strain on his brain by working his muscles. It was all in vain. Somers was incapable of being stimulated in that way. Willard suspected what he wanted money for. He resolved to satisfy his demand.

"Very well," he said; "the best thing you can do is to blow out your brains. This evening at 8 o'clock go to the wood just across the bridge on the Mertonville turnpike, and at the foot of the first telegraph pole you will find a loaded revolver. Take it, go into the wood and finish the job."

Somers was a trifle startled at this ready acceptance of an intention he had not divulged, but the effect was only instantaneous. He left Willard without a word, merely casting a glance at him as he passed out of the door. Willard had resumed his work as if nothing unusual had happened.

At 8 o'clock the same evening the would be suicide walked down the Mertonville road, stood for a moment on the bridge looking mournfully back in the direction of his home, then passed on to the telegraph pole, found the revolver and started for the wood. Reaching a secluded spot, he stopped, examined the weapon, saw that the chambers were filled and stood looking at vacancy, a picture of despair.

"Throw up your hands!" cried a rough voice from behind a tree.

Now, Somers had come to the wood for the express purpose of taking his life. Here was a chance to save himself the trouble of doing so. He had only to disobey the order and he would be killed, or if this was not sufficient he could raise his revolver and the man who was "holding him up" must shoot him or be shot himself. Nevertheless he was so startled, so taken aback, at the sudden danger that he dropped his pistol and his hands went up with astonishing rapidity. A masked man, covering him with an enormous revolver and an ugly looking knife in his left hand, advanced from behind a tree.

"Shell out!"

"I haven't a cent."

There was a disagreeable click in the threatening weapon. "No foolin' or I'll let daylight into you. Throw yer valybles on the ground!"

"I have no valuables."

A bullet whistled within a few inches of Somers' ear.

"For heaven's sake, hold on there!"

Before the last word was out another ball was fired past the other ear. Somers, who a few moments before was on the eve of suicide, was trembling like a leaf at the prospect of death. His assailant raised his knife and made a step forward, then another step and another. There is nothing more dreadful looking than cold steel coming to be buried in one's vitals. The muzzles of guns are not nearly so terrifying. Somers looked at the long polished blade with abject terror.

"Don't kill me!" he pleaded.

"I'll kill you as sure as death if you don't throw down what you've got."

"Search me."

"If I found nothin', I'd kill you anyway. Turn yer back. You needn't see this blade afore it bores you."

Too terrified to face death, Somers turned his back. There were a few moments of silence, which seemed hours, at the end of which the strain was too great to be borne longer, and, turning, he sank on his knees and begged piteously for his life.

The robber pulled off his mask.

"Noel Willard!"

"Yes, Noel Willard. I saw that something must be done to wrest your mind from the vise that held it and have succeeded in doing it. Come. Tomorrow morning you are to go to work as porter in the warehouse of a friend of mine. As soon as you have fully recovered your grip on yourself we will find something better for you."

"I'm cured," said Somers.

"I trust you are, but to guard against a relapse I will advance your salary. Take this home to your wife."

Handing Somers a ten dollar bill, Willard led the way from the wood and toward the town.

When the husband and father entered his home and his wife saw that something had occurred to lift the cloud she had been so long dreading, there was great relief, and when the oldest boy was sent out to buy a supper there was joy unutterable.

The muscular work of a porter was for a time a great benefit to Somers, whose mind had been overstrained. Once started on a rising course, he soon found a position of trust and profit and is now well off. His wife never knew the story of how his friend had rescued him from suicide and turned his brain into a healthy channel.

WHEN THE TUNE CHANGED

[Copyright, 1902, by A. S. Richardson.]

She was gazing at the shop windows, still brave in their holiday dressing. She was not interested in the display, but it gave the man a chance to study her profile. Few girls could stand the scrutiny so well, and she knew it.

The man was looking at her—yes, but moodily rather than admiringly. He had been under the spell of her beauty for six months. He knew every line of the perfect profile. He could describe every play of her features, every subtle feminine trick that had drawn him to her. He spoke abruptly.

"I ought to go"—

She quickened her steps.

"I beg pardon. It is such a perfect day that I had forgotten you were due at the office at half past 1."

He continued to saunter slowly up the avenue, and she fell back in step with him.

"I was not thinking of the office"—

"No?"

"I was thinking of—Richmond—and—another girl."

So there was another girl! He had never spoken of her before.

"She is expecting me. I promised I would come back the first of the year, and but for you I should have gone long ago."

"I am not aware that I have offered you—any—apples."

They had turned a corner mechanically and were following a staid residence street toward the river.

"No; that is just it. The modern Eve does not offer literal fruit. The temptation is so idealized that a man does not realize he has fallen until the gates of paradise swing shut upon him."

"I don't understand"—

"No, because you don't know—the other girl. And I am not sure that I can make it clear to you. She"— He hesitated. The eternal feminine was aroused.

"Is she like me?"

"No, not at all. She is not—beautiful."

The girl at his side smiled into the heart of the violets, and when she glanced up once more he was gazing steadfastly toward the mass of rigging and funnels that marked the river's edge. She wondered if he knew where they were going.

"And she does not make me hate myself, as you do."

Really this was becoming interesting! He was so ingenuous, this southern chap who wore his heart on the most conspicuous point of his overcoat sleeve.

"She is not tall, and she does not wear those long, trailing skirts that look so well on you. Her hair is neither light nor dark. I don't believe I could tell its exact color. But her eyes—they're gray, and such a gray! They seem to say with her lips, 'I will wait for you—forever!'"

"Yes; we all say that," she said, almost mockingly. "Usually it is so effective."

He turned on her fiercely.

"But you don't all mean it! How many times have you said it?"

"My dear boy, that is such a personal question!"

"But you would consider it your right to ask me that?"

"Not at all. I know the world too well to ask foolish questions."

"There it is again, that cynicism, that utter lack of faith which makes me hate myself for loving you. You are so unworthy! I believe you are the sort of woman a man might love to madness and then—forget."

Her lip curled, half in scorn, half in amusement, at his impetuosity.

"And she?"

"A man could never forget her, no matter to what heights he might rise or how low he might sink."

"And yet you say she is not beautiful?"

"Not as the world and Sunday papers picture beauty."

The neighborhood was more squalid. On the next corner they came upon a street piano emitting ragtime melody. A group of tenement children were dancing about it. They slowed up and watched the scene. The man tossed the Italian a coin. The itinerant musician pushed a lever, and the air changed.

The man and the girl had crossed to the opposite corner, but as the first bar of the new tune floated toward them the young fellow stopped suddenly. His face softened, the strained expression faded from his eyes, and he gazed with yearning toward the sails and rigging now two short blocks beyond.

"Then it's sing one song of my old Kentucky home!" hummed a street urchin in harmony with the piano. The man drew a long, full breath. A hansom dashed around the corner. He hailed the driver and helped the girl into the vehicle.

"I've been very thoughtless to let you walk so far." His voice was low and rich. It thrilled the girl, who made room for him beside her. "No; I am walking back."

"Shall you be up this evening?"

"No; I think not. There are so many others you will hardly miss me—and"

"Yes?"

"I am going back to Richmond—and—her. Goodby."

The driver snapped his whip, and the horse plunged forward. The girl leaned back with a sigh. Perhaps it was worth while, after all, to be the sort of woman a man would never forget, even if one were not beautiful.

Then she drew out her calling list, signaled the driver, issued a curt order and looked in the tiny mirror on her right to make sure that her picture hat was at the correct angle.

The Hopping Rheumatism.

"Yes," said the old man, "'peared lak he wuz give over inter de han's er Satan, en Satan 'flicted him wid de hoppin' rheumatism. Fust it wuz in one place, en den it wuz another, but he went ter prayin' ter be relieve' of it, en one day, whilst it wuz a-hoppin' fum one j'int ter another, it hopped into his wooden leg, an' he pulled off de leg an' th'owed it in de fire, en it en de rheumatism wuz teetotally consumed."—Atlanta Constitution.

A Generous Empress.

It is said that one morning at breakfast a general related to the emperor the misfortunes of a brother officer who "because he had not 15,000 francs must be dishonored." While the emperor questioned further particulars Eugenie flew to her room and, returning with a package of banknotes, said, "Take them, general, and never tell me his name." And his name the generous empress never knew.

Get the Most Out of Your Food

You don't and can't if your stomach is weak. A weak stomach does not digest all that is ordinarily taken into it. It gets tired easily, and what it fails to digest is wasted.

Among the signs of a weak stomach are uneasiness after eating, fits of nervous headache, and disagreeable belching.

"I have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla at different times for stomach troubles, and a run down condition of the system, and have been greatly benefited by its use. I would not be without it in my family. I am troubled especially in summer with weak stomach and nausea and find Hood's Sarsaparilla invaluable." E. B. HICKMAN, W. Chester, Pa.

Hood's Sarsaparilla and Pills

Strengthen and tone the stomach and the whole digestive system.

Minnie Hauck as a Drummer.

Mme. Minnie Hauck was once singing at the Berlin court opera in Donizetti's "Daughter of the Regiment." Emperor William I., after the opera, called her into his presence and told her she had sung very nicely, but that her drumming—as the Daughter of the Regiment she had to play the drum—was very bad. Next morning a drum major of the First Grenadier regiment called at her hotel and said he had come to give her a drum lesson. The diva was bound to accept the instruction and learned the whole art of drumming in a couple of dozen lessons. Then the kaiser sent to ask how she was getting on, and, hearing that she had made excellent progress, he commanded a performance of "A Daughter of the Regiment." Mme. Hauck acquitted herself excellently in the drumming scene, and the kaiser complimented her warmly, sending her next day a real official military drum with a silver plate and inscription.

An Interrupted Story.

Captain Williams, a jovial Irishman, known everywhere as "Bob," used to be a favorite in Dublin society many years ago. His stories were famous. Give him an incident, and he would set it out to the general admiration.

One evening he went into the club and there began telling the true tale of rescuing a lady and her daughters from a dangerous situation into which their spirited horses had brought them.

"I quieted the ladies," said he, "and I quieted the horses. And the gratitude of the ladies! Me boys, I shouldn't be surprised if her ladyship left me"—

At that moment a little Irish page in livery appeared.

"Sir," said he, "Lady Arnold says she lost her purse when yez helped her out of the carriage, and plaze, she says, do yez know anything about it?"

The captain's story was never finished.

Dodging an Interview.

A young reporter once called to interview Senator Quay and found him reading. After formal greetings had been exchanged the senator said: "Do you play poker? Of course you do once in awhile. Then you will find this one of the best poker stories you ever saw," handing the newspaper man a book. The reporter out of politeness read a page. "Ah," said the senator, "I see you are interested. Take the book along and read it at your leisure. Good evening." And the dazed young journalist was out on the sidewalk before he could recover his breath.

Life Guards.

The Life Guards are two regiments of cavalry forming part of the British household troops. They are gallant soldiers, and every loyal British heart is proud of them. Not only the King's household, but yours, ours, everybody's should have its life guards. The need of them is especially great when the greatest foes of life, diseases, find allies in the very elements, as cold, influenza, catarrh, the grip and pneumonia do in the stormy month of March. The best way that we know of to guard against these diseases is to strengthen the system with Hood's Sarsaparilla—the greatest of all life guards. It removes the conditions in which these diseases make their most successful attack, gives vigor and tone to all the vital organs and functions, and imparts a genial warmth to the blood. Remember the weaker the system the greater the exposure to disease. Hood's Sarsaparilla makes the system strong.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, March 9, 1903.

The past week has seen the expiration of the fifty-seventh Congress and the inauguration of the fifty-eighth, at least in so far as the Senate is concerned, that body having organized and begun the special session for which it was called on March 5th. The closing hours of the fifty-seventh Congress were accompanied by the usual rush and bustle and by more than ordinary partisan bitterness. The long republican filibuster on the Statehood bill in the Senate was reciprocated by the democrats who talked to death the Aldrich Financial bill and the Philippine tariff bill. In the House the democrats maintained a constant filibuster during the last seven days of the session, occasioned by the unseating of Representative Butler, of Missouri, in favor of Mr. Wagoner, the republican contestant. On the night before adjournment the House sat until 4 a. m. and the Senate until 2 a. m. in the effort to complete the great appropriation bills.

When the hour of adjournment came, however, party strife was forgotten and the democrats joined with the republicans in a resolution of thanks to Speaker Henderson for his long and faithful service and when the hammer fell and the House was declared adjourned the members, nearly 400 strong, gave vent to their feelings by singing America and Auld Lang Syne. As is usual with the Senate, the closing hours were more decorous. During the last hour Senator Mason delivered his valedictory, a logical continuation of the free lance position he has always occupied in the Senate and admonished his colleagues to abandon the policy of filibustering and to restore to the Filipinos their absolute freedom. The usual resolution of thanks to Senator Frye for his fair and efficient services as President pro tem. was adopted and, wishing his colleagues God speed, Mr. Frye declared the Senate adjourned. The members of the Cabinet occupied places on the floor of the Senate and the President came to the Capitol and occupied the President's room where, after adjournment, he held a reception to the Senators and newspapermen.

The Senate chamber resembled a flower garden on the noon of the 5th when seventeen re-elected senators renewed their oath of office and ten new members were sworn in, three of the newly elected senators having failed to reach Washington in time for the occasion. As the Senators approached the rostrum to be sworn their friends in the galleries applauded heartily, Senators Gorman, of Maryland, and Hopkins, of Illinois, receiving the most extensive applause. Senator Gorman's desk and chair and surrounding desks were covered with the magnificent bouquets and floral designs sent to the Maryland senator and Senator Hopkins was almost as well remembered. Personal animosities were forgotten for the occasion and Senator Fairbanks approached the rostrum leaning on the arm of Senator Beveridge, Senator Foraker leaning on the arm of Mr. Hanna, Senator Newlands on the arm of Mr. Stewart, Senator Long on the arm of Senator Burton and so on.

A meeting of the republican steering committee has been held at which it was determined to press the Panama Canal treaty for ratification before the Cuban treaty, it being argued that Senator Morgan would debate at length the Cuban convention with a view to preventing consideration of the Colombian agreement, whereas, if the Colombian treaty were first disposed of, Mr. Morgan would assist in the ratification of Cuban arrangement. Senator Morgan tells your correspondent that he is not filibustering on the Panama Canal treaty and is conscientiously opposing it in its present form and the republican leaders believe in his sincerity but they say that to amend as Mr. Morgan desires the treaty negotiated would jeopardize the whole negotiation.

At a caucus of the democrats held last week Senator Gorman was elected chairman which is equivalent to making him the democratic leader. He says that he will inaugurate a progressive policy among the democrats quite different from the passive opposition led by Senator Jones, of Arkansas. Senator Gorman expects to receive material assistance in this policy from Senator Stone, of Missouri, but it is known that both are candidates for the presidential nomination and there are some who doubt their ability to work in perfect harmony.

An adjournment of Congress is invariably followed by the discovery of errors in legislation and this Congress is no exception to the rule. The first mistake thus far discovered is in the Immigration bill and involves the application of the immigration laws, intended only for the United States, to all the insular possessions. The clause so providing was brought to the attention of Secretary Shaw by your correspondent and Mr. Shaw expressed great surprise at its purport and said he was certain it was contrary to the meaning or intention of Congress. Heretofore the making and enforcement of immigration laws for the Philippines, Porto Rico, etc. has been vested in the Secretary of War, the Philippine Commission, etc.

A provision in the Immigration bill just passed prohibits the selling of liquor in the national Capitol a fact which will doubtless cause much rejoicing among the advocates of temperance. By many, however, it is regarded as doubtful if the abolition of the liquor selling privilege heretofore accorded the House and Senate restaurants will accomplish the good expected of it, as those senators and representatives who use liquor are certain to maintain well stocked buffets in their committee rooms. The proposed addition to the Capitol was stricken from the appropriation bill at the last moment and for it was substituted instructions to prepare a large model of the Capitol as it is proposed to change it.

FOUL BREATH?

DID YOU EVER MEET
A PERSON WITH A FOUL BREATH?

and have them get close to you while relating some good joke? and although you wanted to escape the breath, you could not?

THE CAUSE

is is a disordered stomach and a general bad condition of the blood, possibly a torpid liver was the primary cause. Would you not advise them to do something to get rid

OF THAT BREATH?

Reader, if you are one of those unfortunates with a foul breath, why do you not take action? why do you not see that your stomach is put in order? There is no excuse for it when there is a remedy at hand.

Kinyon's Blood AND Kidney Remedy

Strengthens the kidneys, enabling these important organs to carry off the impurities. Regulates the liver so that it may aid in the digestive operation and keep the bowels active. Tones up the stomach and enables it to properly digest the food so that the body may be nourished and become strong. With these organs all active and strong the system becomes cleansed and the foul breath will leave as if by magic. Do not delay. Act at once.

Miss May Ladd, of Canandaigua, returned to her home Saturday after a short visit with her sister, Miss Sadie Ladd.

Miss Anna McClure, Lester Hessen and Richard Mead attended Prof. Sturges' assembly in Adrian Friday evening.

The Page Fence Giants, the colored team that made Adrian famous in the base ball world, has been reorganized under the old management of A. S. Parsons and J. W. Stevens. During the next season they will tour Wisconsin, Minnesota, Dakota, Nebraska and Iowa.

Much Ado About Nothing.

Joe Lanning's hack horse created no end of excitement Monday afternoon. It seems the 2:30 Detroit Southern train was about twenty minutes late and as Joe had to make the 3:03 Lake Shore, he left the hack at the D. T. & M. depot. Jim, the horse, has many queer notions and much affection for Joe, so when Joe left him to come up town, things began to happen and one of his inspiring thoughts took possession of him. With an affectionate whinney he took a bee-line for town, where his horse instinct told him Joe was. But, alas! His maddened dash for town was suddenly checked. In some manner the lines became entangled in the wheels and the horse and carriage came to an abrupt standstill, this last catastrophe happening in front of Dove Bros. livery barn.

Matters were soon righted and the trip townward again resumed with a driver and at a more moderate pace. Although slightly the worse for mud, Jim welcomed the sight of his master with affectionate whinnies and resumed his day's duties with old time ardor.

Mrs. Samuel Shutts.

The community was greatly shocked to hear of the death of Mrs. Samuel Shutts, who died at her home this morning at 4:30 o'clock. Mrs. Shutts has been ailing for the past twenty years but has always been a patient sufferer.

The funeral will be held from her late home on West Chicago street, Thursday at two o'clock. Rev. W. F. Jones will officiate.

Tragedy Averted.

"Just in the nick of time our little boy was saved," writes Mrs. W. Watkins of Pleasant City, Ohio. Pneumonia had played sad havoc with him and a terrible cough set in besides. Doctors treated him, but he grew worse every day. At length we tried Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and our darling was saved. He's now sound and well." Everybody ought to know it's the only sure cure for coughs, colds and all lung diseases. Guaranteed by C. A. Wright, druggist. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free.

"For Her Children's Sake."

A good sized audience witnessed the production of "For Her Children's Sake" at the New Bradley last Friday evening. The play was one of interest from start to finish and completely carried the house. Each scene was complete in itself and the management can well be congratulated in securing an entertainment of the strength of the one presented by Sullivan, Harris & Woods.

Miss Selma Herman as Edna Kingsley characterized her part in a most creditable manner. Master Clifford and little Marie Lamont won a warm place in the hearts of the audience.

Although shows have been rather close in succession Tecumseh people cannot resist the temptation of witnessing each entertainment as the management have an established reputation of giving to their many patrons the best of the season's plays. Their endeavors are to please all and each successive entertainment goes far to prove this policy.

The company left Saturday for Battle Creek where they gave a matinee and entertainment.

CLUB NOTES.

The Shakespeare Club will meet with Mrs. Charles Kemp on Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

The Mexican Club will meet with Mrs. Hisley Friday afternoon, March 13. Reading beginning at 2 o'clock. Prescott's "Conquest of Mexico." Lew Wallace's "A Fair God."

Monday Club program for March 16:
Our National Music—Mrs. Zimmerman.
Introduction of Slavery into America—Mrs. Deming.
Have we a Folk Song?—Jennie Gillespie.
American Folk Lore—Mrs. Wright.
Readings from Ruth McEnnery Stuart—Mrs. Fisher.
Creole Life in New Orleans—Julia Hicks.

The Monday Club yesterday afternoon enjoyed a departure from the regular program as announced, Miss Helen Anderson kindly taking the work assigned to Miss Haight, "The Great Unitarian Movement in New England." Rarely has it been the opportunity of the club to listen to so clear and logical a treatment of so great and interesting a subject. Miss Anderson handled the topic in a fair and impartial manner and from a historical and literary standpoint. It was a concise and clear explanation of the vital difference between old time Calvinism and modern Unitarianism as expounded by Channing. The paper was given in a delightful manner and was a literary treat which we hope to have repeated some time. Mrs. Finch gave a fine biographical sketch of Channing and Mrs. North treated "Notable Editors of the Eighteenth Century" in an interesting paper. Fitz Greene Halleck was disposed of by Mrs. Temple and Mrs. Deming read an article on Lydia Maria Child. Altogether it was an interesting literary program.

Selma Herman For London.

Selma Herman, the well-known Toledo actress, will make her first appearance in London, England, in May. Her managers, Sullivan, Harris & Woods are perfectly confident that the second of their melodramatic hits will make an equal impression with the first in England. So they have closed contracts for "For Her Children's Sake" at the Adelphi Theatre, London, on May 25 next. Clarence Brune has already gone abroad to arrange for the melodrama's production. England will have the advantage of seeing the "first company" of all those that are presenting "For Her Children's Sake" at the popular priced theatres in America. It is headed by Miss Herman, who, with the twenty-two American actors supporting her, will take ship after their season closes, May 5.—Toledo Blade.

Moving Pictures.

The following notice taken from the Keene, N. H. Sentinal speaks well of the "Moving Picture" entertainment which will be given at the opera house Friday evening, March 13.

Lyman H. Howe's moving pictures were the attraction at the city hall Thursday evening. In spite of the fact that this exhibition was the third Mr. Howe has given in this city since last September an audience equaling those which greeted him on the two former occasions was present.

Is the game of flinch detrimental to health? It is absorbing. It has created divorces: but is it healthy? It has developed what is known as the "flinch cough." Is that deleterious? At Lansing a few evenings ago a mail carrier sat engaged with friends playing the game. He leaned forward and rested his head on the table. It was his turn to play. His companions apprised him of the fact. He made no response. They lifted his head. He was unconscious. Restoratives were applied in vain and death ensued. Some very sincere and good people believe this death a warning. But only a few months ago a Michigan minister was stricken in the midst of his sermon with apoplexy and died shortly afterward. No, flinch is not in itself sinful; but the cheating that some of "the very best people" is "a sin and a shame."—Detroit Tribune.

Two Reading men went to Florida a short time ago. Recently they were in the woods when they saw an alligator, which they lassoed with a rope and snubbed around a tree. It is to be presumed the gator was a female, for Reading men famous the world over at snubbing the fair sex, and it is whispered that they usually catch everything they snubb.—Hudson Post.

There is much opposition here, especially among the farmers, to the proposed division of this judicial circuit. There is less litigation in the county than ten years ago, and there was less then ten years before that time, while the calendar of the circuit court for the coming term is the lightest for twelve years. Leading lawyers of the county are greatly opposed to the division, which looks like a scheme to provide a fat job for somebody.—Detroit Tribune.

Down near Piedmont a man wanted his son to get up early and go to work. The boy had a habit of answering "yessir" and going to sleep again. On this occasion last week, to make no mistake, he called the boy, got the "yessir" and then slid upstairs, turned down the covers and gave the person a good spanking. It happened that on that night the hired girl had been given the boys room. When the tumult was over the old man sat down behind the barn and drafted a written apology to the hired girl.—Sugar City, Colorado Gazette.

A Blissfield man by the present name of Fred C. LaBounty is having his name changed to Fred Payne by the state legislature. It beats all how difficult it is for a man to have his name changed. Why, all a woman has to do to change her name is to say, "T-h-, th-i-s is so sudden!" or "Y-e-s!" and lead her victim up to a minister or justice and that ends the first change. If the change don't suit her she drives Hubby No. 1 out into the cold with the aid of a stove poker, rolling pin or some other hard substance calculated to make dents in a man's physiognomy. A divorce is an easy matter and can be secured by a plea of non-support. This process can be followed out an indefinite number of times until she finds a name that suits her exactly.—Onsted News.

A FITTING TRIBUTE.

A Citizen of Tecumseh Pays a Well-Earned Tribute.

The following public statement of a respected citizen adds one more emphatic endorsement of merit to the scores that have appeared before.

Mrs. E. D. Fryer, who lives in the northwestern section of Tecumseh, says: "I suffered from my kidneys off and on for about two years. During an attack the pain was worse along in the afternoon and I often felt like giving up but I kept on working in misery, for stooping or straightening made my back feel as if it were breaking in two. If I took a slight cold it always settled in my back and in spite of all the remedies I used I could not get relief. Procuring Doan's Kidney Pills at C. A. Wright's drug store I took a course of the treatment. It did more good than all the other medicine I ever used. The pain in my back was quickly relieved. I take pleasure in recommending Doan's Kidney Pills at every opportunity."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents per box. Foster-Milburn company, Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

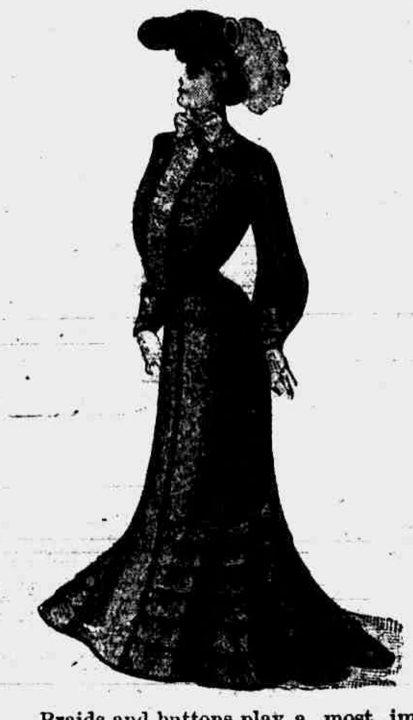
LATEST FASHION NOTES.

Zibeline Cloth Costume.

Simple and rich is the street costume here depicted. It is fashioned of deep red zibeline cloth; the jacket, following the newest mode, is cut without a collar, and has a Directoire front which may be worn open or closed. The fronts, yoke and the wide turn-back cuffs are of heavy white broadcloth, embroidered with black Corticelli filo silk. Black passementerie ornaments and black mohair braid are used for the further garniture.



Braids and buttons play a most important part on gowns. The braids are simply beautiful in their varied design. Black and white silk braids in curved designs are very handsome. One style of braid on a gown is out of the question; at least three, or even five, are seen. Fancy silk braids are combined with different widths of soutache, all carefully stitched down with Corticelli silk. Disks of black silk soutache are used a great deal. Another combination is heavy black silk braid embroidered in chenille.

Thunder Lore.

The natives of the Hawaiian Islands considered thunder as being Mauna Loa's echo from the clouds. This curious notion has crystallized a weather proverb which is now current among many of the white residents of the islands—viz, "It will rain today; Mauna Loa shakes the clouds." In this connection it may be remarked that the early Scandinavian settlers in Iceland believed that there were some mysterious and supernatural connections between the roarings of Hecla and the "angry mutterings of Jove." In England many of the peasantry still plant the house leek—"Jupiter's beard"—on their house roofs as a preventive against thunder, lightning and evil spirits, a custom which reminds one of Charlemagne's edict, "Et habeat quisque supra domum suam Jovis barbam."

Another widespread superstition, and one that has been noted among the tribes and nations from China to England and from Cape Hatteras to the Golden Gate, tells us that if the "claps" or reports of thunder come in even numbers the storm will be of short duration and very mild, but, on the other hand, if they come in uneven numbers, especially if the reports be a series of five, nine or thirteen distinct claps, much loss of life and property will result.

The Gleaners.

The old custom of gleaning in the harvest fields, which recalls the Biblical story of Ruth and Naomi, is not obsolete in England, and in Hertfordshire, Bedfordshire and the neighboring counties as soon as the wheat is gathered in the late days of August there may be seen in the newly cleared fields numbers of women and children diligently picking up one by one the scattered ears and forming them into neat little sheaves, which they carry in their hands until large enough to be bound up. When the daylight fails, all the booty is bound up in cloths and carried home on the heads of the gleaners. At home they thrash it out by hand and sell the grain or use it for their chickens. The gathering of a half peck is usually a full day's work for a child, and often a woman spends a whole day in gathering very little more. Gleaning, however, is looked upon somewhat in the light of a picnic. The mother and children leave home in the morning, take with them food for the day, and stay out in the fields until nightfall.—Detroit Free Press.

BANKS OF MICHIGAN.

Annual Report of the State Banking Commissioner.

Lansing, Mich., March 9.—The report of the state banking commissioner for the last calendar year was submitted to Governor Bliss Saturday. At the date of the report there were 232 state banks and four trust companies under the supervision of the department. During the year twenty-one state banks were organized, one, the Citizens' Savings bank of Benton Harbor, went into voluntary liquidation, and one, the City Savings bank of Detroit, failed and was placed in the hands of a receiver. The Ionia County Savings bank was permitted to reduce its capital from $80,200 to $65,000. To this reduction should be added the decrease caused by the liquidation of the Citizens' State bank, Benton Harbor, $50,000, and the $150,000 shrinkage caused by the failure of the City Savings bank of Detroit, making in all a reduction of $215,200.

The following banks increased their capital during the year: Farmers and Mechanics' bank, Benton Harbor, from $100,000 to $125,000; Brown City Savings bank, from $20,000 to $25,000; State Savings bank, Detroit, from $500,000 to $1,000,000; Sanilac County State bank, Croswell, from $30,000 to $35,000. This makes an increase of $535,000. To this must be added the $790,000 of new capital represented by the twenty-one new banks, the gross increase in capital being $1,325,000. Deducting the total decrease of $215,200 leaves a net increase for the year of $1,109,800.

During the year under report the deposits and loans of the state banks and trust companies of Michigan increased as follows: Deposits, $18,987,672 92; loans, $22,076,190 50. On Nov. 25, 1902, the date of the last report called for the year, the amount of cash in the state banks and trust companies was $31,208,906 70, and in the eighty-four national banks of Michigan $21,385,062 43, making a total of $52,593,969 13.

The dividends paid on capital stock for 1902 amounted to $1,043,051 12, and the aggregate increase in surplus funds was $1,197,232 80, this being for state banks only. The average dividend on capital stock for 1902 was 7.4 per cent, and on combined capital and surplus 5.8 per cent.

The total receipts of the department from all sources during the year were $17,710 11, and the total expenses, including all salaries, $18,124 79. The expense of the department to the state, therefore, was only $414 68.

WITH TERRIBLE FORCE!

Three Grand Trunk Engines Crashed Into Each Other.

Mt. Clemens, Mich., March 9.—Three engines came together with a terrific crash before daylight Sunday morning at the lower end of the Grand Trunk yards in this city.

Engines No. 1041 and 1021 of a heavy freight train, east bound, were shunting cars onto a siding, when engine No. 1195 and way car, running at the rate of twenty-five miles an hour, came snorting out the fog and darkness and dashed into them. The weather was so thick it was impossible to see the length of a locomotive ahead, and neither Engineer Lew Neal nor Fireman John Whiting of No. 1105 saw the engines on the main line until almost upon them.

In the second that intervened before the collision they had jumped, bringing up in the ditch beside the track with only slight injuries. Engineer R. D. Johnson and Fireman F. A. Reed of 1041, the rear engine of the double-header, were less fortunate. They had no opportunity to jump, as the grinding crash was the first intimation of danger. Engineer Johnson was hurled through the window of the cab and when found was lying on the running board of the engine, insensible. The lever had reversed itself with a lurch and penetrated his thigh. Fireman Reed fared even worse. He was caught in the broken timbers of the cab and received internal injuries which it is thought will prove fatal.

The railway officials and other employes are reticent as to the responsibility for the wreck. No semaphore is provided by the railway company at the lower end of the yard to warn approaching trains, and the lack of such a device is believed to be in a measure responsible for the accident.

Masked Men Held Up a Car.

Detroit, Mich., March 9.—Three masked men armed with revolvers held up Fort Wayne car No. 277 at 11:53 o'clock Saturday night. The hold-up occurred on the River road, Delray, in front of C. W. Restrick's lumber yard, and in all nine shots were fired by the highwaymen. Motorman Frederick M. Follett lost a gold-filled watch, but $40 in money, carried by Conductor Gilliman P. Mara, which was evidently the spoil desired, was not secured by the robbers.

Detroit's Ball Team Captain.

New York, March 9.—Manager Barrow of the Detroit team, has concluded a deal by which George Smith, of the New York National club, will join Detroit, playing second base and acting captain. In exchange for Smith, New York is to given "Kid" Gleason, the Detroit second baseman, and former player at the same corner for the Giants.

Victim of Many Accidents.

Owosso, Mich., March 9.—Ben Monroe, who has been a trenchman for fifteen years in this city, broke his right leg Saturday for the sixth time. In addition to that, Monroe has broken his left leg three times and his right hand once. Mr. Monroe has been the victim of cave-ins, and once was buried out of sight but was released by workmen.

Conflagration at Houghton.

Houghton, Mich., March 9.—Another disastrous fire, the second within two weeks, visited this place Saturday, causing a loss amounting to $25,000. The fire originated in the big stone building occupied by Meedman Bros.' steam laundry; R. T. Hooper's pop factory, and Michael's saloon. The laundry equipment was totally destroyed.

One Client Lawyers.

The poverty of briefless barristers is as proverbial as that of the church mouse. It would not be an unnatural mistake to consider a barrister with only one client hardly better off than one with none. But the modern "one client lawyer" is usually a prosperous individual. Said a man well known in the business world some years ago to a friend: "I want a young lawyer to put down at a desk beside mine. I'll familiarize him with my affairs, and then I want him to keep me out of trouble." The counterpart of this lawyer, whose duty it is to act as his own client's ounce of prevention, may be found in the office of many large concerns. He is often connected with trust companies, banks, banking houses, railroad and other transportation companies and large wholesale mercantile houses. When a merchant found himself in a tangle, it was once the custom for him to go to his lawyer for advice. The results were a written "opinion" and a fee. The business man today obtains a lawyer who shall work for him alone. Again, the field of the general practitioner is narrowed.—World's Work.

Asthma

"One of my daughters had a terrible case of asthma. We tried almost everything, but without relief. We then tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and three and one-half bottles cured her."—Emma Jane Entsminger, Langsville. O.

SEVERE ATTACK OF GRIP

Cured by One Bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

"When I had an attack of the grip last winter (the second one) I actually cured myself with one bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," says Frank W. Perry, editor of the Enterprise, Shortsville, N. Y. "This is the honest truth. I at times kept from coughing myself to pieces by taking a teaspoonful of this remedy, and when the coughing spell would come on at night I would take a dose and it seemed that in the briefest interval the cough would pass off and I would go to sleep perfectly free from cough and its accompanying pains. To say that the remedy acted as a most agreeable surprise is putting it very mildly. I had no idea that it would or could knock out the grip, simply because I had never tried it for such a purpose, but it did, and it seemed with the second attack of coughing the remedy caused it to not only be of less duration, but the pains were far less severe, and I had not used the contents of one bottle, before Mr. Grip had bid me adieu." For sale by all druggists.

The Dinner Table.

The woman from New England buys a "tablespread," while her sister from the south buys a "tablecloth." The woman from Nova Scotia orders the servant to "lay the table," while with most of us natives of the United States the command is to "set the table." In the country the hostess says to her guests, "Sit by," when it is time to eat; in town it is "Please sit down;" in the city among the swells there is no further invitation than the announcement of the servant that "Dinner is served."—Exchange.

Effect of Fruit on the Stomach.

The malic acid of ripe apples, either raw or cooked, will neutralize any excess of chalky matter engendered by eating too much meat. It it also the fact that such fresh fruits as the apple, the pear and the plum, when taken ripe and without sugar, diminish acidity in the stomach rather than provoke it. Their vegetable sauces and juices are converted into alkaline carbonates, which tend to counteract acidity.

Safer Too.

Lover—One kiss is worth a hundred letters.

Damsel—Oh, you're very sentimental.

Lover—Oh, no. The kiss, you know, can't be introduced in a breach of promise suit.

Soft and Warm.

The latest device of girlhood is a fancy for stuffing pillows with old love letters. There is one thing about the contents of these pillows that can be depended upon with a marked degree

AHEAD OF LAST YEAR.

Bradstreet Predicts a Prosperous Season In Business.

New York, March 7.—Bradstreet's weekly review of trade today says:

Business is ahead of last year and still expanding. This is indicated by the generally good reports received from eastern and western trade centers, and is confirmed by largest on record February bank clearings and simply enormous railway earnings returns.

Southern trade and crop preparations are dulled or retarded by heavy rains and rising rivers, but it is to be noted that, despite this influence receipts of cotton are heavier than a year ago and had some influence in bringing about a reaction in cotton prices this week.

Special activity is noted by jobbers in all lines of wearing apparel, dry goods, clothing, shoes, millinery, hats and caps, and retail trade in these lines is also expanding.

Active preparations for a heavy season's building are indicated by a large demand for lumber, light and heavy hardware, paints and glass.

Wheat, including flour, exports for the week ending March 5 aggregate 3,491,488 bu, against 2,656,879 last week, 4,095,944 in this week a year ago, and 4,229,528 in 1901. Wheat exports since July 1 aggregate 164,284,134 bu, against 184,262,043 last season, and 138,525,480 in 1900. Corn exports aggregate 3,817,609 bu, against 2,368,939 last week, 352,406 a year ago, and 3,956,137 in 1901. For the fiscal year exports are 44,557,191 bu, against 23,471,396 last season, and 135,736,461 in 1901.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending with March 5 number 171, against 185 last week, 204 in the like week of 1902, 173 in 1901, 208 in 1900, and 189 in 1899.

Glass Factories to Close.

Pittsburg, March 7.—One of the most sensational moves made by the American Window Glass company was inaugurated Friday, when the executive committee of the corporation issued a formal notice to its workmen that after a lapse of seven days and on March 14 all of the factories of the company will close for the season, irrespective of what other companies will do. The moment the factories are closed the company has arranged that a large force of men will be put to work to equip them with the new glass blowing machine.

LATE NEWS IN BRIEF.

Boyd Acquitted.—The trial of former Superintendent of Public Works John H. Boyd of Honolulu, who was accused of irregularities in his accounts, resulted Friday in his acquittal.

World's Record Broken.—The bowling record for a five-man team was broken in Chicago Friday night by the Empires of Chicago, who scored 1,152 points. The former record was 1,141, made in Chicago Feb. 12.

Struck For Beer.—About 250 employes of Tiffany's Glass and Decorating company of New York are on strike because their daily supply of beer has been cut off by the firm. The men say the water is unfit to drink, and that three days ago the company ordered that no more beer be allowed in the place.

He is Still Alive.—The mystery surrounding the strange disappearance, four years ago, of Joseph Trimborne, a wealthy brewer of Great Falls, Mont., who it was thought met with foul play, has been cleared up by the discovery that he is alive in Tasmania, Australia, where he has been living since he dropped out of sight.

Suffocated on Street Car.—Miss Ella Lyde, aged 22, a telephone operator of Pittsburg, was suffocated Friday evening in a street car during the rush hours between 5 and 7 o'clock. She was forced to stand because of the crush, and after riding seven or eight blocks fainted. She expired within a few minutes.

The Bible and Its Contents.

There are no less than 3,566,480 letters in the Bible, 773,697 words, 31,173 verses and 1,189 chapters.

The number of verses in the Bible commencing with A are 12,688; B, 2,207; C, 183; D, 17; E, 207; F, 1,797; G, 209; H, 1,164; I, 1,449; J, 158; K, 65; L, 411; M, 437; N, 961; O, 592; P, 149; Q, 4; R, 127; S, 1,088; T, 5,286; U, 83; V, 87; W, 1,396; X, none; Y, 256; Z, 17.

To read the Bible through in a year means reading three chapters every weekday and five chapters each Sunday.

All the letters of the alphabet are contained in the twenty-first verse of the seventh chapter of Ezra.

The Bible was not divided into chapters, as it is now, until the thirteenth century. Early Hebrew Bibles were marked into sections and verses by means of accents, which served as marks to be observed in the eastern manner of reading. The work of dividing the Bible into chapters has been attributed by some to Stephen Langton. The division into verses was made by a printer of the name of Robert Stephens in 1548 and was adopted throughout all editions.

Quick Relief for Asthma Sufferers.

Foley's Honey and Tar affords immediate relief to asthma sufferers in the worst stages and, if taken in time will effect a cure. J. J. Orr.

The American Language.

"It used to be considered a witticism to ask a man whether he spoke United States," said an English university man at the Lawyers' club the other day, "but there is in fact an American language, distinctive from the king's English not only in idioms and in the use of particular words, but in the clipping of words to save time and breath. On this side of the Atlantic one scarcely ever hears 'I have' and 'you are.' You hurrying Americans say 'I've' and 'you're.' You shorten up 'cannot' into 'can't,' and your purest speakers use 'don't' and 'won't,' and it is almost a universal habit among Americans to clip the 'g' off words ending in 'ing.' Even your professors of English fail to sound the 'e' in 'righteous' and 'courteous' and shorten 'knowledge' into 'knoledge.' I might recite scores of words that are practically shortened by a syllable in usage, and as usage makes language you Americans are gradually constructing a speech that is quite distinct from that form of English which Oxford and Cambridge are preserving with such care."—New York Times.

Falcon Lore.

No one can pretend to any acquaintance with English literature or even with the English language without being aware how deep an impress has been left upon them by the art and practice of falconry. Such words as "haggard," "eyrie," "mews," "cadger," to "lure," to "stoop," to "reclaim," all belonged originally to the falconer's jargon and were thence adopted into common parlance.

A whole host of well worn quotations, including the long misunderstood passage in Hamlet about the "hand saw" (heron shaw), can only be properly explained by reference to the falconer's craft, and several of the most picturesque metaphors used by our best poets derive their virtue from the hawking field.—London Saturday Review.

Had His Money's Worth.

On one occasion when a boarder had devoured almost everything eatable on the table within his reach and when the landlady had supplied him until her strength and patience were well nigh exhausted she suddenly broke out with:

"I shall certainly have to raise the price of your board!"

"Don't think of doing such a thing," he replied. "It is nearly killing me now to eat all I pay for, and should you raise my board and compel me to eat more it will be the death of me."

How About Your Heart

Feel your pulse a few minutes. Is it regular? Are you short of breath, after slight exertion as going up stairs, sweeping, walking, etc? Do you have pain in left breast, side or between shoulder blades, choking sensations, fainting or smothering spells, inability to lie on left side? If you have any of these symptoms you certainly have a weak heart, and should immediately take

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure

Mr. F. H. Oaks of Jamestown, N. Y., whose genial face appears above, says: "Excessive use of tobacco seriously affected my heart. I suffered severe pains about the heart, and in the left shoulder and side; while the palpitation would awaken me from my sleep. I began taking Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and soon found permanent relief."

Urban Longevity.

That the country is the place to acquire and preserve health is a theory that has been exploded by the United States census statistics. We have heretofore been advised to go to the hills and vales, the field and woodland, the lake and river, where there is an uninterrupted prospect and the air of heaven has a free sweep, but now this advice must be changed and the pent up cities recommended for health, if the census authorities are right.

According to the official figures the city has a decided advantage over the rural districts in the matter of human longevity. The average age reached in the cities is 38.2 years and in the country 31.1. There the urban has an advantage of 7.1 years over the suburban. The advantage of pure air in the country is apparently more than offset by sanitary and food advantages in the city.

A Hospitable Heathen.

It was high noon and Monday. Worse yet, it was the thirteenth day of the month. A knock was heard at the kitchen door of the [illegible] mansion. The Chinese servant opened the door. A tramp of long and varied experience accosted him:

"I've been traveling and have played in mighty hard luck," observed the tramp. "I lost all of my money, and now I'm hungry—very, very hungry. Can't you please give me a little bite of something to eat?"

The Chinaman comprehended the situation at once. A benevolent, placid smile spread itself over his entire countenance.

"You likee fish?" he asked of the tramp.

"Yes, I like fish first rate. That will do as well as anything."

"Come Fliday," said the hospitable heathen.—New York Times.

Born and Died the Same Day.

"Born and died on the same day" is true of the following conspicuous men: Shakespeare was born April 23, 1564, and died April 23, 1616. Raphael Segio d'Urbino, the great artist, was born on Good Friday, 1483, and died on Good Friday, 1520, aged thirty-seven. Good Friday is a movable feast, so the day of the month may not have been the same. Sir Thomas Browne, author of "Religio Medici," was born Oct. 19, 1605, and died Oct. 19, 1682. Timothy Swan, composer, was born July 23, 1758, and died July 23, 1812. St. John of God, one of the most eminent of Portuguese saints, was born March 8, 1495, and died March 8, 1550. John Sobieski, king of Poland, who delivered Vienna from the Turks, was born June 17, 1629, and died June 17, 1696.

A "Tragedy."

A Missouri paper gives an account of an amusing little "tragedy" which it claims occurred in its town. A man and his wife were riding home on a street car. He was reading his paper, when another lady got on. The car was crowded, and without glancing up he arose and gave her his seat, receiving a gracious smile in payment. The man's wife immediately got up, gave the bellrope a hard jerk and invited her husband to get off. When he looked around to learn the cause of her anger, he discovered that the woman to whom he had given his seat was his first wife, whom he had divorced two years before. They walked the rest of the way home, and he is still explaining.

An Ingersoll Story.

John W. Mackay once invited Robert G. Ingersoll to visit the Comstock mines. As the cage descended to the furnace heat at the bottom of the shaft of one of the mines Mr. Ingersoll said, gasping for air, "Privately I always believed there was a hades somewhere, but I never dreamed it could be so hot."

A. R. PENNELL WAS KILLED

One of Chief Investigators Into the Burdick Murder in Buffalo—Circumstances Connected With Accident Leave Room For Speculation.

Buffalo, March 11.—More terrible almost than the death of E. L. Burdick was the tragedy that occurred late Tuesday afternoon, when Arthur R. Pennell, one of the chief figures in the investigation of the Burdick murder, was hurled headlong into eternity.

Mr. Pennell was riding in his electric automobile with Mrs. Pennell. They were on Kensington avenue, near Fillmore avenue, skimming along the edge of the Gehres stone quarry, a huge rock-ribbed hole in the ground. Mr. Pennell's hat blew off. The automobile swerved and in some inexplicable manner it leaped over the curb into the abyss below.

Pennell was killed instantly, his head being crushed to an unrecognizable mass. Mrs. Pennell was injured so severely that the surgeons at the Sisters' hospital, to which she was taken, say her chances of recovery are slight.

Two boys saw the tragedy. They were too far away to know positively just how it happened. Mrs. Pennell lapsed into unconsciousness, and hence there can be no true version as to how the affair occurred.

Mr. Pennell left his office in the Austin building at 4:05 o'clock in the afternoon. He went to his home at 208 Cleveland avenue. A friend who called up Mr. Pennell on the telephone about 5 o'clock was informed that Mr. Pennell was in, but that he was just going for a drive. Mr. Pennell himself answered the telephone and said that he would be back between 6:30 and 7 o'clock, making an appointment with his friend for that hour.

It was learned that the matter mentioned in the telephone talk was something he considered most serious and which weighed heavily on his mind. It was in connection with the Burdick murder. Recently Mr. Pennell made the following statement:

"About this case of Burdick. I have told the authorities I went away to New York before the murder, and that I met Mrs. Burdick while I was away. In fact, I saw Mrs. Burdick near New York two or three days before the murder of Mr. Burdick. I came home again Wednesday, the day before the murder. I have told it frankly, and the meeting was a proper one. But they seem determined to drag all this business out in the papers. I would do anything to stop it."

It seems a strange day for a man to take his wife automobiling, in the northeast section of the city at such an hour. Pennell was not a veteran at automobiling. Yet he was an expert at handling the machine and was experienced as to the management.

What was unusual about yesterday's proceeding, according to the maid of the house, was that Mrs. Pennell had always before told her when they would return. "Today, however," said the girl, "when they went out, it was Mr. Pennell who told me. Mrs. Pennell went on out ahead of him, and he came back and called me and said they would be back between 6:30 and 7 o'clock."

Mrs. Pennell has been loyal to her husband through his trying experiences during the last ten days. She frequently said that her faith in him was unshaken and that she would stick to him to the end.

SITUATION GROWING WORSE.

Ice Gorges in the Rivers Threaten to Destroy Bridges.

Grand Rapids, Mich., March 11.—Grand river gives signs of subsiding. About noon yesterday the center of the big dam gave out, and it is feared the entire dam will go, which would close all the water power factories for the summer.

Ice gorges are reported at points above this city, and also at Spring Lake, near the mouth. Ice is reported packed solidly against the Grand Haven swing bridge and fears are entertained for its safety. Two tugs and a large force of men are trying to break up the gorge.

Mendon, Mich., March 11.—The St. Joe river is the highest known for years. There is grave danger that the bridge on Nottawa street and the G. R. & I. railroad bridge will be carried away. The water is several feet above the banks. Several small bridges over Nottawa creek have been washed away.

Grand Haven, Mich., March 11.—Another ice gorge has formed above the toll bridge crossing Grand river. All efforts to break the jam have been futile. In working in the ice last night the tug Bos lost her wheel.

Grave fear is felt for the Grand Trunk and electric road bridges. If the ice comes down with a rush they will be swept into Lake Michigan.

Off For Cuban Waters.

Washington, March 11.—Secretary Moody, Postmaster-General Payne, Senator Hale, Representative Cannon, Representative Foss, Judge James R. Dunbar, of Massachusetts, Joseph H. Pearl of Haverhill, Mass., Mr. Moody's law partner, and Fred L. Fishback, Mr. Moody's private secretary, left here Tuesday over the Atlantic Coast line for a cruise in West Indian waters. In Charleston, S. C., they will embark immediately on the Dolphin and start on their cruise. Senator Proctor of Vermont and Representative Gillette of Massachusetts will join the party in Florida. Key West, Havana, Guantanamo, Santiago, Bahia Honda, Culebra and San Juan, P. R., are some of the points that will be visited. The party will be gone some weeks.

Jackson Soaked For $2,750.

Jackson, Mich., March 12.—A jury has awarded $2,750 to Thomas Harden, who sued the city for $10,000 damages on account of injuries received from a fall on a defective sidewalk. The city may appeal.

YAPLE NOMINATED

By the Democrats for Supreme Court Justice.

BRYAN AT THE CONVENTION

Burt of Saginaw and Abbott of Calhoun Nominated For Regents—Platform Adopted Urges Municipal Ownership and Primary Election.

DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATES.

For Justice of Supreme Court—
JUDGE GEORGE L. YAPLE of St. Joseph County.
For Regents of State University—
WELLINGTON R. BURT of Saginaw. WILLIS J. ABBOTT of Calhoun.

Detroit, Mich., March 11.—By acclamation, the Democratic state convention yesterday afternoon at the Light Guard armory nominated Judge Geo. L. Yaple of St. Joseph as the party candidate for justice of the supreme court. There was no hint of a contest and no other name was presented for the position. With scarcely less effort, Wellington R. Burt of Saginaw, several times a gubernatorial possibility, secured one of the nominations for regent of the university. Burt's appearance as a candidate was the surprise of the afternoon. A mildly conducted fight occurred over the second nomination for regent, Willis J. Abbott, editor of "The Pilgrim," winning out easily over Francis J. Welsh of Kalamazoo and Albert J. Dickson of Port Huron.

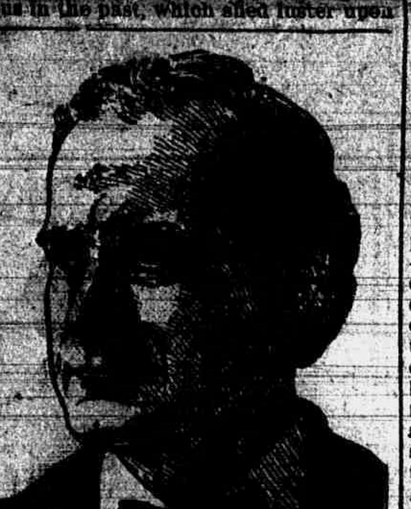
The convention was a remarkable one for Democrats. The presence of William Jennings Bryan and his rousing speech stiffened the backs of the delegates and a platform was adopted which embodied an indorsement of Democracy's past platforms, an appeal for primary election reform, and a biting attack on the Republican judicial convention manipulators.

Resolutions were adopted by a silent standing vote in memory of the late state chairman, Justin R. Whiting. The following is the platform as embodied in the resolutions and presented by F. E. Barkworth of Jackson, chairman of the committee:

Platform They Stand On.

"The representatives of the Democracy of Michigan, in convention assembled, hereby set forth the principles and policy of the party, so far as applicable to the present campaign, as follows:

"We believe that the present condition of the state and nation demands the continued support of every thoughtful and right-minded citizen of those principles of government which made the history of our nation glorious in the past, which shed luster upon the Democratic administrations in its early history, and find expression through the national platforms of the party.



WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN.

"We believe that present conditions demand the immediate application to the affairs of our state of such reform of the primary nominating system that the people shall be the supreme and final arbiters of nominations to office, and to that end we urge immediate legislation, by which primary elections of all parties, for the direct nomination of all candidates, shall be held at the same time and place under the supervision of public officials and regulated by law. But we deprecate the momentary standard of fitness and demand that the support of voting citizens, and not the payment of fees, shall entitle candidates to a place upon the ballot. The passage of the Australian law by a Democratic legislature opened the way to this reform and invites the confidence of the people of the state in the sincerity of this declaration.

"We reaffirm our devotion to the principle of home rule and the use of the initiative and referendum in all matters pertaining to local self-government, including the adoption and change of municipal charters. We are convinced that the need of the initiative and referendum in legislation is constantly making itself more apparent, and that the election of United States senators by direct vote of the people should be at once initiated by the submission of the necessary amendment to the constitution.

Municipal Ownership.

"The recent deplorable condition of the country resulting from the coal strike has challenged imperative attention to the declaration of our last state platform upon the subject of municipal ownership of public utilities, subject to the voice of the people, however, through the referendum, and we reaffirm the position of the party with respect thereto.

"We believe, with the Bar association of the state, that the independence and integrity of the bench are the most important safeguards of popular liberty and individual rights, and we deprecate judicial participation in the manipulating of conventions and the ordinary processes of anti-convention politics. The findings of our courts should be absolutely free from even the suspicion of taint, of personal favor or recognition of political activity, and we urge upon the members of our party the great importance of the principles in the selection of the candidates of the party for judicial positions.

"We invite the earnest co-operation of our citizens, without regard to previous party affiliation, to join us in the endeavor to accomplish these purposes by methods which appeal to the intelligence and patriotism, rather than to the cupidity, of our fellow-citizens."

William Jennings Bryan was the star feature of the morning session of the Democratic convention. To a most enthusiastic audience of 1,000 Democrats the "peerless leader" spoke for an hour, being urged to proceed by his exultant listeners. He was in excellent form and he knew his audience before he proceeded far. After eulogizing the late Justin B. Whiting, he plunged into a remarkably brilliant speech, which for vigor and adroitness was equal to his reputation.

Gaines, Mich., March 11.—The entire People's ticket was elected by majorities ranging from 19 to 24. Following constitutes the newly elected officers: President, W. C. Roper; clerk, Charles Morris; treasurer, C. E. Markley; assessor, J. C. Croope; trustees, two years, George W. Ames, D. M. Atherton, Milton Chatters; one year, Norbert E. Preston.

Northville, Mich., March 11.—About 2880 votes were cast in the village election here. The Abbot machine was used and gave excellent satisfaction. It was a foregone conclusion that the Citizens' ticket would win out, and many voters were so sure of the result that they did not take the trouble to go to the polls. Only one man, the assessor, was elected on the workingmen's ticket. The rest were all reelected and were chosen last year from both tickets. The officers are: Dr. R. M. Johnson, president; T. E. Murdock, clerk; R. B. Pomeroy, treasurer; A. H. Kohler, S. W. Knapp, F. N. Perrin, trustees; W. J. Lanning, Jr., assessor.

Bay City, Mich., March 11.—Entire Democratic ticket elected in Essexville by majorities ranging from 5 to 36, as follows: President, Nicholas E. Ward; assessor, William Felker; clerk, Fereol D. Guindon; treasurer, Michael Dufresne; trustees, Charles Wise, Alex Jolley, Arthur Neering, Henry Paradise. Next council stands five Democrats, one Republican.

Durand, Mich., March 11.—The election in this city was the warmest that has ever been held, there being four tickets in the field. After the polls closed a motion was put to the board by James Stewart to throw out the following names appearing on the Republican and Union-Labor tickets: George McLain, J. L. Van Alstine, Floyd Derham, Thomas Nolan, Fred Hamlin and Fred Brown. In the opinion of the board, "having advised themselves thoroughly before taking action" that they were illegally on these tickets, the Citizens'-Union ticket was elected as follows: President, F. H. Potter; clerk, O. A. Garfield; treasurer, N. J. Howard; assessor, G. E. Hill; trustees, two years, Thomas McGrail, William P. McBride, Fred Hamlin; one year, Fred Brown, Job Naldrett.

Bad Axe, Mich., March 11.—The entire village ticket was elected in Monday's contest. A very large vote was polled and the saloon faction was completely snowed under. Local liquor dealers are feeling rather blue. Officers were elected as follows: President, H. L. Chipman; clerk, George W. Clark; treasurer, Samuel Burgess; assessor, L. J. Lyshness; trustees, James Baldwin, Arthur Dundas and William Rapson.

SALARIES FOR LEGISLATORS.

House Passes Resolution Favoring Payment of $500 Per Year.

Lansing, Mich., March 11.—By a vote of 76 to 10, the house Tuesday afternoon passed a joint resolution reported out by the judiciary committee as a substitute for one introduced by Representative Colby. It provides for the submission to the people of a proposed amendment to section 15, art. 4 of the constitution, fixing the salary of legislators at $500 per annum, without extra pay for special sessions, and cutting out all mileage, free books, stationery and "all perquisites" now accruing to the legislator. It also stipulates that no matters, except those mentioned in the governor's call for a special session, shall be considered at such session. The people will vote on the question on the first Monday of April next.

Representative Robinson's bill, amending the general law relative to interest on judgments, changing the rate from 7 per cent to 5, was agreed to. As the law stands now, a promissory note paying 5 per cent interest would pay 7 per cent on a judgment, and an ordinary contract specifying no rate of interest would also pay 5 per cent after a judgment. Under Robinson's bill, any written instrument would draw the same rate of interest before as after judgment."

Several minor bills were also agreed to, the house working altogether three hours.

The senate did business for the same length of time.

An executive session of forty minutes was held to discuss the Lockerby bill, which provides a fine of $5,000 or five years in prison, or both, in the discretion of the court, for gross indecency by male persons.

Killed by a Car.

Detroit, Mich., March 11.—While attempting to board an Ann Arbor car at Michigan avenue and Sixteenth street, Arthur A. Baumia, aged 16, of 366 Baker street, was struck by an outbound Michigan car and received injuries from which he died twenty minutes later.

Lansing, Mich., March 11.—Governor Bliss has commuted the sentence of William Tullock, sent from Chippewa county to Marquette prison for eighteen months for larceny.

Tragedy in an Ohio Village.

Springfield, O., March 12.—Joseph H. Gibbs and his wife were found by two young boys last night lying dead in their own blood in the main street of St. Paris, a village west of Urbana. Gibbs started out in the evening with the wife of Jim Sheehe. While Gibbs and his companion were passing by the village church Mrs. Gibbs came upon them. Gibbs drew his revolver and shot his wife, killing her instantly, and it is now believed he tried to kill the Sheehe woman. She ran away screaming and Gibbs turned the gun on himself, with fatal results.

Charitable Worker Starved to Death.

Toledo, March 12.—Rev. Charles W. Potter, formerly of Detroit, but for the past six years at the head of the Adams Street mission here, and one of the best known charitable workers in the city, died Wednesday of starvation. While Dr. Potter was surrounded with the good things of life, he was unable to eat any nourishing food because of cancer of the stomach. The ministers of the city will have charge of the funeral.

HELP CORPORATIONS

Bangham's Bill Endorsed By the State Senate.

LETS IN SMALLER CONCERNS

Simons Bill, Raising Salaries of Detroit Police Justices, Indorsed—State Treasurer McCoy Gets Off Easy—Neil Wants Military Tax Cut Down.

Lansing, Mich., March 12.—After a brisk discussion in the upper house Wednesday afternoon the Bangham corporation bill passed by a vote of 20 to 7. The bill is designed to give corporations the widest possible scope for organizing and operating in Michigan, though it is claimed by the father of the bill that it does not go far enough to do any harm. One clause lowers the amount of capital necessary for incorporations from $5,000 to $1,000.

When Senator Goodell asked for the suspension of the rules to place the bill to bond the city of Wyandotte, which came over from the house in the afternoon, on its immediate passage, Senator Scripps objected. He said: "The bill provides for the bonding of the city of Wyandotte for $125,000, between 12 and 14 per cent of the city's assessed valuation. I believe that the bill is a very dangerous one and it should go to the committee on cities and villages for consideration."

The bill was passed.

Without a word of discussion, the senate also passed the Simons bill, raising the salary of police justices of Detroit from $3,000 to $4,000. Simons had intended to try and report the bill out making $5,000 the figure as originally intended, but decided that $4,000 was safer with sure passage than $5,000 with the danger of a debate.

The senate in executive session confirmed Governor Bliss' appointment of General William Hartsuff of Port Huron as a member of the Soldiers' home board.

The house committee on city corporations reported the bill out, with the recommendation that it pass. Had it not been for Representative Robinson of Detroit it would have slid through without a third reading along with the afternoon grist of "purely local bills." Robinson insisted that the bill be read throughout.

Representative Campbell of Gladwin got after DeLisle on the extraordinary bonding limit, and moved that a two-thirds vote of the people be necessary to make the referendum valid. Other minor objections were also made, but the house finally acted favorably upon the bill.

The house also passed, without a dissenting voice, the joint resolution sent over fro mthe senate, relieving State Treasurer McCoy of responsibility for the loss of $75,000 of state funds in the City Savings bank, Detroit. The measure was given immediate effect.

The only bill to be touched on the third reading list was the one carrying an appropriation of $158,600 for the Industrial School for Boys at Lansing. It passed without amendment.

Chairman Batchelder of the house committee on state buildings examined the roof of the capitol with Architect A. Malcolmson of Detroit, and reported that it was in a dangerous condition and was leaking in many places. The report recommended that repairs be made at once to forestall serious accidents. The report was passed. Batchelder says a new roof will be necessary, and the job cannot be done short of $20,000.

Professor Brewster of the U. of M. addressed the judiciary committee of the senate and house in the morning on Senator Cook's bill for the adoption of the Torrens system of land transfer. The professor created a very strong feeling in his audience in favor of the system, but gauged a lot of holes in the particular bill introduced in the upper house. One of his chief objections to it was that more than two years ought to be allowed to expire before titles recorded became incontestable.

Representative Neal is going to make a strong fight to cut down the military tax from 5 to 3 cents per capita. The tax used to be 4 cents, and yielded the military department over $89,000 a year. It takes $80,000 for the annual encampment, as a rule, so the tax was raised to 5 cents. Then the result of a new census brought the total returns to over $121,000. Now congress has passed the Dick bill, by which the national treasury will stand for the entire equipment of the state militia for the encampment, at the request of the governor of any state. Neal says that at 3 cents the military department would get $72,000—more by far than they need. Inspector-General Greene and his brother officers take a different view and are fighting the bill.

The senate committee on the Houghton College of Mines decided to report out within $2,000 of the appropriations asked by the institution. This includes the full sum asked of $55,450 a year for current expenses and $63,180 for a new building for metallurgy.

The house committee on Jackson state prison made its report to the house yesterday and recommended the full amount of appropriations sought by the officers of the institution—$171,435—including $147,000 for a new wing of cells, $10,000 to complete the new kitchen and dining-room, $12,000 for general repairs. The committee on ways and means is still to pass on the appropriations.

The legislative farmers' club met last night. The usual generalities relative to primary election were discussed, when an anti-primary election man suggested that a committee be appointed to "examine the general primary bill now before the house and if it was not satisfactory to draft a new bill." The resolution was passed.

The club also took each man's idea as to how much ought to be appropriated for the St. Louis fair exhibit, and struck the average at $41,000. By this the members will stick.

Danger of Colds and Grip.

The greatest danger from colds and grip is their resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used, however, and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken, all danger will be avoided. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for these diseases we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia, which shows conclusively that it is a certain preventive of that dangerous disease. It will cure a cold or an attack of the grip in less time than any other treatment. It is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

THE CASE AT CANE HILL

(Copyright, 1903, by C. B. Lewis.)

One day a stranger arrived at Cane Hill. He said he was Charles Williams and had $18,000 with which to start a bank. Soon after a dead body was found and identified as that of Williams.

John Carnes was arrested for the murder. He couldn't explain his whereabouts on the evening previous for a good reason. He was robbing a house. Another man suspected of being an ex-convict, Joel Fisher, was arrested, who also could not give his whereabouts on that evening because he was robbing a freight car. It was believed that he and Carnes were partners in the crime.

Still another man was arrested, a single man who kept house for himself. While no money was found, it was argued that he had buried the sum secured from Williams, and for three days more than 100 people were ransacking his house and barn and every foot of his land in hopes to unearth the treasure.

The name of the third party arrested was Black. He employed me to defend him. My first idea naturally was to prove an alibi. He claimed to me that he had not left his house during the evening. Living alone, we had only his unsupported word for this, and by accident I ascertained that he was lying to me. Three different persons had called at his house between 7 and 10 o'clock and found him absent. Then Black made a confession to me. A farmer with whom he had quarreled had a large barn on the farm three miles away, and Black had gone there to burn it. His intentions were bad enough, but the fire he kindled went out, and the barn did not burn. To clear himself of the one he must own up to the other.

As if the case was not complicated enough, the sheriff took another step. He worked at the two men first arrested until they "confessed" that Black planned the whole affair, did the killing and that they only watched to see that he was not interrupted. The prosecution now felt assured that it had a straight case, while I realized that Black must run the gantlet for his life. The sheriff naturally wanted to convict Black, and when Carnes and Fisher were "pressed" they cooked up a very plausible "confession."

I had verified Black's story. I had gone to the barn and found a candle in a box just where he had told me to look for it. I had timed his journey to and fro and found it occupied the interval stated. I had found mud on his boots which had come from a spot near the barn. However, when the case was called in the higher court I was appalled at the strength of the evidence against my client.

I could only prove one thing in defense—previous good character. Black boldly confessed that he had intended to burn the barn and thus accounted for his time, but it only hurt his case. Everybody jumped to the conclusion that a man who would commit arson would not scruple at murder. It was shown that he was hard up financially, that certain men were rather afraid of him, that he had been heard to make dire threats, and they could not have painted him blacker had he been one of the Younger brothers.

On top of all this came the "confession." Carnes and Fisher had occupied the same cell for days and therefore agreed in all the details. They swore to meeting Black just outside the village. They entered the town to look for Williams and found him on the street. Fisher swore that he accosted him and directed him to the mill race, telling him that the owner of the mill wanted to see him. After the murder all went back to Black's house, where the money was to be divided. He had given Carnes and Fisher $50 apiece and put off the division for a week. While neither saw the blow struck nor the body flung into the water, both agreed as to what Black said on the way home. He had told them that Williams seemed suspicious and was about to run away when struck down.

I lost my case, of course. The jury went out simply for appearance's sake and in seven minutes returned with a verdict of guilty. You may ask what had been done to trace Williams. Very little. He had said he was from Chicago. No one knew his full address. The affair had been published in the Chicago papers, but no one had identified Williams as Williams. He seemed to have neither relatives nor acquaintances.

Black was to be sentenced to death, and Carnes and Fisher were to get off with a term in state prison. They had not yet been sentenced when Williams, the man who had been murdered and buried, returned to town as quietly as any other traveler. He left town on the night of the murder at 9 o'clock, going to Milwaukee to see about a bank safe and other things. He was taken ill en route and left the train at a small village where he had relatives. He had been sick with fever for weeks, and nothing whatever was known of the case.

My case was won by the reappearance of Williams. It was for his murder that Black had been tried. Who was the victim? That was never found out, though it was generally believed that he was one of a pair of bad men who had come to Cane Hill with some evil intent and had quarreled with and been done up by his pal. Carnes and Fisher at once went back on their "confession" and accounted for their time on that evening. This gave them away on the robberies, and they were duly tried and landed behind the bars.

M. QUAD.

In the March Atlantic is a paper by John Burroughs which is likely to provoke more than perfunctory comment from all writers and readers of so-called "nature" books. In this paper which Mr. Burroughs has styled "Real and Sham Natural History," he unlimbers some heavy literary guns against a well-known group of writers whom he playfully describes as Natural History Munchausens. With his accustomed interesting style and wealth of anecdote the dean of our real nature writers disposes of divers tall and sentimental animal stories very summarily. These writers who, as Mr. Burroughs thinks, are unable to tell a chipmunk from a red squirrel, may not enjoy his paper, but catholic readers will surely consider it as delightful as it is virile, and a striking example of an ancient and admirable type of magazine article which nowadays is too seldom seen.

Rule yourself; love your neighbor; do the duty that lies nearest to you.

GREAT UNITARIAN MOVEMENT IN NEW ENGLAND

By Miss Helen Anderson.

To understand the New England Renaissance, it will be profitable to recall a few general characteristics of that country at the beginning of the 19th century and the causes that had produced these traits.

Boston was the centre of a region physically isolated. This very isolation developed peculiarities both in the social and individual life of that section. Socially and politically there was going on a strong and steady growth, the social system being based on education, public service and the ministry.

The result of this geographical isolation was shown most markedly in the thought and feeling of the people, originating in the intense convictions of their Puritan ancestors. The dominant class being the clergy, the outcome is the logical one for the clergy were stern grim Calvinists, who held not to the moderate Calvinism of the present day which, generally speaking, implies the absolute sovereignity of God and departs from Calvin's doctrine of unconditional election and denial of freedom of the will. They might best be termed strict Calvinists.

So, for nearly 200 years, New England itself, not only isolated from the world but made up of isolated communities, was suddenly transformed into an organic whole. Railroads, the development of a foreign commerce and home manufactures made the flood tide of intellectual life coincident with its material prosperity. Everywhere a new spirit was rife. Religion developed Unitarianism; philosophy, transcendentalism; politics, oratory; and literature, a school of the purest letters ever appearing in this country.

This brings us up to the Unitarian movement itself, which was one of the large factors in the New England Renaissance and had the most far-reaching results in liberalizing human thought.

It is as a religious movement more than a sect or group of doctrines that Unitarianism has been influential. It has been at work with an ideal spirit in the name of Toleration, Liberty and Free Inquiry and came as a balance wheel to extreme Protestantism. It was briefly a great movement to clarify the world of thought after "the word-heaps have become so vast and high that only the learned can follow the subtile word-trimming and fitting" which theologians have built to defend, not their religion, but their theology.

So, beginning as a protest against the rejection of reason, Unitarianism stood for three main principles.

I. The right and duty of everyone to exercise his freest thought on the highest theme.

II. The right and duty to make reason the final test of truth.

III. The superiority of character to creed, of conduct to belief.

In 1809 Wm. Ellery Channing gave the following: "Calvinism teaches that

I. In consequence of Adam's sin, God brings into life all his posterity wholly corrupt * * and wholly inclined to all evil and that continually.

II. All mankind, having fallen in Adam, are under God's wrath and curse and so made liable to all miseries in this life, death itself, and to the pains of Hell forever.

III. From this ruined race God * * has elected a certain number to be saved by Christ, not induced by their faith or good works, but wholly by his free grace and love.

IV. The rest of mankind he is pleased to pass over and to ordain them to dishonor and wrath for their sins * * In short, he leaves the rest to the corruption in which they were born, withholds the grace necessary to their recovery and condemns them to "most grievous torments in soul and body without intermission in hell fire forever."

Such is Calvinism as gathered from the most authentic records of this doctrine * * A man of plain sense, whose spirit has not been broken to this creed by education or terror, will think it is not necessary for us to travel to heathen countries to learn how mournfully the human mind may misrepresent the Deity. This last was the keynote to the whole religious revolt.

From the nature of the case Unitarianism has never formulated a creed. It has, however, tacitly accepted certain ideas set forth by Channing and I shall merely give the line of argument set forth in his famous sermon on Unitarian Christianity, delivered in 1819 and which had for the text: Prove all things; hold fast that which is good.

Human nature is essentially good. Man is made in God's image and is to follow the light within him. Man must start in religion from his own soul. The ideas of power, reason, love, rectitude come from within, from the action of our own spiritual nature.

The greatest source of light is Christ. Whether he was literally the Son of God makes no difference. He was the most perfect of men and in earthly life avoided damnation. So can we. Do you find your friends on the whole damnable or, in spite of their faults and errors, meriting eternal mercy? Would you be in a happy frame of mind if you could send any of them to Hell? Neither would a just, loving Father and justice and love are the two attributes most spoken of in presenting the idea of God today. If all do their best, what is there to fear.

So Unitarianism insisted on the good in our natures as opposed to Calvinism which insisted that all were born in sin. "For a dogmatic dread, was substituted an illimitable hope." Christ was needed as an Example, not a Redeemer. Evil and sin were real but trusting to a merciful God they were believed to be passing shadows.

Unitarianism had little concern with mystic dogmas and believed in a rational study of the Bible. The historian says that a more astonishing departure from ecclesiastical Christianity had never been phrased. In the last of the 18th century a number had begun to relax dogmatically, but there was never any formal break, and this is one of the very remarkable features of the whole movement.

In 1785 Dr. Freeman, of King's Chapel, revised the Anglican Prayer Book and greatly modified the dogma of the Trinity. This has been said to mark the beginning of Unitarianism in Boston. In 1795 Harvard college began its use of the King's Chapel liturgy and in 1805 became avowedly Unitarian.

In Winsor's Memorial History of Boston there is a list of Unitarian ministers in the town up to 1875. Any knowledge of these personalities will reveal one fact, that for purity and nobility these men were pre-eminent. The great moral beauty of these leaders, together with their attractive theology effected a very rapid conquest of the whole social structure of Massachusetts. All who attained any great literary distinction was either a Unitarian or under Unitarian influences. Creative energy, as one person sums it up, was declared among those who believed themselves made in God's image.

Such representatives of our highest and best—Franklin, Lincoln, Hawthorne, Bancroft, Motley, Horace Mann, Agassiz, Helen Hunt Jackson, Emerson, Holmes, Lowell, Longfellow, Edward E. Hale and many more masterly minds—were Unitarians.

A religion of such people is worthy of attention and who can measure the leaven they have put into the great mass of superstition and intolerance? We have all been made better by their works and writings and imbibed consciously or unconsciously, a spirit that is tending, slowly, perhaps, but surely, toward a broad, deep, national religion. I leave you now to infer the importance of this movement.

All Stuffed Up

That's the condition of many sufferers from catarrh, especially in the morning. Great difficulty is experienced in clearing the head and throat.

No wonder catarrh causes headache, impairs the taste, smell and hearing, pollutes the breath, deranges the stomach and affects the appetite.

To cure catarrh, treatment must be constitutional—alterative and tonic.

"I was afflicted with catarrh. I took medicines of different kinds, giving each a fair trial; but gradually grew worse until I could hardly hear, taste or smell. I then concluded to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and after taking five bottles I was cured and have not had any return of the disease since." EUGENE FORBES, Lebanon, Kan.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Cures catarrh—it soothes and strengthens the mucous membrane and builds up the whole system.

LITERARY NOTES

The March McClure's has another capital little story of an East Side school in New York, by Myra Kelly, "Love Among the Blackboards." English as she is spoken by the second generation of the New York ghetto must be a wonderful compound, but Miss Kelly has a right Irish gift of mimicry, and one feels that her reproduction of it is the real thing. The story stands out in a number full of excellent fiction.

In a paper by Mrs. Sara Yorke in the March Lippincott's Magazine some present day abuses are lightly pointed out, interspersed with anecdotes. The title is "Intellectual Communism" Eben E. Rexford gives sound advice to cities as well as villages in his article entitled "Rural and Village Improvement Socities." No magazine of the month can make a better showing of verse than Lippincott's. The contributors are Marie VanVorst, Florence Earl Coates, Chas. McIlvaine, Hilton R. Greer, Charles Francis Saunders, Agnes Lee, Alonzo Rice, Alden Charles Noble, Albert Bigelow Paine and William Lucius Graves. The "Walnuts and Wine" department follows the substantial feast, as it should, and the number closes hilariously.

In the Review of Reviews for March Mr. Walter Wellman tells just what is proposed by the directors of United States corporation in their plans for profit-sharing and the distribution of stock among the employees, and also describes in detail the results already achieved, so far as the matter of stock investment is concerned. During the month of January the 25,000 shares of the corporation's preferred stock offered under the plan announced at the beginning of the month were subscribed for more than twice over. That is to say, 27,633 employees subscribed for 51,125 shares of stock. This remarkable success has attracted the attention of the entire industrial world. Mr. Wellman's article is the first complete and authentic account of the Steel Corporation's innovation to be published.
